TRIBUTE TO AN ABLE MAN.

The Allegheny County Bar Association Adopts a Minute on the Death of Judge Clark-Elegant Addresses Made by Judge Magee and Others.

The Allegheny County Bar Association met yesterday to take action on the death of Judge Clark of the Supreme Bench. M. A. Woodward and Judge Kennedy were Chairmen. Judge Magee in speaking of the dead jurist, said:

"To-day I do not feel that my duty is performed to the memory of Judge Clark if omit, in words, to express the regard and sorrow I feel for his unexpected death. I saw him for the last time the day he left for his home, expecting, as he informed me, that at an early day he would return to the city, with little thought that when he spoke he stood on the threshold of eternity, and that so soon he would go 'to his long home and the mourners go about

'I believe no one who came in touch with him ever left his presence unaffected by love for the man. In the grasp of his hand you could feel the warmth of his heart, and in his tongue was 'the law of kindness.' In conclusion, Judge Magee said he was a wise man and a good man. He left an honored name, a spotless reputation and a Christian life and a Christian death as his legacy to the bench and bar of his native State. "I mourn his loss."

Other addresses were made by City Attor-pey Moreland, Major A. M. Brown and J. J. Miller. Then a set of resolutions were adopted. They recounted the story of Judge Clark's life and then continuing said: While we have followed his career upon the Supreme Bench with feelings of triendly interest and professional pride, we cannot undertake in this minute even a brief review of his judicial work. He who would do this must make a study of the numerous opinions delivered by Judge Clark and published in the last 40 volumes of the reports.

These opinions are of such character that they constitute a fitting monument for a

they constitute a fitting monument for a Judge of the highest and noblest ambition, they constitute a fitting monument for a Judge of the highest and noblest ambition. They are medels as to style, show great industry, death of research and legal learning, and their legic is as clear as it is convincing.

No one, even in the heat of partisan strife, ever had the temerity to suggest anght against Judge Clark's uprightness and integrity, and no more spotless Judicial robes were ever laid aside than those which he put from him when called himself to appear before the Great Judge of all.

In this hour of fresh sorrow, however, it seems difficult for us to turn our minds to these things. We are so overwhelmed by grief at the loss of a friend and brother that we cannot dwell upon other aspects of the sad occurrence. The unfailing courtesy and hearty good will at all times manifested by Judge Clark were such as to make him appear the personal friend of each one who appeared before him, and the many who had the rare privilege of personal intercourse with him out of court will never want for a model of the true friend and high toned cultured gentleman.

To his family we beg to tender our heartfelt sympathy. Judging by our own sense of loss, we have some conception of now inexpressibly bitter theirs must be. Let their consolation be that length of days is not necessary to make a complete life, and that it is granted to few men to do as much as was accomplished by him whom we mourn

it is granted to few men to do as much as was accomplished by him whom we mourn

Farewell, able, upright Judge, Friend and to-day you may be gifted with the power to look into our hearts and see how, beyond all ability to express, we appreciate your life and character and mourn your loss.

Killed in Newark, N. J.

Superintendent Weir got a telegram yesterday from the Chief of Police of Newark, N. J., saving that an unknown man had been found dead near that city, on the line of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and from papers in his pocket he was thought to be Henry Fagin, of 228 McKean street this city. The matter was turned over to Detective McTighe to investigate, and he visited Fagin's house. He found that gentleman at home alive and well, but Mr. Fagin thought the man killed must have been a friend of his named William Carrick, a machinis', who left home some two weeks ago for New York City, and to whom he had given an addressed envelope for the purpose of writing him. Carrick came from Liverpool a year ago.

TREATY IN DANGER

The Revolution in Brazil Is Liable to Knock Out All the Reciprocity Arrangements.

FUNSECA FRIENDLY TO AMERICA

Foreign Powers Jealous of South America? Trade and Are Faid to Be Behind the Revolt.

NATIVES TAUGHT TO HATE YANKEES

Is Asserted That the Members of the Brazilian Con gress Have Been Bribed.

