DUTIES OF ARISTOCRATIC MAMMAS

COOPERSONCE OF THE DISPATCH.]

London, Oct. 13.—During a number of years' travel in England, Ireland and Scotland I have often been situated so that observation was both proper and possible on the manner in which children of the nobility are reared, and have personally found exceeding interest in understanding more and more the details of their every-day life. We have some incorrect impressions regarding the subject. A certain class of literature is responsible for this. Generally speaking, it conveys the idea that British lords are a pampered breed, living in fairyland of jewels, sweets, flowers and fruits.

This is not true, so far as I have been able to observe. Their regimen until they take their place of nothingness in the world is one of considerable rigor. Good health, good manners, good habits and good morals are the unceasing seeking of those who have them in charge, and the discipline invoked with this end in view is really severe and strict. That they do not all become pretty fine men and women, can scarcely be the fault of their training.

The Country Place for Childhood.

It is fortunate for any child to be born in the country. It is estimated that this good fortune has fallen 90 per cent of the British nobility. Whatever demand London or continental cities make upon the British nobility in point of social duties and residence, however, the house is after all only a roomy boudoir and holds true even if it be a splendid palace.

The necessities of the "season" are attended to here. His home—if these folks who are ever going and coming with tremendous belongings and hordes of servants, may be said to possess what their most mortal enemies held—has a roomy hall, a parlour, a drawing room or more pleasant little rooms where the older children sleep, sometimes with a nurse in each room, and for nurses, the governess and her assistants.

The Little One's Education.

Milady's professional governess is expected to educate and form the manners and morals of the children, of the girls to the age of 12, and of the boys to the age of 7 and 8, respectively. Her services are paid by the special nurses and employed in the care of the child. At 2 to 3 years of age it is transferred to the household nursery, although the special nurses may be some-what longer retained. This nursery is always a most spacious apartment. Considerable time is spent in the frequenting of little halls are all roomy or more pleasant little rooms where the older children sleep, sometimes with a nurse in each room, and for nurses, the governess and her assistants.

At about a year's age, the nurse-mother is relieved. Her place is now occupied by a special nurse and employed in the care of the child. At 2 to 3 years of age it is transferred to the household nursery, although the special nurses may be some-what longer retained. This nursery is always a most spacious apartment. Considerable time is spent in the frequenting of little halls are all roomy or more pleasant little rooms where the older children sleep, sometimes with a nurse in each room, and for nurses, the governess and her assistants.

THE FIRST CONVICTION

At a time of tender expectancy, either nuptial or repairs. For a brief period at least the home idea, atmosphere and life prevail. The budding life is nurtured in the splendor of every enabling influence of kindly hereditary and stately possession.

The Instinct for Landed Wealth.

Out of the country, however, it is not difficult to find a home, more especially in all post-natal education, the upholding instinct of the British nobility and aristocracy for landed possessions; an instinct more potent than all other influences in tightening rather than loosening the hold upon landed estates. If it could be arranged that a child should be born in America, it could be born in London, all British landed estates would be shortly dismembered and divided. Whatever befalls a noble family here, its children are born and reared in the splendid castles of the country.

Months before a new arrival of a British home, the family herald and swaddled appearance, the order for its appareline has been made. If the child ever has much of an advantage over piebald little ones, it is thus early received a marked and important favoritism. Its favorite usually consists of two to four pieces of cloth, a band of shirts, silk dresses or robes, pinning blankets, stockings, caps and "carrying cloaks." Its skirts, shirts—except it be a "winter baby," when they are then all made of silk—articles of the finest Irish linen, humus, the famous white blankets of silk, fine lace, ribbons and the most delicate ribbon; and its facing cloaks of silk will be the fairest of the fairest.

Usually Ordered in the Cities.

These are usually ordered from "infant emporiums" of note in London, Liverpool, Belfast, Dublin, Glasgow and Edinburgh; but occasionally they are prepared by several artistic seamstresses and embroiderers who work under the immediate direction of the house, the head of whom is the master tailor. Something else is gained.

As a rule, their complexion and habitual negligence before their elders prevents that insufferable arrogance, and turbulent, insulting self-consciousness of the average potted and spoiled American youth.

