Great care will be taken in the handicapping, so that every man will have an equal chance of winning. A stop watch will be given to the first and a medal to the second man in each event.

TWO TRAINMEN BURNED TO DEATH.

Fate in Eight of All.

STEUBENVILLE, Oct. 16 .- The heavy fog hat overhung the Ohio river bottom was the cause of an awful accident, on the Panhandle at Mingo at 5 o'clock Friday morning, in which two men met the most horrible death that man can suffer, being burned to ashes in the sight of aid that could not release them from their fate. Aside from these two deaths the casualties were immaterial, five persons being slightly injured. The first section of Panhandle passenger No. 2, eastbound, Paul Rhodes, of Columbus, conductor, and David Obeny, of Pittsburg, engineer, collided with a westbound freight on what is known as the gauntlet, one-half mile west of Mingo. At this point the space is too narrow for a full double track, and the inside rails are so close together that trains never pass, but are run by electric signals. There is also a cross-over switch for the bridge, which has but three rails on it. This morning the con-ductor and engineer of the eastbound passenger train said the signal was for them to go ahead, while the man who has charge of the tower declares that the signals were all right for the freight to move.

THE MOMENT OF THE CRASH.

However, this all may be, both trains ran on, both running on the gauntlet, and they came together with a crash. The engine and two gondola cars on the freight were smashed into smithereens and took fire. The engine, baggage, express and postal cars on the passenger were also crushed and all piled up in an awful wreck. The remainder of the passenger train was made up of two postal and vestibuled sleeping cars, and the passengers in them scarcely felt the shock of the collision. The engineers and firemen jumped and all escaped injury. The men burned to death were William Marshall, passe ger brakeman, and Joseph Vestner, an express messenger, both of Columbus. Marshall was in the baggage compartment and Vestner was in the ex-press compartment. They were both so wedged in that it was absolutely impossible for them to get out and they were burned in sight of fellow men, whose every effort availed naught.

As soon as possible after the accident the door of the express car was broken open, but the passage was blocked by piles of boxes wedged so tightly and about Vestner that they could not be got out, and while the men still worked the car was fast being consumed by the fire consumed by the fire.

FIRE DOES ITS WORK. Almost as soon as the doors were broken open the whole inside of the car was a mass of flames, and the work of destruction of

The baggage, mail and express was all burned, including 23 bags of mail, three of which were registered letters. Ottis Yarnell, a postal clerk of this city, was de-failed to take charge of the mail saved from the fire, there being several sacks intact and a number only partially burned. The wreck was on the scene of the terrible collision in August, 1878, when a westbound passenger and an east-bound freight collided with terrible execution, 14 persons being killed outright and one of the 40 injured dying shortly afterward. It was also near here that Vice President McCullough and John G. Saxe, the poet, were injured in the winter of 1875. Saxe was so seriously hurt that he finally died of his injury.

Linconville, Crawford county, was brought before United States Commissioner Grant to-day by United States Marshal Barring for a hearing, charged with operating with N. B. Lowe, the green goods man who was arrested last week at Corry. The victim, Mr. Clarke Sweatman, Lake Pleasant, swore that Lowe, S. P. Bisbee and E. E. Lathrop got $500 out of him. Bisbee loaned Lathrope the money to make the investment with Lowe for some goods, and Lathrop indorsed for Sweatman, but after Sweetman bought the sawdust he got some of his friends to seize the property and escaped Bisbec's judgment. Lathrop says that Lowe got over $10,000 out of the farmers and others in the vicinity of Corry before he was captured. Lathrop owns a farm in Erie county. The green goods men have been very successful in the county this fall. Lathrop was taken to Scranton to-day.

