PROBLEM NO. 85. BY JAMES WYLLIE, CHAMPION OF THE WORLD.

game illustrates this, it was hinted to him that Barker would defend the second double corner with the 18-14 break and a line of play was prepared for him foreing while into the THE FIVE DOLLAR RATE.

There Shall Be Left No Room to

that Barker would defend the second double corner with the 18-14 break and a line of play was prepared for him forcing white into the following confined situation: Black (Reed) 5.18, 19, kings 24, 51, White (Barker) 21, 22, 24, Kings 6, 15, Reed to play, and the advice tendered was, "you cannot win by trading off, so force the draw by see-sawing from 31 to 27 and 57 to 31," but he traded off 34 to 20 and Barker won, as in end game No. 8. The lost game can only be charged to er-ratic playing and disdain of advice. His faults as a match player are impatience of restraint, refusal to accept advice (quali-fied, of course, by his superior judgment) over-confidence in his ability, and failure to select pre-determined lines of play and sticking to what he has previously exam-ined. When our friend Reed has corrected these faults, he will, in my judgment, be the greatest player now alive, as he is cer-tually the most gifted and a worthy suc-cessor to the incomparable and immented Yates. Barker, on the other hand, is the beau ideal of a match player. Patient, pafis-taking, every move carefully considered and accurately timed, his lines of play care-fully prepared beforehand, and when a new move is spring upon him, if there is any possibility of making a move that will fetch the game into a path with which he is familiar, he will make that move, rather than thread the mazes of an urknown route, by a stronger move thst would iand him irre-vocably in new and untried paths. As a match player Barker is side, reliable and never erratic; he wins matches by his sub-orination to the advice of his "concher," aided by his own keen insight into the pos-sibilities of the magic squares; seldom hril-liant he can upon occusion be original meaning his briends by his steady, machine-like play, and scanning his long list of victories —over Reed four times, Priest more than once, Martin Smith and a drawn result with Wylife-the observer is irresistibly iorced to the conclusion that he gains victories by treatment through October. All patients applying for treatment before November 1 will be treated for $5 a month and all medicines furnished free, each month's treatment, including medicine, to cost $5 UNTIL CURPER UNTIL CURED.

The Time Required.

It should take from two to four months to cure catarrh, providing the patients follow regularly and faithfully the directions as to medicines and treatment given by the physicians, and recovery is not interfered with the contraction of any fresh disease This does not apply to those cases in which catarrh has been neglected until it has reached the lungs and resulted in consumption.

> PART IL-REVIEW OF THE MATCH FOR THE AMERICAN CHAMPIONSHIP.

Last week we gave a review of the play of Last week we gave a review of the play of the match. This week we give a critical re-view of the two great players; their attitudes and style of play, as they sit facing each other. A notable difference is seen in their style of scanning the ever-changing prob-lems arising for scrutiny and solution. Harker sits bolt upright, arms folded across his chest, toes resting on the floor, heels his chest, toes resting on the floor, heels raised about half an inch therefrom, knees raised about half an inch therefrom, knees close together; rigid, motionless, save for the regular heaving of his cleast; a monu-ment of patience, immobility and iron reso-lution. Thus, he sits hour after hour, never removing his eyes from the board until the last move has been made and the game has been decided. Reed, on the other hand, is Barker's ante-type. He barely ever main-tains the same attitude for two consecutive minutes. He crosses his legs, feels uneasy, and thrusts them under the table: lies back in his chair and scans the position, with the side of his nead to the board, rests his elbow side of his head to the board, rests his elboy on the table, the point of his chin resting in the hollow of his hand, gets absorbed in what he sees and leans forward, both arm

what he sees and leans forward, both arms resting on the table; is satisfied that he has solved the position correctly, makes the move and nonchaiantly looks around to smile recognition to some newly-arrived triend or acquaintance. Probably the strength of each player was never more accurately gauged nor more apply stated than in a chance remark by E. W. Crowell: "Barker is a student, Reed is a genius. That's the difference between them." Reed, confident that his marveloos powers of perception make him the peer of any player, Reed, confident that his marvelous powers of perception make him the peer of any player, devotes but little time to study and prepar-ation. Seldom knows what line of play he shall adopt until his antagonist has indi-cated the lines of play which must be fol-lowed, or if he has predetermined on adop-tion of stated course of play on any given opening he is spt, when the play has reached the decisive point, to change his mind and branch out on a path not previously con-sidered. The result is brilliant end game play, sometimes erraticism, but not modern match play. This has been illustrated dur-ing the progress of the match just ended. The ninth game may be cited as an example. In examining this opening previous to ins In examining this opening previous to its being drawn he decided that at the sixbeing drawn he decided that at the six-teenth move he would adopt a riven line of play leading to a difficult end game for black. When the opening was drawn and the decisive point reached he changed his mind and took a new move, a neat draw resulting, but what of the previously propared play? Energy wasted, that's all. He is nerrously impatient of restraint and loses games be-cause of his disdiin of advice as to tacties in match play, even when rendered by his best friends and sincerest well wishers. The eighth CHECKER ITEMS OF INTEREST. We announce with sorrow and regree the death of A. J. Dunlap, from typhoid fever. The long rest we hoped for in his retirement has been cut short, and we desire and hope that the problem which we gave him to solve, that of entrance into an inheritance incorruptable and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, wassolved by him, and that he has entered into that rest that remaineth for the people of God. His death took place on Wednesday, September 30, just 61 days from the time he laid down his pen as draughts editor of the Thrf. His sorrowing family has our deepest sympathy in this sad hour of bereavement.

770 622 103 6 A very characteristic story of the world's champion was told us here by a gentle-man, whose mother-in-law lived in Carmin street, near Sixth avenue, New York City. When Mr. Wyllie made his first American tour he made his headquarters with Mr. T. On going out one very wet morning Mr. Wyllie requested the lady to bring him a I cent postage stamp. Unfortunately, in the midst of her shopping, she forgot to bring back the desired stamp, but she offered the old man one 2-cent stamp to put on the paper he wished to send away: but, with his characteristic views of economy, he would not waste a cent in that way. He put on his cont and took an umbre hand went to the post officie in the midst of a heavy rain. In all it took him one hour to save that I cent.

MELBOURNE'S PROPOSITION.

He Promises to Water Western Kansas for 10 Cents an Acre.

GOODLAND, KAN., Oct. 9 .- Last night a nass meeting of citizens was held, and Melbourne, the Australian rain maker, was asked to submit a proposition for watering the 40 counties in Western Kansas. His proposition was to water the Western 40 counties at 10 cents for each cultivated acre. There are about 2,000,000 acres in these counties cultivat d this year. Leading attorneys in the State say that a tax could be levied under the law passed last winter for this purpose.
