Spurgeon and Beecher the Two Great Preachers of This Age.

PULPIT TOPICS FOR TO-MORROW.

A Continuance of Revival Services in City

Churches.

GLEANINGS FROM CHURCH FIELDS

The death of Spurgeon revives some memories of the olden time when the writer was attending the theological lectures in old Edinburgh town. In the years 1856 and 1857, Spurgeon was but 23 years of age, and the Scotch divines looked upon him as an upstart who would soon run his course. In spite of the adverse prognostications of old-timers Spurgeon managed to hold the fort triumphantly an entire generation.

When the religious history of those times the religious history of the religious history of the religious history of those times the religious history of the fort triumphantly an entire generation. When the religious history of those times is written up, Spurgeon and Beecher will cupy the front ranks as pulpit orators. It is doubtful if these men have ever been equaled in the line of pulpit oratory. The writer was privileged to hear the London and Brooklyn preachers the same season, and is free to say that no other preachers of this time have approached these men as re-gards the power to sway congregations.

NEWS. The Hackney Mercury announces its seventh problem tourney. It will be confined to original and unpublished twomovers, direct or self-mates. Problems (limited to two in each section, numbered in the supposed order of merit) to be sent to "Chess Editor. 101 Queen's-road, Dalston, N. E., London, by March 1, 1892. The adju-dication will be made by three experts. Mr. Amos Burn, the noted chess player, arrived in New York about a week ago, and arrived in New York about a week ago, and will remain in this country for some time. The Manhattan Chess Club, in lieu of the customary championship tournament, will hold five separate tournaments, one for each class. The winner of the first class section will be considered the club's champion for the coming year.

The return team match, Manhattan Chess Club against all New Jersey, was played on the 28th and resulted in favor of the Manhattans by 9½ to 6½.

The Canadian Chess Association is holding its annual meeting at Toronto.

Black-Martins. Black to move

And Martins won.

(a) Mr. Martins explains that with the London players of the last generation this defense was quite a favorite. It had been popularized by Mr. Seeley, then a veteran of 70, who had 50 years previously developed a taste for draughts under the tuition of the celebrated author, Joshua Sturges. Seeley and his cotemporaries used to meet at a hosselry in John street, Tottenham Court road, and at the Silver Lion, in Goodge street, where were provided tables three feet wide, furnished with checker men, each a work of art in solid ivory. At the time in question, the habitues were in the habit of practicing the "Laird and Lady" opening, and Seeley's 31-26 defense came in for no small share of attention. Mr. Way, then champlon of England, had caught the infection, and just as often as Martins forced the opening Way would pursue the new continuation with more or less success. Each had an instinctive notion that there was a weakness in the defense: but many a game was lost and won ere the frail point came to light.

(b) Anything else, and white is sure to get And Martins won.

(b) Anything else, and white is sure to get he better game.
(c) The expert will perceive that this move s practically forced.

(d) Extremely ingenious.

(e) Mr. Martins believes that the alternatives may be beaten easily.

(f) For a long time it was thought that this won outright. The course followed by Way evidently admits of no draw. But see evidently admits of no draw. But see note (j).

(g) The coup leaves black a man short; nevertheless he wins without difficulty.

(h) The whole game is a fine example of draughts scientifically played. "It is one of the nicest things I ever found out," says the veteran. "There was a time when I fondly imagined that my knowledge of the game's intricacies would have served in a championship encounter, but the time has now gone by."

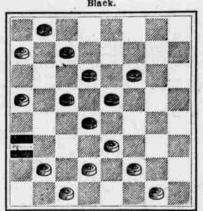

pionship encounter, but the time has now gone by."

