Dr. Sutherland Speaks of the Present Opportunities of the Sex.

THEIR POWERFUL INFLUENCE.

One Minister Compares the Lives of Spurgeon and Fitzsimmons.

GLEANINGS FROM THE LOCAL PULPITS

At the Second Presbyterian Church last hight Rev. Dr. Sutherland preached to a large-congregation the first of a series of sermons to young women from the text: "Let her own works praise her in the gates." He said in introducing his theme: I have often thought that the pulpit was too allent about woman's distinctive duties and responsibilities. Occasionally something may be said about dress, but there is not enough said about questions and duties that cannot be discussed when we simply use the word man.

"The novelist, the lecturer and the writer of our periodical literature are permitted to exert an undue measure of influence upon the tank and character of her, who in turn gives tone and direction to the thought and took of the future. This, I take it, is largely the fruit of the special appeals made in their interest from Young Women Must Not Be Neglected. "I rejoice that the moral and spiritual storests of our young men are so near and dear to the heart of the Church, and instead of loing less, I would, if possible, have the Church do even more for them. But at the some time I don't want the young women to be neglected. We often hear it said that the young men are the hope of the Church. Admirring that to be true, it is no less true has the young women are the hope of the young men—I mean as to the influence they are capable of exercising and, as a matter of

It is a mellow, gentle igot. It may not dazzle as the sun does when he sweeps through the sky. But after all how gloomy the world would be without this light.

Her Work Not a Failure,

"Notwithstanding the disabilities under which she has labored, the work of woman has not been a failure in the past. Christ said of one woman, 'She hath done what slie could.' In the morning he took up the life of Spurgeon, and said he was one of the greatest men that have lived since the time of Paul. He said it was Christ working | the houses they require. through Spurgeon that made him great. He gathered 10,000 souls into the church and left a congregation of 6,000 members, but he areneles he left behind will carry on work, and though dead he yet lives. In the evening the minister spoke of Fitz-simmons, and took as his text, "A good man

"The lesson taught is that not so much "The lesson inught is that not so much depends on antecedents as on ourselves. Fitzsimmons had good parents; so had Spurgeon, but at the age of 15 he became a convert to Christianity. The other was a bad boy. It is a special lesson to parents and teachers on the necessity of securing salvation for the young.

"Young men who start upon a wicked life expect to stop, but they cannot. The down grade is not safe and the wild oats will crowd out the good. There is a harmony of moral character which if fixed one way remains. Those on the downward path become so mixed, so involved and entangled they are provided and entangled. they are powerless to escape. Every man is building for himself a meaument. Would you have yours graven with shame, murder, robbery, degredation, as is that of the sui-cide in New Orleans, or rather with the good works of Spurgeon? There was no good in Fitzsimmons. He was had at heart. Goodness will flow from a correct heart. The result of all good is the regenerating work of God in the human soul."

Great men as well as ob-scure men must die, good men as well as bad must meet the end. What one man can accomplish for God is shown in the career of Charles H. Spurgeon. It is singularly appropriate to dwell upon the life of this mighty Evangelistic creature at a time when our own and other churches are in the midst of special and revival work. Spurgeon was well born, in 1834 in the county of Essex, England, in a parsonage, and his parents lived to participate in the honor and witness the marvelous achievements of their son. He was well born the second time when he was converted in an humble, primitive Methodist meeting house when but 16 years of age. He im-mediately entered the ministry and became famous as the boy preacher. After a great struggle in the matter of doctrines he joined with the Baptists. His fame as a successful preacher reached London and before 20 years of age he was invited to take charge of a church that soon became too small for the vast audiences. The magnificent tabernacle in which he preached for more than a quarter of a cen-tury was constructed, and no minister has attracted such throngs as Sunday after Sunday crowded this temple of worship. It is difficult to analyze the the power of this great man. His versatility and resources

ONE MORE OUTBREAK

In the Polish Congregation Under the Care of Father Miskiewicz.

An Advisory Board Appointed Without the Priest's Sanction.

A VERY LIVELY MEETING HELD.

SOME SENSATIONAL CHARGES MADE

The trouble among the members of St. Adelbert's Polish Church congregation on South Fifth street, and the pastor, Rev. Father Miskiewicz, which originated about a month ago, and which it was thought had been settled, has broken out afresh. The trouble originally grew out of the fact that a foreign priest who was here to raise funds for church purposes in Russia had been given preference over Rev. Father Pigulski, the assistant pastor at St. Adelbert's. The Bishop was appealed to and he settled the strife by sending the Russian priest to Cincinnati. It has since transpired that Father Mfskiewicz took more radical measures to settle all dissen-sions and promptly dismissed seven mem-bers of the Church's Advisory Committee as they had taken a prominent part in the row. This caused more indignation than ever, and the result was a split in the con-

The opposition to Father Miskiewicz called a meeting yesterday afternoon at Odd Fellows' Hall, South Eighteenth street. One of the circulars was sent to Father Miskiewicz, and on the back of it was written an invitation for him to attend the meeting and hear himself denounced. There was also a certain sentence written that madthe priest very angry and caused him to call ou Magistrate Succop to see if he could not have the perpetrators arrested. The Mag-istrate, however, advised the priest against such a step.

The meeting of yesterday afternoon was largely attended, over 500 of the male members of the congregation being present. The meeting was presided over by Victor Muckle. When it was called to order it was noticed that the audience was a mixed one, about half of them being sympathizers with Father Miskiewicz, who showed their loyalty to him by hissing nearly every speaker and trying to break the meeting up in a row. At times it looked as though a fight would result, but this was averted by the officer on duty ejecting one of the men who insisted on interrupting the speakers. The meeting was conducted in Polish, and those in charge said that they would give nothing for publication. It was learned, however, that the object of the meeting was to appoint an Advisory Committee of 12 and then compel Father Miskiewicz to accept it. One of the members present claimed to have a letter from Bishop Phelan, in which he advised that the committee be selected by the congregation, and that the priest had no right or authority to select the com-mittee. There were a number of speeches made in the Polish language, and among the speakers was William Sepshuki, who, it is said, made some damaging statements against Father Miskiewicz relative to the finances of the church. He also charged him with neglecting his duties as a pastor and placing too much responsibility on the assistant pastor.

At the conclusion of the meeting those present were requested to sign a petition urging Father Miskiewicz to accept the Ad-visory Committee appointed at the meeting.
