THE PITTSBURG DISPATCH, MONDAY, FEBRUARY 29, 1892

A Few Hints to Mr. Springer.

l do not propose to discuss here the sub-ject of free silver. With all deference to the judgment of my friend Mr. Springer, who thinks the people of the United States need farther enlightenment on it, I think they know pretty much all that can be said on both sides of the question, and that when-ever they get an opportunity to express their views upon it they will do so intelli-rently. All that I wish to say now is that, in my opinion, business depression cannot be cured by legislation, either in regard to currency or to anything else. Whenever it occurs it is due to causes beyond human con-trol, and whenever it ceases it ceases as the result of a matural process. The Berliners, who marched in procession to the Emperor's castle last week to force him to find work for them by an Imperial edict, were not more deluded than are theorists in this country who takey that men may be compelled by inclined to. This really is what most of the talk about fegislation upon the subject of the currency means. The agriculturalist finds that, owing to large crops and limited consump-tion, the price of his produce is low, as wheat was a year ago and as cotton is this year; ite manufacturer discovers that he and his fellow manufacturers cannot sell as many on both sides of the question, and that whenthe manufacturer discovers that he and his follow manufacturers cannot sell as many proofs as they had been selling heretofore; the merchant complains of a want of brisk demand for his wares, and the retail dealer's sales fall off in like manner. Naturally, this state of things is unpleasant, and the vis-tims are disposed to welcome any proposi-tion to change it for the better. If they would consult their own memory, and take counsel of their common sense, they would see that their experience is no unprece-dented novelty, that it has occurred often before, and that it has been as often suc-cueded by one more agreeable.

Important Factors in Business.

business, as in religion, politics and every other department of human activity. every other department of numan activity, shaft ich and imagination are more potent factors than is generally supposed. The ups and downs of the stock market exhibit their influence more clearly than the slower and influence more clearly than the slower and less conspicuous fluctuations of general trade, but not more certainly. There are times when almost everybody feels like spending money liberally in new houses, new furniture, new clothing, social display and entertainments, books, pictures, travel and amusements, as well as in new com-mercial and manufacturing enterprises. When this is the case, business is good. After a while men get tired of this line of proceeding and begin to rest on their oars. Then prices-which had previously risen under an active demand-fall, trade lan-guishes, profits diminish, and there is a gen-eral complaint of hard times. Very often the revulsion is occasioned, or at least pre-cipitated, by matural causes, such as bad harvests like that of last year in Europe; the breaking down of imprudent investments on a large scale like that of the Barings and other bankers in Argentine enterprises, or by floods, fires and nestliences which deher bankers in Argentine enterprises, or v floods, fires and pestlences which de-rov property and life and thus diminish to wealth or the wealth-producing power the wealth or the wealth-producing power of the world. But as legislation cannot make good weather, impart prudence to business men or ward off disease, it is idle to appeal to it to remove the real causes of business de-pression. Human laws are equally impotent to rouse or to dampen men's spirits, and efforts to make them do it have always proved futile and always will.

Temporary Stimulus to Trade.

It is true that the expansion of the currency and the inflation of prices conser-mounted troops to be formed into perma-nent battalion organizations, reporting di-rectly to these headquarters. Thus the yuard would consist of Infantry: Two regiments of 12 companies, three bat-talions each; 12 regiments of eight companies, two battalions each; one bat-talion independent, State Fencibles; one company, Grey Invincibles; one naval bat-talion, one battalion of cavality and one bat-talion of artillery, with the same number of companies in the aggregate as at present. In case of internal troubles the State Fencibles and naval battalion could be formed into a provisional regiment and doubles would work well together. It is advisable that a hattalion in each regiment be commanded, for the present at least, by the Lieutenans Colonel.

for the present at test, by the constraints of the property of it without the expense of additional Majors, except of one each as stated in the First and Second Infantry. If it should be found from experience to be better and consistent with the present appropriation, an additional Major could be elected in each regiment to command a battalion instead of the Lieutenant Colonal.

The Ladies.

The pleasant effect and perfect safety with which ladies may use the California liquid lefxative Syrup of Figs, under all conditions, makes it their favorite remedy. To get the true and genuine article, look for the name of the California Fig Syrup Co., printed near the bottom of the package.

A Physician's Prescription.

When it becomes necessary to employ an alcoholic stimulant as an effective adjunct to sustain the flagging powers of life in disease, I know of no better one than Max Klein's Silver Age. I have examined it and find it chemically pure. I can recom-mend it as being reliably and carefully dis-tilled. Its high standard of excellence should commend it to all first-class druggists and dealers in fine liquor. J. B. JOHNSON, M. D.