Americans are afraid that the revolution in Brazil will endanger the reciprocity treaty with that country. There is good ground for the fear, when it is remembered that General Fonseca, who has just resigned as President, only succeeded in having the bill pass the House and Senate with one vote to spare. Fonseca is a great admirer of the United States, and he has always been friendly to the Americans. Dom Pedro took a great liking to him, and raised him and his brothers from the rank of lieutenants to Generals in the

When asked ye terday what effect he thought the resignation of Ponseca would have on the country, he replied: "I am inclined to doubt that the President has re-signed. The news comes by way of London and bears English ear marks. It looked to me like a story trumped up to

"I think the Brazilian members of the House and Senate have been bribed, for ever since the bill was passed the Congress has been arrayed against Fouseca.

"There are Liberal Republicans, the Monarchists and Fonseca Republicans. The President made a mistake in declaring himself a dictator. I beleive he could have crushed the German revolt without it. temptation, however, is great when the Congress is against a man and something must be done. Under a dictatorship his acts would be legal. The United States, if it wishes to secure South American trade, must make a demonstration, and we can't do it too soon. The Pan-American delegates were simply paralyzed with our resources and strength, but they couldn't go back home and tell what they saw. The people wouldn't believe them. They think that Europe is the only country on earth, and what comes from there is perfect. Our im-provements are so far ahead of Europe that the South Americans doubt the stories of their representatives.
"I don't think there is any danger of the monarchy being restored. My impression of the people is that they are Republicans and want a liberal government. It was rather rough for General Fonseca to take advantage of Dom Pedro, but you know everything is considered fair in politics. He saw that a Republic was sure to come, for the Emperor was old and not expected to live much longer.

"His daughter was the heir, and her hus hand, who is a foreigner and thoroughly hated, would have been the power behind the throne. He had grown immensely weathy in the country and carted the money off to Europe. You can easily see why the people had no love for him. Fonseca was very nonular with the army through. very popular with the army through Don Pedro's favor. If the Emperor had appeared in Rio Janeiro in the morning when the change was made, the army would have rallied around him, but he was old and submissive and remained in his palace, about eight miles from the city.
The Emperor was much devoted to his people, and he gave his money away in charity.
I never knew a man who was so free with his wealth in relieving distress.

Cannot Restore the Monarchy.

"The monarchy can't be restored with-out European aid, and then I should think that, under the Monroe doctrine, it couldn't be done without consulting the United States. The South American trade is worth striving for. The climate is not agreeable to our people, and no American would care to live down there. England's only interest in the country is to hold the

The result is that good currency has gone and controlled. sult is that good currency has gone out of circulation, and the Republic is bankrupt. the Patagonians are chiefly Indians, very tall and powerful. The climate is cold. I remember in going through the Straits of Magellen a party of Indians came out in a boat to the vessel. We could see glaciers all around us, but the big fellows didn't wear a stitch of clothing. They had skins of the vacuna to sell, and they exchanged them for small knives and other trinkets. I bought a robe for scarcely nothing that was worth £40 in England. The captain gave them a pair of trousers for one. They tore it apart and two of them took a leg apiece."

Creditors Kindly Pisposed. The creditors of J. P. Witherow & Co. will meet in the offices in the Lewis block to-day. W. E. Curtis, a New York lawyer, who represents the Watts syndicate, arrived yesterday and registered at the Duquesne. George L. Reis, of Knoxville, the engineer for the Watts people at Middle-borough, Ky., is also here. E. C. Darley said there was nothing to say in advance. The creditors, he thought, were kindly disposed and willing to give the company a chance to recover itself. He said Mr. Curtis had not come specially to attend the meeting, but that he had other business to look after. The firm wants an extension of time and it will probable be meeting. time and it will probably be granted. Receiver Thompson, in charge of the New Castle works, held a consultation with Mr. Witherow last evening. He will be present at the meeting.

Rush of Pittaburgers to New York, Inte

ested in the College Match. The annual pilgrimage to New York about Thanksgiving time to see the college football match has become a regular thing in Pittsburg. Local people have been going to the metropolis for the last week. The women take as much interest in the game as the men, and both sexes are about equally as the men, and both sexes are about equally represented. Last night the first of the rush occurred, and it is estimated that fully 500 Pittburgers will see the Yale-Princeton match. Several additional Pullmen cars were put on yesterday, and two sections of the Eastern express were run. A carload of young men, principally Yale graduates, started for New York last night.

