Where the Ball Started and Its Progress Here With Local Results.

FINE SLEIGHING MAY NOT LAST LONG

A couple of weeks ago the pessimistic portion of humanity was chasing around with colds, growling about the weather being gentle, lamb-like and full of germs, exclaiming: "Why doesn't it get cold?" A good many of those same individuals can now be found in bed trying to keep warm. A scarcity of gas and a scarcity of coal and uncooked meals will drive a man to bed even in the day time.

Yesterday was the coldest day in Pitts burg since February 24, 1889, when the thermometer registered 20 above zero. In 1890 the lowest point was 40, while in 1891 the minimum figure was 90 above. The lowest yesterday, according to Sergeant Stewart, was 20 above, while down on the streets the mercury in several thermometers tried to hide in the little round bulb at the bottom. In the suburbs reports were as low as 10° below zero. Broker John Frost started the break in Mercury on the Polar Exchange at St. Vincent. He hammered it down to 6 below par and the wave went sailing down, aided by a stiff winter wind to Port Huron, thence to Duluth, Cleveland, Columbus, Indianapolis and as far south as Cairo. The commodity was a "sale" below zero at all these points, no one wishing to touch it.

A Panicky Market Up North,

At Grand Haven, Mich., Chicago and Pittsburg the market was steady and firm above par a few points. The greatest range of fluctuations in the weather market was at White River, Canada, where the feeling was decidedly panicky. The bears made a raid and sent "Merk" down 50° below. The bulls rallied and by continued support sent the quotation up to 12 above, all within 15 hours. The scalpers reaped a rich harvest. Those who are on the inside predict that the weather market will be fair and warmer to-day with steady temperature.

The heavy fall of snow caused much in convenience to street passenger traffic, and much delay was occasioned on the cable lines by the icy cakes freezing in the slot. Salt cars were placed on the lines, proving very effective, and the cars were got into good running shape in the afternoon. The good running snape in the atternoon. The snow sweepers on the electric lines were also brought into good use. Railway traffic has been interfered with greatly. Almost every through train was late, and especially the ones coming over the mountains from the East. The snow fall has been very heavy up on the hills, much heavier than at any period this year. If the weather predictions continue to be warm longer than the Signal Service folks anticipate, it will occasion a thaw and a great rise in the rivers.

Not Much Fear of a Flood.

No unnecessary alarm need be felt by people from sensational reports of big floods coming, as there will be ample time to pre-pare for an innudation should it come. The telegraph and telephone wires are all work-ing without trouble.

There's always a bright side to a cold winter's day when the earth is a sheet of snow. The sleighs, with the gay, ringing voices and tinkling chime accompaniment, smoothly skimming over the shimmering surface, make up for the trouble brought surface, make up for the trouble brought about by shortage of gas and other viccissi-tudes. The East End avenues and Schen-ley Park were full of people out in any-thing bearing a semblance to a sleigh. Gay and festive couples, jolly parties of "chap-pies," owners of fast horses, were all out for a spin to the nearest roadhouse. But what an alteration when the daylight comes!

All over the city a shortage of gas was the cry. Scarcely a home had enough gas to keep out the biting cold. This was especially the case in some portions of the East Eacl. At Brushton, on the north side of Penn avenue, the gas was entirely cut off from over 400 houses, and there was a wild skirmish for coal.

WILD THERMOMETERS

In the Northeast and Nearby Towns Register From 2 Degrees Above to 30 Degrees Below, According to Their Veracity-Some Say the Coldest Weather in 18

ERIE, Jan. 20 .- [Special.]-The cold wave, while it has not deserted the West, has visited the Northeast in carnest. In all the neighboring towns last night the mercury dropped below zero. At Chicora thermometers registered 23° below zero, a drop of 600 in 12 hours. In some points in Harrison county, O., there are reports of ever 300 below.

Beaver Falls reports the coldest weather in 18 years, with to-night promising to be still colder. From 150 to 180 below is the record. Braddock comes to the front with 230 to 300 below. Steubenville, being more modest, chronicled 10° below. Gas for all purposes was short, and factories were obliged to shot down. At Cincinnati the cold weather culminated early this morning at 20 above zero. The ther-mometer quickly rose, and at 1 P. M. was 20° above.

A special telegram to the THE DISPATCH from Albany, N. Y., says: Zero tempera-ture prevails here and the Hudson, to the manifest delight of the ice men, is freezing. A day or so of this weather will permit the cutting of ice from the Erie canal between here and West Troy and elsewhere. It will take longer for the river proper to get in condition, as the water is high and the cur-The mercury here this morning indicated 40 below zero, its lowest notch during the day. Agents of large New York ice companies are already on the ground, ready to commence the ice harvest.

A LOSS TO LITERATURE.

Death of Christopher Cranch-A Preacher. Poet and Painter Passes Away-Remarkable Career of a Very Remarkably Gifted Man-Some of His Works. CAMBRIDGE, MASS., Jan. 20.-[Special.]

-Christopher Pearse Cranch, preacher, painter and poet, died here to-day. He was born in Alexandria, Va., March 8, 1813. His father, William Cranch, who was born in 1769, was one of the greatest jurists of his day. President Adams appointed him Junior Assistant Judge of the Circuit Court of the District of Columbia, and President Jefferson made him Chief Justice of the same court, which office he held for 50 years.

The son graduated at the School of Divinity at Cambridge in 1835, but retired after seven years in order to devote himself He went to Italy in 1846 and studied there for awo years. After that he went to Paris, where he lived and painted until 1863. He returned to New York then. and in the following year was elected a member of the National Academy. After 1871 he ceased contributing to the exhibitions, and in a little while laid aside his brush altogether. Among his paintings were the "October Afternoon," "Washing-were the "October Afternoon," "Washington Oak, Opposite Newburg," "Val de Moline, Amalh, Italv," "Roman Citizen," "Forest of Fontainebleau," "Nenpolitan Fisherman," "Venice" and "Venetian Fishing Boats."

Mr. Cranch's literary career began in 1840, when he contributed largely to The Dial, of Boston, then conducted by Margaret. He showed considerable shifty in Fuller. He showed considerable ability in his prose writing, and soon afterward, when his prose writing, and soon afterward, when he began writing poetry, displayed talent. His first book of poems was published in 1844. In this volume appeared for the first time his "Stanzas," which have found a firm place in American literature. In 1856 appeared "The Last of the Huggermug-gers." His most important productions after that were: "Kobboltozo" (1857); "Tales for Children," illustrated by him-self, a translation of the "Eneid" into blank verse (1872); "Satan, a Libretto" blank verse (1872); "Satan, a Libretto" (1874), and "The Bird and the Bell" (1875).
