A COUPLE OF SPOOKS

Stalk About the Confines of Windsor Park These Nights.

A COLORED MAN SEES ONE GHOST,

And the Whites of Ilis Eyes Turn Black Through Fear of the Specter.

STRANGE DEATHS IN THE VICINITY

The ghost walks in Windsor Park these nights, it is numerously said, and some people who are required to pass the park after nightfail feel sort of eerie and walk very rapidly. Windsor Park has been a favorite resort this season and its proximity to West Bell evue has been somewhat annoying to some citizens who do not care for pienies, especially those at which beer is sold, or attendants carry pocket pistels, so some of the people down there are rather inclined to rejoice that a disembodied spirit has become the guardian angel of the park, its presence having a tendency to calm some unruly spirits in the

GHOSTS THAT ARE WELCOME.

The people say the min has fallen on the just and the unjust in the park, and the shades of night have fallen on a considerable proportion of the tough element that sometimes makes night hideous, which experimes the same of plans why they, the quiet people, like hosts for a change,

The genesis of this spook, or these spooks The genesis of this speak, or these spoods—there are supposed to be a pair of them—is not definitely known. Some time ago Patrick Manning fell out of hed and was mysteriously killed, and the dead body of another man was found in the vicinity of the park and some "spiritualists" down that way draw conclusions from these facts, it is not the park and some "spiritualists" down that way draw conclusions from these facts. It is said that a number of people have felt the brush of spectral pinions and have experienced strange ghostly sensations toward e small hours of the morning, but only one person has had ocular proof of a supernaturvisitation. This person is a colored man n the employ of a gentleman named Brad-A few nights since he, while walking through the park, experienced a queer sen-sation, which grew on him until he became thoroughly frightened, and looking back he saw a specter of horrid mien stealthily and silestly gliding behind him.

BEAT THE GHOST'S TIME.

The man quickened his pace and so did the specter. His lengthened chin, his turned-up snout. His eldritch squeel and gestures were horrifying, and the colored man was s frightened that the whites of his eyes turned black, so that only a ghost could see him; but it could, and white it did not seize him, kept close to him and did not show the hydrophobic fear that possessed the witches that pursued Tam O'Shanter, but glided over rivulets as unconcernedly as over the

The condition of the colored man since then is said to be extremely pitable. No sooner is the sable pall of night spread o'er the earth than his distempered vision peoples earth, air and sky with "ghosesses" manumerable. No somer does he full asleep than a spirit passes before his face and the hair of his flesh stands up. It is true there are some people who have sufficient bravery at high moon to attempt to cast, doubts as to he veritableness of the apparition, but some of those would-be scaffers are noticed to be more respectful at night, when they show a disinclination to discuss the subject.
