RICHNESS IN BOOKS.

Wonders of the Phipps Collection in Carnegie Library.

ONE PUBLISHED 300 YEARS AGO.

Odd Illustrations in One of the Very Old Publications.

GEMS GATHERED BY PROFESSOR BLAKE

The Phipps scientific collection, purchased with the $10,000 donation from Henry Phipps, Jr., is coming into the Allegheny Carnegie Library at the rate of about 1,000 volumes a month. Over 2,000 volumes have already been received, 1,000 of which are known as the Blake library, being collected by the late Francis Biake, the well-known Pittsburg chemist. It is the most valuable chemical library in this part of the country, and was the collection of a lifetime. It is, of course, of interest to few but scientific men and students, but as the books called for by the average reader are comparatively few in number and have already been secured, the collection from now on will be principally of books of refer-

Among the valuable works in the Blake collection is Dinzler's Polytechnical Journal complete, something very hard to get, and especially valuable to patent solicitors. Accompanying it are 150 patent specifications in pamphlets, comprising 3,600 different papers. They were originally sold by the Patent Office at about 25 cents apiece and were preserved by Prof. Blake. There are very few such collections and their value will increase with time. Wonders From the Blake Library.

Other works issued by the Government and collected by Prof. Blake are full geological reports of the different States and works on metallurgy. Besides these there are found pamphlets on various subjects of little value separately, but made almost invaluable by careful indexing by Mr.

The oldest book in the library is found in this collection. It is printed in black letter German type, and was published in 1557 by Gerome Froben at Basel, Switzerland. The subject is mining. Vom Bergkwerck is the author. The book contains over 500 pages, folio, and is bound with parchment back, beechwood sides and metal clasp. The beechwood is about a quarter of an inch thick and is the only quarter of an inch thick and is the only part that does not show the marks of age. The type is about the size of great primer and was evidently wood letter. As the time it was published was only a little over half a century after the art of printing was discovered the book must have cost a fortune. Every eight or ten pages there are full-page illustrations of mining operations that in themselves tell the history of the tools used in that day. The draughtsman the tools used in that day. The draughtsu executed his work very cleverly, but had no idea of perspective. A man in the distance appears in the same size as a man near at hand, and invariably human beings are represented as being twice as large as horses.

Birds in a Blacksmith's Forge. One peculsar feature is that every picture, whether of a mine pit, a blacksmith shop or a furnace, has a number of birds either flying through the air, in cages or perched on a roof or tree-top. In one drawing two doves are shown just above a chimney, but not-withstanding the belching smoke, they are represented as having a permanent claim on their perch. The men in the drawings all wear the hoods used by the monks in that age, from which the conclusion could be drawn that the monks were the only persons at that time engaged in mining.

The only picture that could be used in a nineteenth century book is that of a blacksmith shop. The tools are almost identical with those used now, and reflect sad diswith those used now, and reflect sad dis-credit on the progress of the brawny smith. The different parts of the bellows are let-tered and given names that are still in vogue. The anvil shown is in daily use, and ham-mers and tongs look like the tools that are mers and tongs look like the tools that are still found in every shop.

In another cut the progress of different torces used for power is shown. Comment is made in the reading matter about what great inventions have been made, and the prediction made that it is possible that still more wonderful things may be discovered. The means of producing power illustrated are an old hand mill, a tread mill ran by wont and the producing power and the producing hy wont and the producing power illustrated are an old hand mill, a tread mill ran by wont and the producing power and the producing producing power and the producing power and power and the producing mill run by goats, another run by men and a wind mill. The explanation of the way the different machines are worked is explicit, and ends with a question about what the future has in store for producing force. Great Mines of Information.

Another book of almost equal curiosity is a work on metals, published in 1561 by George Bower. It is still considered authority. Other scientific works of great value are complete files of the English Mechanic, Scientific American, including the rare volume of 1847, which was furnished by John Brashear. Nature, London Engineering, and a complete set of the publications of the London Linnean Societ;, which are valued at $1,000. Among the popular books on useful arts in the Phipps collection are. "Workshop Receipts," books on book binding, paper hanging, railway curves, metal workers, the norst best industry useful work. sugar beet industry, needle work, electricity, bridges, telescopes, water works, fire engines, canals and harbors, petroleum and a big collection on architecture. The selections have been made by John Walker, William L. Scaif and John Brashear, assisted by Librarian Stevenson. The latter was allowed to add some books on folk lore, comparative religion and other sub-jects not within the purview of the gift. It will be some time before the collection will be catalogued. Librarian Stevenson thinks that it will be a rich reference library on scientific subjects and with the books for popular reading which are now open to the public, the library after being open only a few months, will be superior to many that have been making collections for years.

CALIFORNIA.

