

Railroad Company, received congratulatory letters from various sources, and among others from the Philadelphia Produce Exchange and the Commercial Exchange.

THE OLIVE BRANCH

Held Out by Leading Allegheny Reformers, Who Announce They Are

NOT SEEKING VENGEANCE, But Merely Working for the Best Interests of the City.

WYMAN STILL HOLDING THE FORT.

The Trial of Ex-Mayor Pearson Promptly Ends in Acquittal.

CANDIDATES WHO ARE IN THE FIELD

James G. Wyman is still Mayor of Allegheny. There is no way of removing him save that outlined in THE DISPATCH yesterday.

Says the Cases Are Not Parallel. "His two cases, which he says are in point, are those of the Beech Creek and of the South Penn. In the first case the Beech Creek Railroad was built into the cleared-off coal regions for the purpose of competing with lines belonging to his company, in carrying bituminous coal from the Major "Rush" K. Tyler yesterday found an old act of Assembly by which he thought he would settle the difficulties. It provided that in case of removal of the Mayor the President of Select Council should act in his stead, and that Councils should at once order an election to fill the vacancy.

As for the Mayor himself, he refused to state whether that course he would pursue. He said he was not prepared to talk at present. John S. Robb, one of his attorneys, said yesterday that it was probable that a new trial would be asked for, and also that the case was likely to go to the Supreme Court.

As for the Mayor himself, he refused to state whether that course he would pursue. He said he was not prepared to talk at present. John S. Robb, one of his attorneys, said yesterday that it was probable that a new trial would be asked for, and also that the case was likely to go to the Supreme Court.

The Reformer's Not After Vengeance. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

Several Townships Yesterday Asked for a Reduction in Assessments. The County Commissioners yesterday heard appeals from the assessments made in North Fayette, South Fayette and Indiana townships and Wilmering borough.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

MANY DEMANDS MADE

By a Lively Citizens' Meeting Held in the Fourteenth Ward.

CANDIDATE RODGERS INDORSED.

Considerable Activity Displayed in the East End Districts.

FEATURES OF THE CLOSING CAMPAIGN

A meeting of citizens of the Fourteenth ward was held in the Bellefield school-house last night to nominate a ticket for Tuesday, Mr. George R. Kim, presided.

When the verdict was announced there was some applause, and Judge Porter ordered the lobby cleared. Commodore Rodgers and J. P. Beitel were forwarded, and the former admitted applauding, saying he was carried away by his feelings. He apologized and departed.

Clerk McMaster, in defense of the methods in the Treasurer's office last night, said: "The method of issuing warrants is that the person who sets one must first get an order for it from the Controller, then secure the warrant from the Commissioners, and have it countersigned by the Controller and then present it at the Treasurer's office.

When the verdict was announced there was some applause, and Judge Porter ordered the lobby cleared. Commodore Rodgers and J. P. Beitel were forwarded, and the former admitted applauding, saying he was carried away by his feelings. He apologized and departed.

WANTS $25,000 DAMAGES. M. F. Pritchard, the Lawrenceville Grocer, whose Store and Dwelling Were Destroyed on Christmas, Enters Suit Against the Philadelphia Company for That Amount.

Milton F. Pritchard yesterday entered suit against the Philadelphia Company for $25,000 damages. Pritchard states that on December 25, 1891, a gas explosion occurred at 2015 Smallman street, and destroyed his house and grocer's stand, and also injured him severely, injuring him.

Just as the bells were ringing the advent of Christmas Mr. Pritchard went to the cellar to get a basket he had prepared for one of his customers, when the explosion occurred and in a second the building, which was a three-story brick, was a magnificent wreck.

Twentieth Ward Indignants Issue Circular on Organization. A meeting of the citizens of the Twentieth ward was held last night. The following circular, addressed by M. A. Woodward, George Heard and Thomas Liggett to the tax and rent payers of the Twentieth ward was issued:

The many growing evils in the administration of our city, and the expenditure of money, rapidly increasing taxation, and the fact that the tax and rent payers are being burdened with a large part of the cost of the city, makes it imperative that prompt action be taken to reform the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

WILL BE HELD BACK.

Not Much Chance for an Early Appropriation Ordinance.

ONE WARD CAUSES THE TROUBLE.

The Finance Committee Feels to Move Till All is Certain.

ASSESSORS REVISING VALUATIONS

The prospects are that the appropriation ordinance will not be passed before the middle of March. This will leave about two weeks in which people can pay six days with the 5 per cent discount.

The Finance Committee must have an estimate from the Board of Assessors on the taxable valuation of city property before it can frame the appropriation ordinance and fix the millage. This year, when all valuations are changed by the triennial assessment, it is not safe to make any estimates until the work of the assessors is complete.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

WANAMAKER WON'T RESIGN.

His Relations With the President the Most Cordial—Captain Baker Says Mrs. Faxon is Booming Her Husband at Washington.

ONE WARD CAUSES THE TROUBLE.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.

THE REFORMERS' NOT AFTER VENGEANCE. As another evidence of a willingness to forego vengeance, the interview with John R. Henricks, in which he claims that what is wanted now is not vengeance but a unity of the people and an administration of municipal affairs for the good of the city.