Among those noticed on the trains were Charles J. Clarke and family, Mrs. James A. Chambers, O. D. Thompson, one of the Pittsburg eleven; Mark Baldwin, the pitcher; J. Palmer O'Neil, who claimed he was bound for Philadelphia, and out of was bound for Philadelphia, and out of baseball forever; Park Painter, David Ew-

Yale is the favorite in this city, and the betting is 50 to 25 against Princeton. These bets are taken freely by admirers of the New Jersey men. The Thanksgiving family reunions in New York are taking many people over there also. The young folks come in from the schools and attend the game, while the fathers and mothers enjoy themselves at the balls. The dinner is the main event of the day. The Eastern travel is expected to be very heavy to-day, and additional sections will be run.

A Pittsburg Mother Wanted to Look After Her Boy in Chicago.

The police are endeavoring to find a Mrs. Plumber, thought to be in this city engaged as a trained nurse in some hospital or other institution. A letter was received some weeks ago, from Chicago, relative to the inhuman treatment of a child of Mrs. Plumber's which has been adopted by a Chicago family, but the signature was anonymous and no attention was paid to the communication. Yesterday another letter was received, in a different handwriting, on the same subject. The letter tells the

Of course, the Germans in the southeast, who caused the present trouble, and the Spaniards are pugnacious, and can't be bluffed. I think the difficulty can be traced to the foreign hatred of the reciprocity treaty. You have no idea how the Eaglish are opposed to us. Caught Trying to Fnter a Leather Store Last night, about 10 o'clock. Lieutepant Glenn and Othicer Yeager caught two men in the rear of 214 Smithfield street, who were in the act of breaking into the store of D. Kinzer & Son, leather dealers. They had secured a pick, by which they removed the handle, and, after vainly trying to pry open a shutter on a window, had broken the door around the lock by pounding it in. It was the noise of this work which attracted was the noise of this work which attracted the officers' attention, and they surprised the men while at work. At the Central station they gave their names as Benjamin Straus, of Pittsburg, and Charles Ford, of Dayton, O. The latter is a mere boy, hardly more than 19 years old. Both were locked up for disposal to-day.

Contributions for the Humane Society. At the regular meeting of the Humane Society yesterday steps were taken toward making arrangements for the annual meeting of the Society, which will be held next January. The Society has been prospering during the past year, and some very inter-esting reports of the good work that has been done are about completed. They show that the Society is one of the most flourishing in the country. Secretary Davidson reported the following contributions: Mrs. James Hay, $5; J. R. Hendricks, $5; J. Walter Hay, $5; F. P. Adelsperger, children, $5: John Munball, $10; fine from Agent Witt $10, or a total of $40. of $40.

Only Three Officers Examined. One of the regular examinations of officers for promotion in the Second Brigade was for promotion in the Second Brigade was held at the Monongahela House last evening. None of the colonels were present, and only three candidates were on hand to stand the ordeal. These were Kilgore and Saymer from the Tenth Regiment, and Captain Spencer, of the Sixteenth. Captain Hunt, Captain Murdock and Major Kay constituted the board. The number is the smallest ever examined, and the absence of military men in the lobby was painful. It looked as if the cold weather had dampened the ardor of the young men and the veterans.

The Roselia Foundling Asylum Formally Opened To-Morrow.

DESCRIPTION OF THE HOSPITAL Bright Bits of Humanity as Inmates and Their Treatment

GENERAL INVITATION IS EXTENDED

F the recent occu pants of the old Tanner mansion or Cliff street will visit it Thanksgiving Day, they will hardly believe their own eyes. A grand and beautiful transformation has been wrought through the charity of Charles Don nelly, instigated by the lifelong and womanly wish of his deceased wifethat of establishing a home for found

lings and poor, unfortunate mothers, This wish has been faithfully carried out by Mr. Donnelly in the institution known as the Roselia Foundling Asylum and Hospital of Maternity. The motive which prompted the gift was an admirable one, while the results of this desire will perpetu ate the name of Donnelly and be a credit to the city of Pittsburg. Mr. Donnelly sat in one of the reception rooms yesterday atternoon, tired from a busy trip over to New York. He, however, was obliging and courteous, and with the assistance of Sister Agnes Mary of the Sisters of Charity, he showed a DISPATCH reporter through the rejuvenated building. It is truly interesting.

