DALZELL'S SPEECH BEST, OF ALL.

Mr. Claggett Presses His Own Claim for a Seat in the Senate.

HE MAKES AN EXCELLENT IMPRESSION.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 36 .- The Democrats increased their majority in the House of Representatives by one to-day. This addition to the already overwhelming Democratic majority was by no means necessary to ensure a freer working of the party organization, but Andrew Stewart, of the Twenty-fourth Pennsylvania district, was unseated, and Alexander K. Craig, his Democratic contestant, declared the regularly elected representative. Although two days' debate was required to bring about this result, party lines were not at all closely drawn, and Mr. Stewart at least derives some satisfaction from the fact that certain Democrats were among those who maintained his right to represent the Twenty-fourth district. The arguments for the most part wer quite monotonous, the most stirring speech of the day being that of Representative Dalzell, of Pennsylvania, in behalf of his unfortunate Republican colleague. It availed little, however, for after speeches by Messrs Moore, of Texas, and O'Ferrall, of Virginia in favor of the contestant, and that of Mr. Dalzell in favor of the contestee, Mr. O'Ferrall demanded the previous question. It was ordered without opposition. The first vote was on the minority resolu-tion confirming the right of Stewart to his seat, and it was defeated-Yeas, 58; nays,

The majority resolution scating Craig was adopted without division, and Mr. Craig appeared at the bar of the House and took the oath of office. Mr. Cockran, of New York, and Mr. Babbitt, of Wisconsin, voted in favor of the Republican contestee.

A great deal of humorous comment was made by members of the House, during the consideration of this case, upon a rather singular coincidence. On February 26, 1890, the Republican majority of the House of the Fifty-first Congress called up the con-tested election case of Atkinson against Pendleton, from the First district of West Virginia, and upon the following day Mr. Pendleton was ousted from his sent, and Mr. Atkinson was duly installed as a mem-ber of the House. To-day, while the House was considering the Penusylvania contested election case of Craig versus Stewart, Mr. Pendleton was called to the chair amid merriment, and wielded the gavel during the discussion. Two years ago Mr. Pen-dleton was taking leave of his colleagues; to-day he was presiding over the delibera

At the close of Mr. Vance's speech the conference report on the census deficiency bill was presented and agreed to, and a bill was reported and placed on the calendar appropriating $200,000 for a public building at Boise City, Idaho. The Idaho election case was then again taken up, and Mr. Claggett, the contestant, was presented to the Senate by Mr. Stewart, and recognized by the presiding officer as entitled (under vesterday's resolution) to address the desk and slowly, distinctly and in a clear, musical tone of voice began his speech. He thanked the Senate on behalf of the State which he represented for the privilege extended to him, not so much to present any personal claim as to vindicate the action of the State of Idaho in holding a second elec-tion in the month of February, 1891, and sending him to the Senate to represent that State. If there was nothing in the controversy except the mere question as to whether the sitting member or himself was entitled to the controverted seat he would not have ventured to ask the privilege of presenting the reasons why the controversy should be determined in the manner reported by the minority of the committee. It was because there were matters involved in the controversy compared with which the personal fortunes of any man were abso-lutely immaterial, that the privilege had been solicited and had been granted.

Every State Interested. The question involved did not only affect the State of Idaho, continued Mr. Claggett. It not only affected that State, but it affected the boast of the American people that they lived under a Government of law, and if that were so, then it was absolutely neces say that in all parts of the common domain, and, above all, in the Senate, the highest and most conservative legislative body to be found on the earth, the laws should be vindicated and their substantial request be Mr. Claggett went on to discusss the de-was occupied instening and replying to these questions that the limit of time was, on motion of Mr. Vance, withdrawn, and he was permitted to speak without any time limitation. His argument appeared to interest Senators very much, and they listened to it on both sides of the Chamber with mer charactization. They was also with very close attention. There was also a large audience in the galleries to listen to a large audience in the galleries to listen to the speech. He created general laughter when he wound up a description of Mr. Dubois' election tactics by saying that, to use a Western phrase, the sitting member was bound to "Get there, Eli." After he had spoken about two hours, but without finishing his speech, Mr. Claggett yielded the floor, and the Idaho case went or without setter. A bill convergence in the Criticism That Was Expected. The Secretary said there was no rule on the subject.
