to Youths by Andrew Carnegie. DBLIGATIONS OF WEALTHY MEN

To the Community and the Sacred Trust Imposed Upon Them.

WHY RICHES SHOULD NOT BE HOARDED

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.-The first in the series of Sunday evening lectures to young men to be given in the Church of the Divine Paternity, Fifth avenue and Fortyfifth street, was delivered last evening by Andrew Carnegie. His subject was "Young Men and Business Life; or, the Gospel of Wealth." Mr. Carnegie met a fine audience. Every seat on the main floor of the church and in the galleries was occupied. It seemed a little odd to look upon Mr. Carnegie occupying the pulpit of the late Dr. Chapin. But he was well supported. and if he had become embarrassed in his effort any one of the five gentlemen sitting behind him could have come forward and meritoriously filled the part of a sort of understudy. These were Rev. Charles H. Eaten, pastor of the church; Rev. Dr. Robert Collyer, Sir Edwin Arnold, George Gunton and John Bartholomew.

Mr. Carnegie's address was delivered in an off-hand, conversational manner, and at times the disposition to applaud proved to be uncontrollable. But it was all forgiven by general consent. Mr. Eaton introduced the speaker, and at the close of the address made some supplemental remarks. Then, alluding to the representative character of those on the platform in the matter of nativity, and the fact that the national hymn of England, of Germany and of America was set to the same music, he proposed that the congregation should sing "My Native Country, "Tis of Thee," which was done with thrilling effect.

Accumulated Wealth the Slave. Here are some of the more striking things which the millionaire said in the course of his address:

"Accumulated wealth, which, by a fiction, we call the property of one, has become the slave of all, at work day and night promot-ing the general wealth of the community. Unless it be noarded in the form of jewels or the precious metals it is impracticable to devise any mode of using it which will not promote the general good. Small sums, no doubt, can be wasted, but great wealth to-day, under our conditions, must inevitably be kept at work chiefly for the benefit of the masses, whether its nominal owners desire it or not. This was exactly the reverse in ancient times, when it was hoarded for selfish, miserly ends, which aroused the hostility of the early teachers to its necumulation. Their opposition has little bearing upon the question to-day, since wealth, under present conditions, is no longer primarily for the individual, but for the people, and cannot be diverted from working in their behalf.

"The gospel of wealth is comprised in a few words. Surplus wealth is a sacred trust which its possessor is bound to administer in his lifetime for the good of the com-munity from which it was derived. It teaches that the man who dies possessed of millions of available wealth, which was free and his to administer during his lifetime, dies disgraced.

"It recognizes, of course, that men must keep their capital in business as long as they labor, for capital is the tool by which they work wonders; but beyond the capital necessarily so employed the aim of the millionaire should be to die poor. The use of surplus wealth for objects which commend themselves to the administrator as the best calculated to promote the genu-ine improvement of his fellows is believed to be the best possible solution of the ques-tion of wealth and poverty. Those into whose hands surplus wealth flows thus become trustees and administrators of the

The Proper Use for Wenlth,

"The only proper use of wealth is to administer it carefully in helping men and women to help themselves. He who gives to a beggar of whose conduct he knows nothing probably commits one of the worst actions of his life, for he has in all probability encouraged sloth and drunkenness, and by so much as he has encouraged these he has discouraged sobriety and industry, he has rewarded vice and punished virtue. His act is in no sense creditable, even to his heart, to say nothing of his judgment. It is done to relieve his own feelings, not to benefit his brother, and must rank as a thoroughly selfish act, done in violation of the dictates of stern duty.
"The question arises: How are the hoarders who evade the gospel of wealth to be reached—those who fail to administer their surplus as a trust for the good of their We must let the worker alone during his life, but after his death the State should step in and demand its share of his hoard, through a graduated system of taxation. Every fortune left by a hoarder should contribute to the State in proportion to its size small amounts left those dependent upon the decedent being exempt, but the scale rising by steps until with enormous fortunes reaching into many millions it should be decreed that 'one-half goes to the privy coffers of the State."

"This is the proposition which the laws of Venice exacted from her Shylock. Our modern Shylocks should be made to contribute at least as much."

Causes Preventing Great Fortunes. "Another cause prevents the growth of great individual fortunes. I refer to corporations, limited liability companies. We porations, limited Hamilty companies, hear much of a few individuals who are supposed to own the railway system of America. This is a great mistake. The New York Central Railway in this State, between New York and Buffalo alone, for instance, is owned by more than 10,000 people. The Pennsylvania Railroad between Philadelphia and Pittsburg is owned by a greater anuber than it employs. "So it is with the entire railway systems of the world. Our banks are owned by thou-sands of shareholders; there is scarcely a manufacturing or transportation, commercial and mining company in the world which is not the property of thousands of people of moderate means. The number of widows and orphans and of estates interested in these is surprising. In several cases which I have investigated these amount to one-quarter, and in some cases to one-third of the total capital.

