

WANTS Of all kinds are supplied through THE DISPATCH. A WORD column of WORK of THE DISPATCH. Situations are secured quickly. The "adverts" are growing in popularity.

The Pittsburg Dispatch.

FORTY-SIXTH YEAR.

PITTSBURG, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1891-TWELVE PAGES.

THREE CENTS.

HOLDING AN INQUEST

Buckeye Democrats Are Trying to Find Out Just What Struck Them.

ANOTHER BIG BATTLE ON.

Foraker Is Hustling for the Senatorial Toga, and Claims Everything in Sight.

SHERMAN'S FRIENDS ARE HOPEFUL

And Conservatives Believe That He Will Pull Through, but It Will Take Hard Work to Do It.

CONGRATULATIONS AND CONDOLENCE

McKinley and Campbell Receive Many Messages From Their Respective Friends and Exchange Pleasant Notes.

THE LATEST FIGURES THROUGHOUT THE STATE

FROM A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.
COLUMBUS, Nov. 4.—At 10 o'clock this evening the official returns on the head of the ticket from all the counties in the State except 11 had been received at Republican headquarters. The counties not heard from were estimated by the managers, and the figures show that McKinley has a plurality over Campbell of 20,472. This number may be a little higher when all the returns come in, but Chairman Hahn does not think it will go lower.

A normal Republican majority in Cuyahoga county is about 2,500, but the estimated plurality is put at 1,500, just 1,000 under the regular surplus. The latest figures and estimates on the Legislature give the Republicans a majority ranging from 48 to 50 on joint ballot. This is Mr. Hahn's claim.

Carried by a Very Narrow Margin.

As usual Ohio bobs up with several counties having provokingly small majorities. Erie has 2 to the Republican credit and Vinton 1. The lowest majority in the Democratic list is Clermont with 114. The estimates counties are Cuyahoga, Butler, Carroll, Coshocton, Knox, Licking, Marion, Medina, Ross, Shelby and Stark. Chairman Hahn claims Stark county by 100. This is McKinley's county and is usually Democratic.

The result in Ohio is considered essentially a sweeping victory for the tariff. This is the consensus of opinion among the Republicans, while the Democrats are divided.

Some of the latter attribute the glory to the influence of the protective issue, while others claim that boodle and the cry about a dishonest dollar did the work. Governor Campbell is one of these.

Campbell Smiling, but Kicking.

The Governor was at the Capitol early this morning, looking more like a four-time winner than a first loser. He was in a good humor, smiled pleasantly, greeted everybody in his easy, off-hand way, and then plunged into a pile of work that had accumulated on his desk while he was on the Senate.

As the returns kept coming in slowly from Cincinnati, and all in his favor, one of his attendants rushed in to tell him that it was not as bad as first reported. The chances were McKinley would not have more than 12,000 of a majority.

"Well," said Mr. Campbell, looking up from a batch of papers he was examining, and with a merry twinkle in his eye, "it doesn't make any difference whether a man falls into a tub of soup, or buries his fingers in a bowl. The result is the same."

Trying to Be Philosophical.

The Governor was at the Capitol early this morning, looking more like a four-time winner than a first loser. He was in a good humor, smiled pleasantly, greeted everybody in his easy, off-hand way, and then plunged into a pile of work that had accumulated on his desk while he was on the Senate.

As the returns kept coming in slowly from Cincinnati, and all in his favor, one of his attendants rushed in to tell him that it was not as bad as first reported. The chances were McKinley would not have more than 12,000 of a majority.

"Well," said Mr. Campbell, looking up from a batch of papers he was examining, and with a merry twinkle in his eye, "it doesn't make any difference whether a man falls into a tub of soup, or buries his fingers in a bowl. The result is the same."

Sympathetic With Campbell.

With such philosophy the Governor received his defeat. Chairman Neal remarked to an enthusiastic Foraker this morning that the ex-Governor had come after like a flock of frightened sheep at the first signs of danger, while Sherman's wheel-horn stick. Now that the election has been settled, the fight between Sherman and Foraker, so long under cover, comes to the surface with a bound. When the smoke clears away a little the people will know just where they stand. At present, conjectures are unreliable, and the struggle for the Senate will be followed by the Attorney General.

CORDS OF CONGRATULATIONS

FORAKER IS HUSTLING FOR THE SENATORIAL TOGA, AND CLAIMS EVERYTHING IN SIGHT.

ONLY THE ELECTION

Discussed by the Senators When They Meet at the State Capital.