(J.) Revert again to the position shown on the diagram. Theoretically the game may, perhaps, be drawn, although for all practical purposes black obtains so much the better position that his chances of winning preponderate. Mr. Martins sends the following figures illustrating white's weakness: 6-31 | *3-7 26-22 | 11-8 31-26 | 12-16 4-8 | 8-11 26-19 | 16-20 8-11 | 11-5

GAME NO. 242-DOUBLE CORNER. The following game took the second prize in the above competition, and was won by Charles Hefter, of Chicago, Ill.
Played at the Chicago Chess and Checker Club, December 7, 1891, between Mr. J. P. Reed, ex-Champion of America, and Charles Black, Mr. Reed; White, Mr. Hefter.

The diagram shows the position after the White (Hefter) to play and win. Note-The inverted piece represents black man.

It will be observed that, do what he may black cannot retrieve the game. He must submit to the very neat win which follows:

25-22 | 30-26 | 22-17 | 23-7 | 27-11 11-16 | 21-3) | 14-21 | 30-23 | W. won (a) Mr. Hefter explains that 7-11 at this stage would probably have won.

We give the above to our readers and critics from our esteemed cotemporary, and if our critics can do anything with them, we would like to hear from all as to their opinion of the awards.

GAME NO. 242-SWITCHER. Played in Wilkinsburg, between J. Mulhol-land and John George. Mr. Mulholland's move.

*Onty moves to draw.

(a) This move corrects Switcher game, as played between James Wyllie, world's champion, and J. C. Brown, of Altoona, exchampion of the State. Mr. Wyllie played 22-25, 30-21, and lost to Mr. Brown by the following play:

AN ANCIENT CHECKER PLAYER.

The "finds" of Egypt have often a special as well as a world-wide significance. The special historic interest as ar as this column is concerned, must give the naim to the extinct and embalmed Pharaoh, Rameses the extinct and embalmed Pharaoh, Rameses
11I. of the twentieth dynasty, who is supposed to have lived and enjoyed life some 1,200 years before the Christian era, and who was disinterred at the village of Buiak, a well-known suburb of Cairo, in the presence of the Khedive and his Ministers, the Turkh Polymer Ministers (Market Parket) of the Khedive and his Ministers, the Turkish Prime Minister (Mikhtar Pacha), Sir Henry Drummond Wolff and other notables. The occasion must have been to the Khedive one of unusual importance, as the circumstance would at once confront him with an historic ancestor of 3,000 years ago. Our reflections can hardly take form here, or we might pleture to ourselves the political and social conditions of Egypt during his dynasty, as it is affirmed with a considerable show of reason that he was a near descendant, possibly a son, of the celebrated Pharuch of holy writ, and may have seen with his own eyes Mosea, the great law-giver of the Hebrews. At all events it would be fresh listory in his time of the escape of the Hebrews from his country, and probably would view with regret the hardness of heart of his father, who would not give them their freedom, as we in this age contemplate his spare time in playing checkers with a favorite.

What game he is playing will ever remain a coundrum, as no record of any of Ramees' problems have come down to us. We fancy, however, that Wyllie or Farie, Freeman or Barker, would make short work of him. We shall not attempt to find out what openings were in vogue at that ancient time, but we are not without hope that something may yet be discovered to throw a ray of light upon the method then in fashion. Egypt is the cradie of much that has baffled the wisest of moderns, and we may after this safely conclude that the game of checkers was played in the land of the Nile when the Western nations had not emerged out of barbarism."—D. P., Week'y Magazine.

Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph: Freeman has never been defeated by either Wyllie or Barker. Further, there is not a checker player living who has ever won a bona fide sitting with the American. This is something for Colonel Keeney, of Kentucky, to smoke. Pull hard, brother.

We think that the editor of the Telegraph must have had smoke in his eyes when looking over Freeman's record, as he will find, if he takes the trouble to look, that on the 25th of May, 1885, a match was commenced between Heffrer and Freeman and was won by the former by the close score of 4 to 3 and II draws. The match was for a stake of $200 and the championship of America. "You have been pulling too hard, brother: may be your cirars are bad; come around and we will give you a good one."—E. W.