"While man's necessities and the desire for wealth have up to this time, and are today, the great incentive and mainspring of day, the great incentive and mainspring of progress, yet there has always been another incentive, the desire for fame, a higher motive than that of gain. In the breast animated by ambition, the desire for wealth has no place. We have lawyers superior to considerations of wealth, we have few that we have few and the man not so. Man who shows judges who are not so. Men who choose the noble career of teaching can have no intense desire for wealth, Exceptional Individuals Left the Race. The medical profession is renowned for self-atmenation and devotion to the holy cause of the alleviation of human misery. Statesmen, generally, have a wholesome contempt for wealth. It is certain that a man anxious to become wealthy would never choose the ministerial profession. Indeed, the whole range of the professions may be said to have already risen beyond the low plane of those who find their incentive in the desire to accumulate wealth, "Still higher than this, we rejoice to hail the dawn of a day brightened by the pres-ence of many men who labor for neither wealth nor fame, but for the good they can accomplish. There are gifted natures in every land to-day whose first thought is, how can I serve my fellowmen? and who devote their lives to such service. A few gifted natures in every calling have already reached this great height, from which they

GOLD can look down upon the temptations of wealth, and even of fame, as men

Who prize the lightning deed, Nor heed the thunder following after, Which men call fame.

"These cheering facts justify us in believing that a nobler incentive than wealth or fame may ultimately be found for the en-tire race; but if so, it will be a natural development of forces which, as we see, are at work producing great fruits. The race is lifted by its exceptional individuals. It is the tallest tree in the forest which first catches the rays of the rising sun, and where these most gifted and exceptional natures now are, we may hope the great mass will some day reach; but that day has not yet arived, and we must take care not to disturb the foundation upon which we stand until another and secure foundation is slowly evolved."

WOMEN ARE BARRED OUT.

Female School Teachers Not at a Premium In the Townships.

They say revolutions never go backward, but the school directors of Robinson township have decided that women cannot govern schools, at least that is what a citizen of the township says. They have in-creased salaries to $60, but God's last creation "isn't in it."

The question as to woman's fitness to rule seems likely to become a leading one again in the rural districts, notwithstanding her triumphs in the city, where she finds the highest educational positions in the People's colleges open to her. It is complained in many places in the county that women are unable to hold their own.

In a school in Moon township one man complains that the insubordination is such that his boy was pulled down stairs on one occasion by the heels and on another that older boys caught him and set him in a rain harrel, and he complains that even the and barrel, and he compliants that even the haly feacher's protest was not as vigorous as became the occasion. It is also related that a man named Jordan visited the Sharon school a few days since and was invited to address it; that he complied, but was forced to desist on account of the pupils

Fortunately the country roads are getting so bad that offensive operations cannot be carried on vigorously, and the temper of combatants of all shades of opinion will have time to cool before they can meet in battle array.

A WAIL FROM PASSENGER MEN.

Blaine's Withdrawal Knocks Out Business to Minneapolis.

Next to the politicians and the keen admirers of Blaine, there is not another class of people more disappointed over his second declination than the passenger agents. The withdrawal of Blaine knocks considerable interest out of the coming convention, and it is now feared that outside of the delegates hardly a corporal's guard will go to Minneapolis. This is what makes the agents, who had counted on breaking records and carrying big crowds, very blue over the prospect. It was a sad wail that rose in chorus yesterday from a dozen throats. They were all passenger men, of

It is argued that the only hope of the railroads is a lively row in the rival camps The boys are wondering whether Quay and Clarkson will stick to Alger. If they do, the General ought to have a good follow ing. It makes the passenger agents, how-ever, very weary to think that they have to begin all over again. Contracts were about to be made with Blaine clubs in all parts of the country, but it is not thought for a mo-ment now that they will go to Minneapolis. It is conceded on all sides that the twin cities of Minnesota will be able to handle the small crowd that will attend the convention.

THE VALLEY REORGANIZED.

Are After the Buffalo Connection The work of reorganizing the Allegheny Valley Road has been completed in Philadelphia. It was necessary to change the name to get a new charter, and hereafter it will be called the Allegheny Valley Railway. Nothing remains to be done but transfer the stock and bonds. The local officials have been assured that no changes will be made, and the business has been going on as usual. One of the officers re-marked that the Pennsylvania people owned the road before, and when it pas into their hands in fact the same condi-into their hands in fact the same condi-tions existed as in previous years.

The report is denied that the Pennsyl-vania road is after the connection from Oil City to Buffalo. This end of the line once belonged to the Allegheny Valley, and it was thrown up as unprofitable on account of the heavy grades, which are still there. The traffic arrangements with the Buffalo. The traffic arrangements with the Buffalo connection are very satisfactory, and it is claimed that the Pennsylvania wouldn't be any better off if they bought the line than they are at present. Valley officials re-marked that it takes more than a farming community to support a railroad.

Getting Less Goods From Germany.

BERLIN, Feb. 8 .- As an illustration of the decline in the amount of exports from Germany to the United States, due to operations of the new American tariff law, it may be mentioned that statistics just issued show the total of exports to that country from the United States Consular District of Frankfort-on-the-Main to be $37,390,000 for 1891, as against $43,030,000 for 1891.

A SWEET, firm, light body, a crisp deli-cious crust that tastes of wheat—that is a loaf of bread made from Minnehaha flour.

A Cry of Despair.

Yesterday morning a startling cry was heard from an East End residence. On in-vestigation it was found to have been caused by the cook finding her baking had gone wrong. Many another cook has made the same sad discovery. If they would only learn to use "Camellia," the Queen of Flour, their despair would become a smile of satisfaction. Ask your grocer for it,

As wheat is the perfection of cereals, so As wheat is the perfection of flours.

Ehlers to Inspect the High School.

The Allegheny High School Committee was to have met last night but failed to secure a quorum. The members present spent some time in examining the cracks in the new High School building and decided to ask Chief Ehlers, of the Department of Public Works, to take some steps in the matter. The Printing Committee was also to have held a meeting but failed to secure a concern