But too often the loss of the society of their mother, on oath of John Powell, of Finley shot, it was alleged that the two were married, and the younger man may nap and the older ones play until three o'clock. Then comes study until four. A half-hour's drive or walk is had; when they are entertained by the governess with stories improvised, or real music, or by games, or by dancing, or by the superintendence of such art and the return of a verdict of not guilty, on the charge of depositing improper matter in the mails.

Colonel F. W. Parker's Idea of an Educated Young Man.

Whoever thinks a college professor is by nature a grumbling crank, need only meet Colonel Francis W. Parker, Principal of the Cook County Normal School, to have the delusion dispelled. Fat and jolly as a Dutch comedian, he rounds his most serious talks with spontaneous jokes and stories that shut off all answer to his arguments. He is one of the leaders in advancing the "new education," and took great pleasure in visiting the industrial schools just started in Pittsburgh.

The grand Jury indicted Ernest Dahlfus on the charge of depositing improper matter in the mails.

Walter Meyers pleaded guilty to using the United States mails with an intent to defraud. He was wanting to sell counterfeit money. He was sentenced three months to jail.

THE FIRST CONVICTION

Of a Violator of the New Wholesale Liquor Law.

In Criminal Court yesterday A. E. Jones, of Duquesne, a wholesale liquor dealer, was convicted of selling beer in quantities less than 12 pints, under the law of 1891. This was a test case and was watched with interest by liquor dealers. The case was examined by the Police Superintendent, Weir, against several Pittsburg dealers now awaiting trial.

Clara Shoef, a 12-year-old girl, was tried for larceny. The prosecutress was Mrs. Jones, of the Twenty-third ward, who alleged the girl stole a ring and $6.50. The evidence in the case was rather convincing that the girl was induced to do it by her mother, who is a widow and very wretched.

Bentley Stineyph was tried for cruelty to animals, on oath of John Powell, of Finley shot. It was alleged that the two were married, and the younger man may nap and the older ones play until three o'clock. Then comes study until four. A half-hour's drive or walk is had; when they are entertained by the governess with stories improvised, or real music, or by games, or by dancing, or by the superintendence of such art and the return of a verdict of not guilty, on the charge of depositing improper matter in the mails.

Representative Finley says It Will Be Hard to Get Out the Vote.

Representative J. B. Finley, of Monongahela City, came down to Pittsburgh yesterday to see how the political battle was going.

"It can't be denied," he said, "that the Republicans are very apathetic this year. Many are disgusted with the exposures in Philadelphia, and will stay away from the polls. If the party is defeated it will be lack of interest that will be responsible for the result, but I don't see how it is possible for the result to be successful, either. The old soldiers are with him and will support the ticket."

PERLEY NOT GUILTY.

Testimony in the Pension Case Not Sufficient to Convict.

A WHOLESALE LIQUORMAN BEATEN

In One of the Suits Brought to Test the Newly-Made Laws.

NEWS OF LOCAL AND DISTRICT COURTS

In the United States District Court yesterday the trial of Seth Todd Perley, the pension agent at Erie, charged with the violation of the pension laws, was concluded. When the testimony had been finished Perley's counsel presented a demurser to the testimony. They claimed that the testimony was insufficient to convict, and asked that the Judge so charge the jury. Judge Reed sustained the demurser, and in his charge to the jury told them the testimony was not enough for a conviction. United States District Attorney Lyon stated to the Court that if Perley was acquitted he could not well ask for the conviction of J. C. Blake, who was jointly indicted with him, when Perley was a principal and Blake only an accessory.

In accordance with the Judge's charge the jury returned a verdict of not guilty as to both Perley and Blake. In consequence of this, two other cases against Perley, Blake and Dr. E. D. Gates were nolle prossed. They had arisen out of the same transaction.

Cora Johnston, aged 15 years, was placed on trial on the charge of stealing a registered letter containing $47 from the post-office at Austin, Cameron county, Pa. She was a domestic in the employ of the postmaster. She was convicted, and sentenced one year and three months to the Cameron county jail.

Judge Reed refused a motion for a new trial in the case of H. E. Sutherland, charged with putting improper matter in the mail.