NOT A QUORUM PRESENT.

The Latest Revised Figures on the Contest in Pennsylvania.

DEFEAT OF THE CONVENTION.

Nearly 65,000 Majority Against It in Philadelphia Alone.

VIEWS EXPRESSED ON THE RESULTS

SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.

HARRISBURG, Nov. 4.—The Republican Senators returned to the Capitol this afternoon and evening overflowing with glee at the result of the election in this State, and congratulations were exchanged with refreshing freedom. Lieutenant Governor Watres, President of the Senate, was the recipient of many compliments for the successful manner in which he had conducted the campaign as Chairman of the Republican State Committee.

Among the first to approach him in the Senate Chamber to-night was Wallace McCamant, son of the Auditor General, who said the Republican victory was no doubt due to the Lieutenant Governor's good management. Attorney General Hobson did not look the worse for the large Republican majority in the State and in his county. He could not have appeared more cheerful if Pennsylvania had gone Democratic and was prompt to congratulate Mr. Watres, whom he advised to adhere to his determination to relinquish his position as State chairman, as a continuance in the place might be associated with defeat, as had been the case with him (the Attorney General) while he was managing campaigns for the Democrats.

McCormick in a Cheerful Mood.

Attorney General McCamant heartily grasped the hand of Senator Gobin and said: "Shake on yesterday's result."

Senator Gobin apparently took pleasure in announcing that about one-half the majority for the Republican State ticket was due to the extra session. Senator Penrose said: "They go as far as to predict that in short time we will have the real state of affairs and then pull out."

The Senator's struggle commenced as soon as the polls closed last evening, and it promises to be the liveliest in the history of the State. The battle two years ago, when Brice engaged 54 rooms at the Neil House for workers, won't be a marker, if the talk of the Foraker men is correct.

Some Talk of a Compromise.

McKinley and Foster are mentioned as compromise candidates, and some conservative Republicans are inclined to think that one or the other will be elected. Foraker's friends were heading to a compromise, and the local Post-elder tried to jeopardize Harrison's chances in Ohio this year, which looks quite reasonable on its face.

The ex-Governor's supporters claim that the people, three to one, are with him. The young hustlers feel that Sherman must be beaten.

The Democrats think that Sherman will be re-elected. Chairman Neal remarked to an enthusiastic Foraker this morning that the ex-Governor had come after like a flock of frightened sheep at the first signs of danger, while Sherman's wheel-horn stick.

Now that the election has been settled, the fight between Sherman and Foraker, so long under cover, comes to the surface with a bound. When the smoke clears away a little the people will know just where they stand. At present, conjectures are unreliable, and the struggle for the Senate will be followed by the Attorney General.

Senators Bates was wild with delight over the defeat of Judge Bucher in the Union-Snyder-Mifflin district. Senator Gobin said the defeat of Bucher was an awful outrage on the Pennsylvania Dutch. Gobin exhibited a short and dishonest dollar, thus scaring the farmers and the old soldiers, who were afraid of their losses. The tariff will go lower.

When Cleveland and its delegation are mentioned they wink the other eye, and whisper mysteriously. "Wait and see; there will be a surprise in old Cuyahoga." They go as far as to predict that in short time we will have the real state of affairs and then pull out."

The Senator's struggle commenced as soon as the polls closed last evening, and it promises to be the liveliest in the history of the State. The battle two years ago, when Brice engaged 54 rooms at the Neil House for workers, won't be a marker, if the talk of the Foraker men is correct.

Some Talk of a Compromise.

McKinley and Foster are mentioned as compromise candidates, and some conservative Republicans are inclined to think that one or the other will be elected. Foraker's friends were heading to a compromise, and the local Post-elder tried to jeopardize Harrison's chances in Ohio this year, which looks quite reasonable on its face.

The ex-Governor's supporters claim that the people, three to one, are with him. The young hustlers feel that Sherman must be beaten.

The Democrats think that Sherman will be re-elected. Chairman Neal remarked to an enthusiastic Foraker this morning that the ex-Governor had come after like a flock of frightened sheep at the first signs of danger, while Sherman's wheel-horn stick.

Now that the election has been settled, the fight between Sherman and Foraker, so long under cover, comes to the surface with a bound. When the smoke clears away a little the people will know just where they stand. At present, conjectures are unreliable, and the struggle for the Senate will be followed by the Attorney General.

