And There's a Revolution in the Ranks of New York's 400.

W. M'ALLISTER DEFINES SWELLS

and Talks About the Leaders of the Set and the Latest Idiocies.

GROVER'S WIFE IN THE BOURGEOISIE

STECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH. NEW YORK, Feb. 10.-The "400" of New York have dwindled to 150. A war of abolition in fashiouable life, with all its attendant vendettas of family iralousies, is the sensation that has been keeping clubrooms and boudoirs in an uproar for the past week. There are great fortunes with little names and great names with little fortunes involved, and the Napoleon of this social Mafia is Ward McAllis-

The "400" were entirely amicable over breakfasts, luncheons and teas, but it was over the dinner table that the abolition first started. The first to throw the gauntlet down were the great names with little fortunes-the blue-blooded ancestry of Puritan origin who were born with tact, brains and small incomes supported by unlimited self esteem, and old family portraits in oil. Of course, some of the little names with great fortunes were patronized by the great names without fortunes, and they joined the an-cestral prodigies. There was no sudden clash of sentiment, no rade or vulgar words, no outward bombardment. The "400" disagreed, as ladies and gentlemen will disagree, with the rarified atmosphere that belongs to high altitudes.

McAllister Talks on the Social Situation. In Ward McAllister's opinion, the whole thing is pure snobbery, but then this is a case where the everlasting fall of the "400" is imminent. A reporter who called on him to get the facts about this disintegration in the social camp found him engrossed in thought. Since he has joined the Immor-tals in authorship his pen has been ever ready in the interests of society, and his first greeting had a professional flavor that was flattering. , You see, my deah boy, I write articles myself now, and if I sav anything I give you my thunder." He placed the reporter upon a footing of rivalry that it took some time to convince him was out of the question. When subsequently he thundered, it was with a freedom and ease that he has long withheld from the interviewer.

"Do you think the '400' are increasing their ranks?" was asked. their ranks?" was asked.

"Well, you know, there have always been 450 swells. Such a number has never been gathered together at any one of the great entertainments, however."

From the archives of his desk he drew several account books. "At the last New Year's hall," he continued, "there were said 210 cm. Ill. except."

only 319 swells present."
"Eighty-one of the '400' missing?" was "No, not exactly that, you see-some had seceded; they always will, you know. A lady once said to me, Why not invite a thousand people? That would be impossible. The 50 gentlemen, don't you see, would never allow it."

Gold and Blood at War. "Is there not a split in the '400?" "

"No, I would not say that. A certain lot of people have conceived the notion that the moneyed classes in society are encrosching upon the old families. The new rich, with their power of wealth and with one great ambition—social prominence— were to be met with everywhere at dinner parties and balls afterward. Some of them were charming people, the others were not, and some of them belonged to the '400.'" "Then there was a disagreement?"

"Well, it appears so, and it has taken the erm this winter of what is kn dinner dance, don't you see?"
"What is a dinner dance?"

"Au American shy at exclusiveness. ladies have formed a sort of select club where, when one gives a dance the other five give dinner parties. These dinner parties are limited to 30 quests." Which makes the 150?"

"Exactly."
"Then some of the 400 are excluded?" "Undoubtedly. Its the new and exclu-ve set. To my mind I don't approve of it. I think it is mere snobbery to shut out any of the real swells—you understand." The Real Swell of To-Day Defined.

"What is a real swell?" "Men and women of tact, wealth and family are the fashionables."

"Does money constitute the principal requirement of social success?"

"It used to, but it does not carry so far in New York now. There are so many people with money, don't you know. Of course in some cases money has bought everything."
"Has money made Mrs. Bradley Martin's

Well, you see, Mrs. Bradley Martin has been literally embraced by society. She has succeeded because she is an active worker. She is a short, quick little woman, with a pretty face. She was a Miss Sherman, and, her father was a famous statistician, who dealt only in first mortgage bonds. He left her an enormous fortune, much more than people believe probably an income of $400 .-000 a year, and she spends almost $300,000

"Is she one of the 150?"
"Well, she belongs to the '400' undoubtedly," replied Mr. McAllister, evasively.

"And Mrs. Paran Stevens?"
"She is swell, of course, though I remember at a time in Boston when she was not received in society. The English people made her success. She was a very hand-some woman and very correct. She is a brilliant talker and a vary daring one."

Will Fill the Eyes, No: the Stomach, "Is she of the chosen few?" "I suppose so, though she does very little grand entertaining. She throws open her house, and if you're a distinguished person you can walk around it, but she rarely gives you anything to eat, a little appolinaris water perhaps; but that's the Parisian style of entertainment, where you talk and drink "Has Mrs. Whitney joined the 150?"

"She is one of the '400,' but attained her position through her husband's position as Secretary of the Navy."
"Then who are the six leaders of this new exclusive dinner dance brigade?"

"They are good entertainers. Let me see; there's Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt. She gives an excellent dinner and I mention her first. Her wines are the best te be had in New York. Then Mrs. Townsend Burden, next Mrs. Ogden Mills."

"And Mrs. William Astor?"

'Yes, I should place her the fourth in order, because her dinners are abundant and very decorative. Mrs. William D. Sloane and Mrs. George Bowdoin conclude the list. Mrs. Edward Cooper also gives a fine old-fashioned dinner. At any of the houses mentioned you can enjoy a dinner as good as if you were dining with the best in Paris Mrs. Cleveland Is Not in It.

"How is it that Mrs. William Astor had 550 people present at her last ball?"
"It was an annual affair, you see, and the Astors have always been extremely polite. Mrs. John Jacob Astor was even more liberal than her daughter."
"Has Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Jr., joined

"She is a social success of course. Her-"She is a social success of course. Herbeauty and her manners have made her a great society star. I doubt, however, whether she has much social ambition, and I do not think that she would take up the position which her mother-in-law holds today in society. It takes a woman with great administrative ability."

"Is Mrs. Grover Cleveland a society woman, in your opinion."

woman, in your opinion."

"I should hardly say so. Society just left her alone, that's all. I don't think her BLOOD REJECTS GOLD husband desired any great social excitement for her in New York. She never dressed for it, don't you know."

"Then political success does not always lead to social success?"

"Rarely. Fashionable people, however, take an enormous interest in political men. D. B. Hill is looked upon by society in New York as a veritable Napoleon. His political talents are a wonder to them, but he has not been invited to their houses."

A LITTLE GIRL'S PATAL SMOKE.

Her Clothes Ignite From Her Cigarette and She is Cremsted

KINGSTON, N. Y., Feb. 10 .- [Special.]-One of the most frightful accidents that has taken place here in some time occurred today in that section of the city known as Ponckhockie. Mrs. Mary Doolan stepped out of her home for a few minutes, leaving her 9-year-old daughter Josie in the kitchen. Scarcely had she reached the yard before she heard the screens of her child, and rushed back only to find her enveloped in flames. She seized the little one in her arms and endeavored to extinguish the flames, when, almost in a moment, she was herself on fire. Half frantic, she rushed for the street, dropping the child in her haste. Mrs. Doolan made her way across the street to the house of a neighbor, where she sank un-conscious to the floor. Her head, arms and hands were badly burned and blistered.

The charred remains of Josie were found on the kitchen floor. They were in such condition as to necessitate immediate burial. Mrs. Doolan is in a critical condi-tion to-night and her recovery is doubtful. The real cause of the accident is not known. It is said that the child had made a paper cigarette and was smoking it when her clothes caught fire from a spark. The father is a hard working man in the employ of the Newark Lime and Cement Company.
