The application of certain Mongolians for a charter for a club, the objects of which, as set forth, are general amusement and recre ation of a social kind, such as conversation music, playing of dominoes, draughts, etc. said application headed by the names of three wellknown Celestrials, Messrs James McKee, Daniel Gallagher and D. J. Mc-Laughlin, was before the Court of Common Pleas No. 2 yesterday, but went over for a week on account of Lawyer James R. Me-Farland filing exceptions to the grant Colorel W. D. Moore is attorney for the petitioners. Those who file exceptions are Thomas A. Parke, R. N. Steadman, O. J. Parker, George K. Stevenson, T. Jenkins, E. 8. Thompson. Colone Moore sets forth that the objects of the club are the promotion of social intercourse among the Celestials stationed in a foreign land: to promote innocent recreation; to sing the songs of Hongkong and aid each other in the battle of life, and enable strang-ers in a strange land that will not allow them the privileges of citizenship, forcing them to hang their harps in the willows so that they cannot sing the aforementioned songs of Hongkong and to live in compara-tive comfort. They ask how they can be expected to sing those songs in a strange land before an unsympathetic audience. Further, these sons of the Flowery Kingdom ask that they may be allowed a refuge from the temptations that beset them in a strange land in their loneliness and isolation.

The exceptants hold that the petition for a charter does not set forth with suf ficient perspicuity the objects of the club proposed, and indirectly may possibly license something else, presumably fantan or something else equally seductive. In the second place, they allege that the granting of the charter might be in opposition to public policy, and thirdly, opposition is made on the ground that but three of the petitioners are citizens of Pennsylvania, to say nothing of United States citizenship. The applicants for a charter are James McKee, Daniel Gallagher, Daniel J. Mc Laughlin, Yee Chin. Yee Hing, Quon Wah, Yee Liv, Yee Eve (of Mansfield), Lee Hong, Yee Chee, Yee On Yee, Toy Yee, Wing, Yee Jung, Joe Wing and One Lung.

The latter may be a musician, but his vocal strength could not be judged by lung A wag connected with the court suggests that not only are some church people arrayed against the granting of the charter, but that the Duquesne, Pittsburg, Raudall, Young Men's Tarift, Americus, County Democracy and Press Clubs are opposing on account of an apprehension that the Celestials will outdo them in the musical and culinary departments, as the latter are said to have not only superior orchestral abilities, but in the gastronomic line are so proficient that they can extract the contents of an orange skin and replace them with nine kinds of jelly so blended that no one can distinguish any component, and all without puncturing the rind of the