Senators Bates was wild with delight over the defeat of Judge Bucher in the Union-Snyder-Mifflin district. Senator Gobin said the defeat of Bucher was an awful outrage on the Pennsylvania Dutch. Gobin exhibited a short and dishonest dollar, thus scaring the farmers and the old soldiers, who were afraid of their losses. The tariff will go lower.

When Cleveland and its delegation are mentioned they wink the other eye, and whisper mysteriously. "Wait and see; there will be a surprise in old Cuyahoga." They go as far as to predict that in short time we will have the real state of affairs and then pull out."

The Senator's struggle commenced as soon as the polls closed last evening, and it promises to be the liveliest in the history of the State. The battle two years ago, when Brice engaged 54 rooms at the Neil House for workers, won't be a marker, if the talk of the Foraker men is correct.

Some Talk of a Compromise.

McKinley and Foster are mentioned as compromise candidates, and some conservative Republicans are inclined to think that one or the other will be elected. Foraker's friends were heading to a compromise, and the local Post-elder tried to jeopardize Harrison's chances in Ohio this year, which looks quite reasonable on its face.

The ex-Governor's supporters claim that the people, three to one, are with him. The young hustlers feel that Sherman must be beaten.

The Democrats think that Sherman will be re-elected. Chairman Neal remarked to an enthusiastic Foraker this morning that the ex-Governor had come after like a flock of frightened sheep at the first signs of danger, while Sherman's wheel-horn stick.

Now that the election has been settled, the fight between Sherman and Foraker, so long under cover, comes to the surface with a bound. When the smoke clears away a little the people will know just where they stand. At present, conjectures are unreliable, and the struggle for the Senate will be followed by the Attorney General.

Senators Bates was wild with delight over the defeat of Judge Bucher in the Union-Snyder-Mifflin district. Senator Gobin said the defeat of Bucher was an awful outrage on the Pennsylvania Dutch. Gobin exhibited a short and dishonest dollar, thus scaring the farmers and the old soldiers, who were afraid of their losses. The tariff will go lower.

When Cleveland and its delegation are mentioned they wink the other eye, and whisper mysteriously. "Wait and see; there will be a surprise in old Cuyahoga." They go as far as to predict that in short time we will have the real state of affairs and then pull out."

The Senator's struggle commenced as soon as the polls closed last evening, and it promises to be the liveliest in the history of the State. The battle two years ago, when Brice engaged 54 rooms at the Neil House for workers, won't be a marker, if the talk of the Foraker men is correct.

Some Talk of a Compromise.

McKinley and Foster are mentioned as compromise candidates, and some conservative Republicans are inclined to think that one or the other will be elected. Foraker's friends were heading to a compromise, and the local Post-elder tried to jeopardize Harrison's chances in Ohio this year, which looks quite reasonable on its face.

The ex-Governor's supporters claim that the people, three to one, are with him. The young hustlers feel that Sherman must be beaten.

The Democrats think that Sherman will be re-elected. Chairman Neal remarked to an enthusiastic Foraker this morning that the ex-Governor had come after like a flock of frightened sheep at the first signs of danger, while Sherman's wheel-horn stick.

Now that the election has been settled, the fight between Sherman and Foraker, so long under cover, comes to the surface with a bound. When the smoke clears away a little the people will know just where they stand. At present, conjectures are unreliable, and the struggle for the Senate will be followed by the Attorney General.

Senators Bates was wild with delight over the defeat of Judge Bucher in the Union-Snyder-Mifflin district. Senator Gobin said the defeat of Bucher was an awful outrage on the Pennsylvania Dutch. Gobin exhibited a short and dishonest dollar, thus scaring the farmers and the old soldiers, who were afraid of their losses. The tariff will go lower.

When Cleveland and its delegation are mentioned they wink the other eye, and whisper mysteriously. "Wait and see; there will be a surprise in old Cuyahoga." They go as far as to predict that in short time we will have the real state of affairs and then pull out."

The Senator's struggle commenced as soon as the polls closed last evening, and it promises to be the liveliest in the history of the State. The battle two years ago, when Brice engaged 54 rooms at the Neil House for workers, won't be a marker, if the talk of the Foraker men is correct.

Some Talk of a Compromise.

McKinley and Foster are mentioned as compromise candidates, and some conservative Republicans are inclined to think that one or the other will be elected. Foraker's friends were heading to a compromise, and the local Post-elder tried to jeopardize Harrison's chances in Ohio this year, which looks quite reasonable on its face.

The ex-Governor's supporters claim that the people, three to one, are with him. The young hustlers feel that Sherman must be beaten.