The Hospital a Model of Taste. Starting from the parlor, which room is a model of taste and artistic judgment in harmonious selection of furniture, carpets, decorations, etc.,-Mr. Donnelly's own ides by the way—one wanders through the spacious halls to several ante rooms for the reception of visitors and parents. These are all handsomely furnished. Then to the kitchen and pantries where any one with a hobby for the culinary art would dote over the many conveniences of modern invention there to be found. The absence of dirt in all departments is a refreshing feat-ure. The dining room is a large, commodious apartment in which are a number of tables covered with good tableware and linen set for the serving of meals to the sisters and nurses or whoever may be a visitor. There are over 30 rooms in the building and upstairs the most interesting sight meets the eye of a caller. The private chambers, of which there are several on the second floor, are quite luxurious in their furnishment. They would satisfy the most fastidious dyspeptic.

Apartments That Are Luxurious. The ward chambers are almost as fine, while the Sisters' sleeping apartments are perhaps more liberally furnished than the perhaps more liberally furnished than the average nun is used to. Sister Marle pointed to the brussels carpet on the floor, and smilingly said: "This is something we have not been used to; we have everything which is necessary, but you know we are very simple in our worldly tastes and wants." She then complimented the donor, Mr. Donnelly, in the very high terms.

Next the visitor suddenly enters into the most interesting room on the floor. It is the nursery, where 28 infants ranging in ages from a month to two years, are laugh-

Then an interesting Hungarian was having an argument over a disfigured doll with a Welsh baby, who demonstrated its loyalty to foreign tin by blowing a whistle made from that article.

The Different Nationalities. A young German who was industriously pulling at a bottle of milk, brought forth the facetious remark of a Sister that he "was taking to the bottle early." A Polish prattler and dusky playmate made faces at each other while a nurse carried them to and fro to quiet their infantile tempers. The woman was satisfied for she said, "this take harmout place in the world" while and fro to quiet their intantile tempers. The woman was satisfied for she said, "this is the happiest place in the world," while the reporter held his ears to keep out the shrill cries of the disgruntled youngsters.

A playing room is now ready for the tots, and it is filled with playthings, etc., which are the welcome gifts of outsiders. Everything, no matter how infinetisimal, is welcomed, and the public if it wants to further the interests of the institution can not go wrong in giving to it freely.

Also an immense laundry, a spacious lavatory and bath rooms, sewing rooms where the children's garments are made, a ward for the maternity hospital with 12 beds, a reception hospital where children are examined by physicians for contagious diseases before admission and other details of importance. The sanitary arrangements of the whole institution are perfect. As to the exterior, the painter's brush and the handiwork of the carpenter have enhanced its appearance wonderfully, and it is now a very handson

Fire escapes and broad porches are essentive features for safety in case of fire, and the latter can give the children a chance to breathe outdoors on rainy days. The grounds are ample and a depth of 175 feet in the yard is sufficiently large enough for a sprinting track. There is also a large vacant space across the street from the hom vacant space across the street from the nome overlooking the Union depot which is to be used for a playground, or in fact used to any good purpose—perhaps to erect some other building in the future. Taken all in all it is a most model and complete institution and the minds from which emanated the idea of arrangement should and will be complimented. It will be conducted on the same plan as the New York Foundling Asylum with a board of managers and chairman. Those now at the head of it wish it to be prominently remembered that it will be non-sectarian; every church denomination being welcomed, and it is a sure thing no one wil! be carelessly treated. The Sisters will oversee everything, and ex-perienced nurses attend to the wants of the young until they have arrived at the age of two years, when every effort will be put forth to secure for them suitable homes in good responsible families.

How the Babes Are Received. What is called the "Waifs' Basket" attracted attention by its novel working and use. It is a comfortable revolving concern for the reception of the little tots whose mothers, for various reasons, wish to dispose of them. A button is touched and the box automatically revolves, the child placed in, and again the receptacle turns, and there you are. The mother can't get the child out if she changes her mind.

The maternity hospital for erring or

The maternity hospital for erring or destitute mothers who desire care, is a most comfortable and admirable annex. On Thursday at the formal opening of the Asylum many visitors who take interest in such matters are expected to be present. A number of invitations have been sent out for the event, to take place in the building at the corner of Cliff and Gum streets. It is a great location both for pure air and a charming view.
All others who have not received invitations are cordially invited to the opening. The fact that much interest is evinced in the welfare of the institution, is fully demonstrated by the many liberal contributions received. They have been sent from the far South, in the East and West, by persons of charitable instincts and motives. A beautiful and appropriate solid walnut figure of a little waif with outstretched hand on a pedestal stands in the main entrance of the asylum. A box for the reception of monetary contributions is at tached to it. It is reproduced by a DIS-PATCH artist, and the original is a most artistic and touching mute appeal for aid.

