Germany Rebuffs the Embassadors of the Bear on their Application for a Loan.

CHANCES FOR BORROWING ENDED.

Bankers Can no Longer Be Allowed to Bolster Up the Credit of the Neighboring Nation.

REASSURING NEWS ABOUT THE FAMINE.

Count Tolstoy Threatens a Revolution if There is Not Food Enough.

BERLIN, Nov. 21.—The papers of this city tonight, on apparently good grounds, associate the Russian tax protracting the export of wheat and wheat products with the failure of the overtures of M. Vishnegradsky, the Russian Financial Minister, to Berlin financiers to reopen the German market to the Russian loans.

The Evening Telegram states that this time the Government, instead of declining to indicate what the bankers ought to do, definitely intimated that the guarantees offered by Russia did not suffice to justify official approval of German credit being ventured in the loans.

It is understood that the diplomatic approaches through Count von Schouvaloff, the Russian Ambassador in Berlin, on the attitude of the Government, received an equally decisive rebuff. The fiasco which the French syndicate made of the last Russian loan has enormously increased the financial difficulties of Russia.

Rothschilids Have Taken Some of the Bonds. The public official denial that the Rothschilids have taken over $5,000,000 is partly true. Bonds amounting to $28,000,000 have been placed in the Rothschilid keeping with no responsibility attached to their future issue through the firm, and the French syndicate is relieved of a burden of $5,000,000, which the Russian Treasury hoped to receive.

A statement published by the St. Petersburg Official Messenger on the condition of the imperial finances and its relation to the famine was telegraphed here tonight as an authoritative declaration aiming to minimize the dangers of the situation.

The statement begins by announcing that the stocks of grain after the prohibition of export will be sufficient for the population until the next harvest. As the people in the agricultural districts depend on the sale of grain they will find the position embarrassing, and the Government has therefore assigned to them 40,000,000 roubles from the cash reserve in the Treasury.

Enough Reserved to Redeem the Debt. It is said that the Treasury reserves 220,000,000 roubles, which sum is sufficient to meet the redemption of the loans for the current year and all the expenditures included in the budget, and still leave a cash balance equal to the needs of 1892.

The gold reserve amounts to a total of $8,500,000 roubles in the Treasury and 220,000,000 roubles in the Imperial Bank, besides 75,000,000 roubles reserved from the recent notes. This does not include the receipts from the loan. The sum of the Official Messenger's statement is that Russia has plenty of grain and an abundance of money for the time being. This is reassuring to the Russians who are under the scare of famine.

Tolstoy Demands Food for the People. This class includes Count Lyoff Tolstoy, the Russian social reformer, who has published an energetic demand that the Government declare without delay whether the stock of grain is sufficient to last through next summer. Count Tolstoy advocates the purchase of corn in America in order to prevent the country from famine and the terrible social disturbances that are certain to attend such a condition of affairs.

Count Tolstoy's daughters, Tatiane and Marie, have opened a free institution for the famine-stricken at his chateau. All those persons who are in dire necessity here get a good meal, but they are forbidden to take food away with them. The Count foresees that if they were allowed to carry food away they might barter it for drink.

BERLIN, Nov. 21.—The noted American visitors at present in Berlin are Mr. C. D. Warner, Mrs. General W. W. Hancock and David C. Bell. DE GIERS AND HIS TRAVELS.

PECULIAR VISITS PAID BY THE RUSSIAN CHANCELLOR.

He Calls on His Little Granddaughter in Paris—Doesn't Fail to Have a Good Long Talk With de Mohrenheim—A Halt in Berlin.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Monsieur de Giers, the Russian Imperial Chancellor, arrived in Paris Thursday evening, to see his granddaughter. By way of keeping up a fiction which deceives nobody, the little girl was waiting at the Russian embassy when the great man arrived, presented him with a bouquet, and was kept awake and fed with bonbons at an hour when all good little girls should be tucked up in bed.

It was announced that His Excellency, being an invalid and suffering from the fatigue of a long journey, would retire to rest, but after everybody else had retired M. de Giers talked with Baron de Mohrenheim, the Russian Ambassador, for two hours, which was not a bad performance for a frail-worn, aged invalid. Last night, too, he was well enough to dine with Monsieur Carnot at the Elysee, and his strength was happily equal to the strain of a long talk with the President, followed by another prolonged consultation with the Ambassador.

Again to-day this remarkable man, who is tall, lean, and has a stern countenance with various good people, and to-night he has successfully borne the ordeal of a big diplomatic dinner at Monsieur de Mohrenheim's.

The Paris correspondents, understanding for once in a way what people want to know, have taken pains to describe M. de Giers. We learn that he is tall, lean, and has a stern countenance which makes work give to a man. He has the graying whiskers of the old-fashioned diplomat, and is tired looking, with a keen eye, contrasting with a somewhat bilious complexion.

M. de Giers' visit to his granddaughter was preceded by a semi-official statement, carefully communicated to the press in every European capital, to the effect that his interest in the King Humbert and the Marquis di Rudini were quite unprejudiced and as devoid of international significance as his private visit to Paris—which is doubtless correct, as far as it goes, but in order to make clear the personal and pacific objects of his journey it is now announced that M. de Giers will visit Berlin, where, provisionally, his family will be next week.

To round up things nicely and set every one at his ease, M. de Giers ought now to be in London and in London and a grandson in Vienna anxiously awaiting his embraces. The bunching of the entire family in Berlin is obviously a waste of good material, and justifies the suspicion that M. de Giers and his master are preparing some movement against the Austrian interests in the Balkans and British interests in Egypt and India, which France will support directly or indirectly, and which will not furnish a casus belli to the triple alliance.

THE ALLIANCE COMPLETED. France and Russia Come to a Perfect Understanding With Each Other.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—The Paris to-day declares that Russia and France have come to a complete verbal entente in regard to the alliance between the two nations. This understanding, the Paris declares, was arranged during the recent visits of the Russian Grand Duke to President Carnot. In addition the paper says they are only exponents of the alliance, which yet remain to be defined.

ACHIEVED GREATNESS!

"Some men are born great, some achieve greatness and some have greatness thrust upon them." —Shakespeare.

But it's different with their clothes. They are mostly born without clothes. Nearly all have clothes thrust upon them when they are small. Afterward they have to achieve their clothes. Some achieve good clothing and some don't. It's owing to where they buy it. Those who buy the clothing of the MISFIT PARLORS

Get the best. It is easier, too, to achieve the Misfit Clothing Parlor's clothing—it costs less. People are getting weary paying the exorbitant prices to high-priced tailors just for the sake of saying "made expressly for me" when they can secure the same in EVERY PARTICULAR from the Misfit Parlors for ONE-HALF the tailor's charges. The clothing sold by THE MISFIT PARLORS has achieved its reputation through intrinsic worth, and merits the esteem of the people by its values.