Synod of the Presbyterian Churches of Pennsylvania and West Virginia in this city to-day the complaint of Rev. T. H. Nimmo against the Pennsylvania North Presbytery, and the complaint of Charles E. Craven against the Chester Presbytery, were referred to the Judiciary Committee. Reports were heard from the colleges. A motion was made that the Synod attend the installation of Dr. Warfield as President of the Lafayette College in a body, but there was opposition to this, and the question estimates that from $7,500 to $8,000 will be required to pay the debts and relieve ministers who have applied for help, but who have not been considered owing to the lack of funds. One hundred and thirteen churches were supplied with pastors through the instrumentality of the co tee, and 1,103 persons were added to the Church through the same channel. To satisfy the appeals for next year it is esti-mated that $17,000 will be needed. The committee recommended that a woman's auxiliary be organized to co-operate with the committee in the work of raising this amount. Rev. J. M. McJunkin, of Pittsburg, Corresponding Secretary of the Sus-tentation Committee, reported that in the fiscal year 1889-90 94 applications had been made for the relief and that $18,393 had been granted to aid needy churches. and the question as to who is to get the money is now before the Auditer.

The questions arising here are different from any heretofore growing out of the flood. The heirs of Mrs. Hoffman and those of her children claim the money, but there are no direct heirs on either side, the claimants being only what the law calls collateral heirs. The question of the disposition of the property is whether Mrs. Hoffman or her children died first. Of course, if the children died first the money will go to the heirs of the woman, while the contract would be a supported by the contract of the course. the contrary would be the case if any one of the children survived her for but a moment. The principle in law, that the strongest is supposed to survive the longer in a common disaster, is hard to apply here. Charley, the oldest of the boys, was 17 years of age, and the attorneys naturally argue that he would survive his mother. Direct evidence will also be offered as to the relative time of their deaths by persons who saw them in the flood and saw some of Explorer Bryant Returns From His Expedition to Labrador.

HE SAW A MAMMOTH CATARACT.

The Story Told of a Difficult Trip Well Rewarded.

WONDERS OF THE ROCKY PENINSULA

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 16 .- Mr. Henry G. Bryant, of No. 1227 North Broad street, arrived home yesterday from a trip of exploration to Labrador, by which he has successfully settled the vague theories that have been affeat in regard to the Falls of the Grand river-a stream that flows from the vast tablelands of the interior, discharging itself into the head of Hamilton Inlet. Mr. Bryant has accurately measured the Grand River Fall and has proved it the largest in the world. It has a drop at its highest point of 316 feet, thus exceeding Niagara by 152 feet. Mr. Bryant, who is a lawyer by profession and an ardent sportsman and traveler, some time age read a fugitive newspaper article in regard to the Falls. In 1888 Mr. R. F. Holme, a young Englishman, attempted to reach them, and failed through want of provisions. Mr. Bryant heard of this, and, his curiosity excited, decided that he, too, would make the attempt. He succeeded although previous to last summer the falls had been seen by only two white men—em-ployes of the Hudson Bay Company.

PREPARATIONS FOR THE JOURNEY. In order to obtain accurate surveys of the country he intended to traverse, Mr. Bryant associated with him Prof. Keneston, the Corresponding Secretary of the Washington Geographical Society and the engineer who made the preliminary surveys of the Cana-dian Pacific Railroad. The two made careful preparations, and left New York on June 3 lset, arriv-ing at St. Johns, Newfoundland, on July 6. Here they were detained ten days awaiting the steamer Curlew, upon which they finally embarked on July 16, reaching North West river, via Rigolet, on July 27. They spent a week at Rigolet endeavoring to obtain Indian guides, but the mountaineer tribe they located superstitiously believe that any one who beholds these mysterious and dreadful falls—the abode of awful demons-will die immediately.

