Manufacturers Agree That Coke Ovens Give Good Gas, But

DOUBT ITS CARRYING QUALITIES,

M. B. Smith Explains Further the Details of His Discovery.

M. E. Smith Explains Further the Details of His Discovery.

COMBINATION OF TWO GLP PROCESSES

The plan of Eagineer Smith given in vesterday's DISPATCH by which the escaping gas of coke owens can be utilized as full was the chief theme of conversation among manufacturers yesterialy. M. B. Smith was seen and spoke still further on the subject. He said:

"Further investigation of my process for utilizing the bi-products in the manufacturer of endse will show that it is a combination of two well-known processes. One is the Siemens regenerative gas furnance, which is now being used extensively by the iron, said and glass manufacturers of the world. The Copee coke oven is unlike the Varieth of the Copee coke oven is unlike the World. The Copee coke oven while the world that the form the world. The Copee coke oven is unlike the World. The Copee coke ov

This artificial means needed, he said, for some time to come, as the Philadelphia Company expect to have more gas this winter than for year.

NOT A PIXEO GAC. A. B. Pally, Superingender of the Wheeling Natural Gas Company, had this to say: "No doubt there is a great deal of good material wasted in making coke, but I am afraid it wouldn't pay to use the gas for fuel purposes. First the gas is not fixed, and is changing all the time by its own density. Under some conditions it becomes a liquid. It would repuire constant pressure to distribute it, and is would necessitate expensive pressure machinery. As economy is the first point be considered in a fuel, you see it would be impracticable. The gas from coal is usually earbon monexide, a very poisonous, explosive and dan-gerous fluid. It would be in the form of menoxide te-day, but nebody could tell what it would be six months from now. Then it would likely be carbonic dioxide, or come other noxious gas. Where it can be plied directly from the ovens and used at once, then it is all right and works well. Jones & Laughlin utilize the gas from their oke ovens, but they never allow it to stand. It is burned shortly after it is made."

WOOL BOUND TO GO UP.

Mr. McDowell Explains How the Price Dropped Under the Tariff.

John McDowelli. President of the State Board of Agriculture, passed through the city yesterday afternoon on his way home to Washington from Clarion, where he at tended a meeting of the board. Mr. Me-Dowell is also ex-President of the State Wool Growers' Association, and divides honors with Judge Lawrence and David Harpster, of Ohio, for having the wool tariff advanced. When asked yesterday how he accounted for the low prices of wool

"I know Major McKinley has been asked that question by farmers many times on the stump this fall. I remained at Washington last winter for six weeks looking after the interests of the wool growers. We conferred with the manufacturers for six days before we reached a conclusion. I went there determined to insist on specific duties, but finally compromised on an ad valorem basis with 32 cents on the third grade and 5) or the second. Now I am morratic headquarters yesterday afternoon. coming to the point. The opposition of the It was a long time in session, but oreign makers and growers to the increase Chairman Brennen said the in tariff was most intense. They kept their mills going when the business wasn't payng and shipped all their surplus to the United States for the purpose of swamping the country. It was like selling goods at a Sheriff sale. They were glad to get any price for them. The importers brought into the country large quantities of raw material. We were overstocked as a result. material. We were overstocked as a result, and naturally prices had to drop. Now the stock is about used up, and next year I look for better rates. Wool is bound to advance from this time. I am certain that as a result of the increase in duty of 12 cents on third grade, the wool grovers a result of the committee of Eighteen under the committee of E

The Australians have a much better system than our farmers have in packing their wool, and I am trying to get our people to adopt it. Over there they don't put in the leg, hip or check locks, what we call the serap, but they take the best fleece and tie it together with twine that would cost us 40 samers use. cents per pound. In this country the farmers use a soft twine for wrapping. It gets into the fipe wool and can't be removed without the use of chemicals. It is this feature of the business that should be nated, as it spoils the fleece to some extent for the manufacturers."
