the throat and sever the ear of his intimate friend, Fred Schweitzer. It has developed that he is subject to fits of insanity at this time of the year. The affair dates back to Christmas eve, 1868, when a large general merchandise store belonging to Fischer burned to the ground. It was clearly the work of an incendiary, and suspicion fell upon Fischer, who quickly proved his innocence, and accused a man named Pat-terson and his son, now Hon. Tom Patter-son, the well-known Denver lawyer, of the deed, claiming that the old gentleman, who owned the building, was after the insurowned the building, was after the insurance. His accusations were doubtless without foundation, for no proceedings were ever instituted, and soon after young Tom, Then a Wabash College student, drifted west to make his fortune.

But Fischer conceived an undying hatred toward him, and continued brooding over the affair has made him morbid. At no time, however, except this season of the vear, has his mind been unbalanced. Several years ago he had a peculiar, suckle-shaped knife made, calling it the "Patterson knife," and two years ago he went to Denver for the exears, but the latter was notified and left Denver until Fischer was brought back. short notice to any point that may be con venient for the shipment of her cargo.