The Country of Delightful Winters. California is the most attractive and de-lightful section of the United States, if not of the world, and its many beautiful resorts will be crowded with the best families of the East during the entire winter. It offers to the investor the best open opportunity for safe and large returns from its fruit lands. It offers the kindest climate in the world to the feeble and debilitated; and it is reached in the most comfortable manner over the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad. Pullman vestibule sleeping cars leave Chicago by this line every day in the leave Chicago by this line every day in the year and go without change or transfer through to San Francisco, Los Angeles and Sau Diego. This is a feature not offered by any other line. Write to Charles T. Appleby, Traveling Passenger Agent, Room 303, Bank of Commerce Building, Pittsburg, Pa., if you desire any further information as to the country and the accommodations for reaching it.

Manufacturing Company, and was President of the Petersburg Iron Works. He subsequently went to Anstralia, where he spent some time in the interext of William Cameron and Brother, tobacconisis, of which firm he was a member. He was a brother of John G. Dunn, a wealthy banker in Petersburg.

General Horuce Boughton.

General Horace Boughton, of Texas, died suddenly in Washington, Sunday. For more than 15 years General Boughton had been almost an in là years General Boughton had been almost an in-valid, having sustained partial paralysis as a re-suit of remaining all night in water while building a postoon bridge over the Little Tennessee River in order to allow a division to cross to Burnside's relief. General Boughton was born in New York State in 1833, and, after serving through the war, attaining the rank of Brevet Brigadier General, he he removed to Texas. He occupied several public offices in that State, and in 1870 was the Democratic nominee for United States Senator from Texas, but was defeated.

Grandmother Buth Armor.

There died at Bellefonte suddenly yes terday morning probably the oldest resident in Center county. Grandmother Buth Armor expired suddenly in her chair at noon She was nearly & years of age, and was the youngest and only sur-years of age, and was the youngest and only sur-viving child of General Philip Benner, of Revolu-tionary fame, who settled in Center county, and was one of the pioneers after the Revolutionary War, on lands granted to him by the State. Mrs. Armor was very active for her age, She was born near Bellefonte.

Moncure Robinson, Civil Engineer. Moncure Robinson, an eminent civil engineer of other days, diedearly yesterday me of old age, at his residence in Philadelphia, he had lived for 50 years. He planned the Reading Railroad from Philadelphia to Pottsville for the needs of the enormous coal trade, which he fore-saw, and was also the engineer and deviser of the old Portage road for crossing the Allegheny Mount-ains. He was 91 years old.

Frederick Methushek, Inventor. Frederick Methushek, the inventor, whose piano improvements are in general use all over the world, died at his home in New York Mouday. Aithough his inventions would have made him enormously rich had he patented them, ne gave them to the world and died a comparatively poor man. He was born at Manheim, Germany, in 1814, and early developed great mechanical genius.

Obituary Notes.

W. J. HANCOCK. General Superintendent of the Atlantic Division of the Wells Fargo Express Company, died yesterday morning at New York. PATRICK PLOYD was seated in a chair at his home at North Braddock Monday, talking to his wife, when he fell to the floor dead. He was 53 years of age.

James Carlisle, a respected citizen of Brad-dock, died Monday morning of paralysis. He was 68 years of age and had retired from business sev-eral years ago.

A. J. NUZUM, ex-Postmaster of Grafton, W. Va., but intely holding the management of the Buxton-Landstreet Company store at Coketon and Thomas, W. Va., died at the former place Sunday evening of acute pneumonia.

LIEUTENANT FRANCIS RADOUX, who fought under Napoleon I., died at Portland, Me., at the age of 57. Of the men who once kept step to the war drums of the Corsican leader Lieutenant Radoux was probably the last one left on this side of the Atlantic. Radoux was, in his prime, the best violinist in Maine.

JOHN HASSOCK died in Ottawa, Ill., Monday aged 85 years. He was a radical Abolitionist dur-ing the war times, and in 1860 he was nominated for Governor of Illinois on the Abolition ticket. He was born in Scotland, went to Chicago in 1833, and settled in Ottawa in 1849. He was for years a contractor on the Illinois and Michigan Canal. MRS. WILLIAM DALY, who died in New York several days ago at an advanced age, was the mother of Il children, seven of whom are, or have been, known to the American stage. They are Thomas and William Daly, who, with Robert and Dan Daly, have starred in farces; Lizzle Daly, the sourcette, and Marguerite and Jennie Daly, dancers.

Ky., died on Sunday night at the home of his father, Colonei W. S. Rogers, in New York. His death was caused by an old wound received at the hands of a would-be assassin, who fired at him through a window when he was Deputy United States Marshal. Colonel Rogers served with General John Morgan during the rebellion.
