A suit was commenced in the United States Court by Dennis Sullivan, as receiver of the company, to call President C. H. ing-No Freeze Out.

BROOKLYN, Feb. 12 .- The Criterion Theater was where the indignant Democrats of the City of Churches to-night poured fourth their protests against the socalled "Freeze Out" Convention of the Democratic State Committee. Augustus Healy, the Chairman, opened the meeting and his scathing rebuke of Mr. Hill and his followers was cheered at every point, and there were repeated cheers for Grover Cleveland, Mr. Healy introduced Edward M. Shepard as Chairman, Mr. Shephard spoke in severe condemnation of the act of the Hill Democrats such an early convention and ended with this statement, that the committee of 25 having in charge the meeting was not putting itself on record for any one man for the Presidency. It had come out for home rule, sound money, tariff reform, a fair field and open discussion. Some one remarked, toward the close of the speech, hat David B. Hill could wait until 1896 and Mr. Shepard smiled. Mr. Shepard was followed by John Dewitt Warner, whose speech was the principal one of the evening. Mr. Warner first dealt with the defeat Mills for the speakership. He said that he was beaten by a combination of those who were opposed to the management under which the Democratic party had succeeded, of which combination the New York State Democratic organization, directed by Gov-ernor Hill, was a powerful factor. Whatver may have been the motives of others,

Mr. Warner stated that in his opinion Hill's plan, as defined by his Elmira speech, was to call a halt in tariff reform and to bring free coinage to the front. How well he succeeded was shown by subacquirent evenus. The speaker said that the people did right to protest against the midwinter convention. said, only the last and crowning crime of a long series that the present Dem-ocratic State organization had committed, and he took it that the meeting meant that the people were not going to merely repudiate the convention now called, but to give notice that they would visit with political leath any man or organization that dares thus to forge the names of the New York Elemonracy.

The resolutions adopted protest against the call for the early convention "because it seeks to subordinate the intelligence and conscience of the masses of the Democratic party to the operations of ingenious politimechanism and management, and because a triumph of such management would discredit the party and its principles and threaten serious disaster."

Spink, the magistrate asked Ars. Usborne if she had anything to say concerning the charges sgainst her. She, in a very faint voice, answered, "No." The prisoner was then formally committed for trial. Forced to Push the Case.

It was very evident in the court room today that neither Major Hargreave nor his wife entertain the least ill feeling toward Mrs. Osborne; on the contrary they plainly showed that they were doing their best to help that unfortunate lady to escape the legal consequences of her acts. As a matter of fact the Hargreaves have never displayed any animosity toward Mrs. Osborne, and they have been among her most earnest

Major Hargreaves had declared that he and his wife would leave England before they appear as witnesses against their triend, but it appears that the Treasury prevented them from carrying this inten-

Osborne engaged in a cordial and earnes conversation in the courtroom, and it could be seen that the representatives of the Har-greaves were as solicitous for the welfare of Mrs. Osborne as were the representative of that lady themselves.

When during the course of the hearing the pearls which have been the cause of all the trouble were produced in evidence Mrs. Osborne broke down completely. Her body shook convulsively and from her eyes there poured a flood of bitter tears. Mrs. Hargreaves herself was more than touched by The depression of the mining industries the misery of her friend. Osborne in the law courts during the pro-gress of the libel suit she stood and glared fiercely at her. This, however, was but a temporary exhibition of feeling, due en-attempt of Mrs. Osborne to retain the love and respect of her husband and friends, and she almost acknowledges now that in view of the noble character of Captain Osborne she does not blame Mrs. Osborne for wanting to appear innocent in his eyes. To-day as Mrs. Hargreave passed