The Democrats think that Sherman will be re-elected. Chairman Neal remarked to an enthusiastic Foraker this morning that the ex-Governor had come after like a flock of frightened sheep at the first signs of danger, while Sherman's wheel-horn stick.

Now that the election has been settled, the fight between Sherman and Foraker, so long under cover, comes to the surface with a bound. When the smoke clears away a little the people will know just where they stand. At present, conjectures are unreliable, and the struggle for the Senate will be followed by the Attorney General.

Senators Bates was wild with delight over the defeat of Judge Bucher in the Union-Snyder-Mifflin district. Senator Gobin said the defeat of Bucher was an awful outrage on the Pennsylvania Dutch. Gobin exhibited a short and dishonest dollar, thus scaring the farmers and the old soldiers, who were afraid of their losses. The tariff will go lower.

When Cleveland and its delegation are mentioned they wink the other eye, and whisper mysteriously. "Wait and see; there will be a surprise in old Cuyahoga." They go as far as to predict that in short time we will have the real state of affairs and then pull out."

The Senator's struggle commenced as soon as the polls closed last evening, and it promises to be the liveliest in the history of the State. The battle two years ago, when Brice engaged 54 rooms at the Neil House for workers, won't be a marker, if the talk of the Foraker men is correct.

Some Talk of a Compromise.

McKinley and Foster are mentioned as compromise candidates, and some conservative Republicans are inclined to think that one or the other will be elected. Foraker's friends were heading to a compromise, and the local Post-elder tried to jeopardize Harrison's chances in Ohio this year, which looks quite reasonable on its face.

The ex-Governor's supporters claim that the people, three to one, are with him. The young hustlers feel that Sherman must be beaten.

The Democrats think that Sherman will be re-elected. Chairman Neal remarked to an enthusiastic Foraker this morning that the ex-Governor had come after like a flock of frightened sheep at the first signs of danger, while Sherman's wheel-horn stick.

Now that the election has been settled, the fight between Sherman and Foraker, so long under cover, comes to the surface with a bound. When the smoke clears away a little the people will know just where they stand. At present, conjectures are unreliable, and the struggle for the Senate will be followed by the Attorney General.

Senators Bates was wild with delight over the defeat of Judge Bucher in the Union-Snyder-Mifflin district. Senator Gobin said the defeat of Bucher was an awful outrage on the Pennsylvania Dutch. Gobin exhibited a short and dishonest dollar, thus scaring the farmers and the old soldiers, who were afraid of their losses. The tariff will go lower.

When Cleveland and its delegation are mentioned they wink the other eye, and whisper mysteriously. "Wait and see; there will be a surprise in old Cuyahoga." They go as far as to predict that in short time we will have the real state of affairs and then pull out."

The Senator's struggle commenced as soon as the polls closed last evening, and it promises to be the liveliest in the history of the State. The battle two years ago, when Brice engaged 54 rooms at the Neil House for workers, won't be a marker, if the talk of the Foraker men is correct.

Some Talk of a Compromise.

McKinley and Foster are mentioned as compromise candidates, and some conservative Republicans are inclined to think that one or the other will be elected. Foraker's friends were heading to a compromise, and the local Post-elder tried to jeopardize Harrison's chances in Ohio this year, which looks quite reasonable on its face.

The ex-Governor's supporters claim that the people, three to one, are with him. The young hustlers feel that Sherman must be beaten.

The Democrats think that Sherman will be re-elected. Chairman Neal remarked to an enthusiastic Foraker this morning that the ex-Governor had come after like a flock of frightened sheep at the first signs of danger, while Sherman's wheel-horn stick.

Now that the election has been settled, the fight between Sherman and Foraker, so long under cover, comes to the surface with a bound. When the smoke clears away a little the people will know just where they stand. At present, conjectures are unreliable, and the struggle for the Senate will be followed by the Attorney General.

Senators Bates was wild with delight over the defeat of Judge Bucher in the Union-Snyder-Mifflin district. Senator Gobin said the defeat of Bucher was an awful outrage on the Pennsylvania Dutch. Gobin exhibited a short and dishonest dollar, thus scaring the farmers and the old soldiers, who were afraid of their losses. The tariff will go lower.

When Cleveland and its delegation are mentioned they wink the other eye, and whisper mysteriously. "Wait and see; there will be a surprise in old Cuyahoga." They go as far as to predict that in short time we will have the real state of affairs and then pull out."