A Timely Chase for an Escaping Convict. Quite an excitement was created near the Knoxville incline yesterday afternoon by one man chasing another and firing a revolver. The person pursued was Michael Hennessy and the one doing the shooting was an offier from the county workhouse. Hennessy had been serving a sentence at that institution and escaped a few days ago. He was located on the Southside yesterday and a workhouse officer came after him. Henessy saw the officer first and started to run up the hill, when the officer fired three times in the air with his revolver. This frightened Hennessy and he concluded it was not best to run and gave himself up.

SNOWDEN IS VISITED.

Secretary McBride Is Only Interested in the White Miners.

WHAT THE INDIANA MINERS WANT

The Strike in the Pittsburg District Was Opposed by McBride.

SOME GENERAL INDUSTRIAL NOTES

National Secretary McBride, of the United Mine Workers' Association, was a visitor in Pittsburg yesterday. He came here from his home in Ohio to investigate the condition of the white miners at Snowden. He returned from there late Monday night, and when seen yesterday afternoon he gave the following information:

"I was at Snowden Monday for a little while conferring with the proprietors of the mines over the trouble existing between them and the white miners. The whole difficulty lies in that contract they want the men to sign. The agreement calls for a 10 per cent discount on every dollar of the miners' wages, which is held eight months, the time the contract is drawn for. If a miner wants to leave the Snowden mines he has to give one month's notice, or he does not get the amount of his wages which has been held back. The operators did not feel disposed to give in, so the 48 white miners will stay out, and the association will give them all the aid that is necessary. There are several things against the Snowden miners. They nearly all own properties there and cannot leave. I think, though, the company will see the folly of its course and eventually come around all right. The matter will be left in the hands of President Costello for ettlement.

Negroes Were Not Suffering.

"My visit to Snowden did not have anything to do with the negro element. They are not organized, and, as I wanted to do my best for the whites, I was afraid of friction with the operators if I said any-thing about the colored miners. I ob-served though, and asked certain persons about the published story of the slavish condition of the blacks, and it was strongly denied. From what I saw I was scongled the men were being used all right. I left a colored member of the National Board to investigate it thoroughly."

Mr. McBride also talked on several other subjects. In speaking of the strike in the block and bituminous coal regions of block and bituminous coal regions of Indiana he said:

"To-day the miners and operators of the block coal region of Indiana are holding a conference. To-morrow the miners of the whole State will meet, and the report of to-day's conference will be heard. The block coal miners want an advance of 10 cents and the bituminous miners want an advance of 5 cents. If our side receives the alyance the other side will be willing the advance the other side will be willing to give in, but if the operators refuse to make any concessions a general strike of long duration will follow. The block coal miners are no: well organized, but the bitum-inous men are and it will make a long fight."

McBride Opposed the Last Strike.

Secretary McBride was sounded on the political situation of the association, but on this subject he was as mum as an oyster. He branched off on the late strike in the Pittsburg district. "I was opposed to that strike from the beginning," said he. "When it was brought up before the National Board I then objected to it, and the strike never had the sanction of the National Board There were several reasons for it. I hold that the men broke their contract in striking before their scale had run out. It was at least bad policy to strike until after the late trade had been gotten out. The miners of the Pittsburg districts are not as well organized as in some districts. One part of them were firm during the strike, while the other was constantly wavering and disheartening the others. The men were not wholly to McBride Opposed the Last Strike. the others. The men were not wholly to blame, as the operators, too, broke their agreement in several instances,

"I anticipate a great deal of trouble next May, when the new scale is made out. The men will demand an advance, at least on local trade, and the operators cannot get around giving it, although they will prob-ably fight it. The unions have the same right to ask for an advance now the operaors had to demand a decrease several years ago. When natural gas was first put on the market as a fuel there was plenty of it, and the local coal trade was affected. The operators then asked for a secrease and got it, and, on the same principle, the miners will next spring ask for an increase, as the gas has virtually played out."