A DIFFICULT JOURNEY. Failing to obtain the aid of the Indians the travelers engaged a sturdy Scotchman, named Montague, and an Esquimaux. With a canoe and a river boat in which to carry provisions and equipments, this party of four left the mouth of the Grand river on the 3d of August. By the 27th they had ascended 200 miles. They were compelled to drag their boats almost the entire distance, so swift was the current. This dragging with a towline, "tracking" as it is technically called, was most difficult and dangerous work, owing to the thick forest growth and the precipitous character of the river's

At the head of the canoe navigation they encamped, stored their provisions and struck off into the interior, following an indistinct Indian trail, and carrying their cance with them. After crossing seven lakes and the intervening portages, they abandoned their canoe for the time being, forsook the Indian trail, and carrying on their backs the necessary provisions, mathematical instruments and blankets, entered a pathless willierness. After two days travel, with a compass as their only guide, they reached the Falls and their hardships were ended. The sight was most magnificent and sufficiently rewarded them for all the danger and troubles they had undergone.

A SUPERB FALLS. Over the great chasm into which the river plunges, a column of mist rises to a great height, in which the sunshine displays a most beautiful rainbow. The roar is deafening, and the travelers could hear it from a istance of 20 miles. Half a mile above the are not inferior to those of Niagara itself. The banks of the river gradually narrow, and, at the third fapid, the width does not exceed 150 feet. The water, compressed into this narrow gorge, rises into great cones and leaps with overwhelming force into the depths below. The height of the fall was found, by accurate measurement, to be 316 feet. At great peril Mr. Bryant managed to descend he precipitous bank to the bottom, and obtained aneroid readings. This was the most dangerous feat of the whole journey. Prof. Kenaston took careful measure ments of the rapids and falls, and also upon he return trip made a compass survey of he river. Mr. Bryant obtained many fine photographs of the falls from various points, and kept a record of the meteorological observations during the entire journey. The distance from the falls to the mouth of the river is 250 miles. The party obtain ed 200 specimens of the Flora of the try through which they passed, and also made a large geological collection. Num-bers of black bears were seen, and two were shot. Spruce partridges and wild geese were slaughtered in abundance.

THE RETURN TRIP.

Upon the return trip the descent of Grand river occupied only seven days; the ascent had taken a month. Ryolet was reached on September 22 and Indian Harbor on the on September 22 and Indian Harbor on the 24th. The party arrived at St. Johns upon the 26th. Mr. Bryant, aided by Prof. Kenaston, has solved a most important geographical problem, and has made a solid addition to our previous limited knowledge of Labrador. He deserves the highest praise for his cour-age and perseverence, as also does Prof. Kenaston for the able manner in which he assisted his comrade. Both gentlemen have returned in excellent health, and are none the worse for the great dangers and hardships they have encountered. The greatest interest in their enterprise is felt through-out the country, and their disc very will be hailed with satisfaction everywhere.

He had many followers in Arabia, and soon pos-sessed himself of a large part of that coun-try, and was acknowledged by a number of Finding success impossible and deeming escape hopeless, he poisoned his attendants in a banquet and leaped into a well or cistern which had been partly filled with destructive acids. When the conquerors forced a way into the castle they searched in vain for him or his body, the latter having been en-tirely dissolved by the corrossive fluids. The secret was discovered by the confession of one who had beheld the preparations for suicide: but in some parts of Arabia there are still persons who believe that Mokanna

There isn't a good impersonator of Chinese characters worth talking about. Charles Parsloe is the best who ever tried to counterfeit the Mongolian, but even he is not accurate. His voice is too harsh and he fails to grasp the peculiar intonations of utterance which all Chinamen use. A real clever actor who could imitate a Chinaman's voice and gestures would make a fortune. Lots of actors have studied the Chinese character as a possible role in which to star, but none of them have ever succeeded. It is also a singular fact that no real Chinaman has portrayed a Chinese character on

That Fleming's Old Export WHISKY,

Employed in the form of inhalation, it is, he considers, of first importance in the management of the disease, though he also employs internal medication. His method of procedure in cases of inhalation is to pour the vinegar into a pan, and then put in the pan and that the company adhere bricks or flat irons heated in the stove. The room thus soon becomes filled with a cloud of acetic vapor. A German doctor reports the use of etherization with good results in
