NO TEMPORAL POWER

For the Pope Is Possible Either Now or in the Future, Says a

LEADING CATHOLIC OF ENGLAND.

Secretary Lilly Not in Favor of Brute Force to Restore It.

HAPPENINGS BETOND THE BIG POND

LONDON, March 2.-William Samuel Lilly, Secretary of the Catholic Union of Great Britain, presiding at the annual reunion of Roman Catholies at Birmingham, delivered a sensational address on the subject of the temporal power of the Papacy, which is certain to attract the attention of the Vatican and of the whole Roman Catholie world, and, indeed, of the Protestant world as well, on account of Mr. Lilly's learning and statesmanship and his many contributions to literature and the leading periodicals on historical and religious subjects. Few men would command so general respect when speaking from within the ranks of the Romsh organization, and what he has said is full of good sense and political sagacity, whatever bias he may labor under as an adherent of Romanism.

Lilly said that the temporal power of the Pope has always been an artificial institution, even in the most favorable circumstances that have existed in the history of the Romish hierarchy, and that it is now practically dead, and is never likely to be

The Quirinal's Peace Offering.

He contends that the Papal guarantee bill in Italy is a delusion and a snare, devised only to quiet the Vatican and quite impossible as a practical measure in the existing political conditions, or in any that can arise in the future. He claims, as a corrollary of the abolition of the temporal power, that the spiritual independence of the Papacy, and the material means by which that independence is upheld, should be placed under the protection of the public law of Europe, and he justifies Pope Leo XIII.
and his predecessor, Pius IX., in rejecting the offer of an annual allowance from the Italian Government under the law of guar-

In other words, he makes every possible claim for the preservation of the best possi ble position for the Roman See, while stat-ing the utter folly of the very claims upon which the Pope and his advisers most stren-uously insist. He assumes the attitude of a faithful Romanist while showing the ab-surdity of the Roman Catholic position.

Brute Force Emphatically Condemned. Mr. Lilly declares that he can conceive nothing more disastrous to the Roman Catholic cause, or a deadlier blow to the Bope's moral influence throughout the world, or a greater triumph to the enemies of the Pope, than an attempt by brute force to restore the temporal power even over the small area of the City of Rome, to say cothing of the old "States of the Church."

The significance of this utterance is fully shown when it is compared with the virtually simultaneous utterances of Leo XIII., who, yesterday, on the eve of his birthday, which is to-day, at a solemn audience in the throne room of the Vatican, to the members of the College of Cardinals, enunciated his determination to still fight for the two guid-ing principles of Pope Innocent III., whose reign was cotemporaneous with the Magna Charta of England—1198 to 1216—namely, the redemption of the hely places and the independence of the Church.

The common sense of a statesman, scholar and secular man of affairs, who is, at the same time, a Roman Catholic, is in strong contrast to the other utterances of the Pope, and particularly notable since he says all he can in favor of the Romish Church as a continuous political society.

NOW HE'S A MURDERER

The Hero of the New York Express Robbery

Said to Be Red-Handed, LYONS, March 2 .- [ Special. ]-It is reported here that a letter has been received by the Sheriff saying that the train robber, Oliver Curtis Perry, now in jail, is wanted m Minnesota on the charge of a double murder. When called upon to-day Deputy Sheriff Collins refused either to affirm or to deny the receipt of such a let ter, but intimated that it was true. When pressed he refused to give any particulars Perry's refusal to give any account of his whereabouts during the interval between the Utica train robbery and the attempt in Lyons, although he talks very freely about these two incidents, and the further fact that he has exhibited a dread of being interviewed by detectives, gives color to the re-port that he has committed more serious crimes than those which he has confessed. Deputy Sheriff Collins refuses to allow Perry to be interviewed on the subject.

RATINGS OF THE DIFFERENT REGIMENTS

tant General Krumbhaar has been pushing the reports at headquarters and to-day the manuscript was placed in the hands of the State printer. Major General Snowden's report is quite voluminous and covers the operations of the guard very fully. He refers in complimentary terms to the admirable movement of troops during the coke riots and adds: "It is gratifying to regard this swift and formidable demonstration as an illustration of the ability of the entire division instantly to respond to calls of a like or even more serious nature."

Considerable space is devoted in the report to the ceremonies incident to the dedication of the Hartranft Monument erected by the guard. He deplores the departure from the table of rations heretofore in use at camp and thinks the issue of butter, milk, eggs and fresh beets, corn, tomatoes, not to speak of watermelons and the like, is an innovation open to serious consideration. He thinks the extra expense on this score would probably be sufficient to support another troop of cavalry and another battery He also deprecates so much baggage in camp and thinks this is a matter which ought to be prescribed in regulations from the highest source. Officers Must Not Mess With Men. There is censure, too, of officers messing with their men at camps on State rations. "An officer has recently been tried," he says, "for taking some of the rations for use at an officer's mess. While the verdict of acquittal has not met with my approval, the trial will doubtless stop like offenses in the future." Hereafter all the officers will be required to have separate messes of their own. The report states that the suggestion to enlist company cooks would, if adopted, eft in an emergency without persons skilled n cooking.

With respect to uniform the Major General recommends new overcoats, uniform shirts of a dark color and a serviceable sho fit for camp and campaign duty. He ap proves the use of leggings and the army fa-tigue hat instead of the helmet. The inspections, he says, were close, exacting and complete. Regarding rifle practice he protests against the efforts of the General Inspector of Rifle Practice to interfere with the line officers by the proposition to muster out companies which have not qualified a certain number of marksmen. He re-marks that the duties of the Inspector General were fulfilled by observing the manner in which instructions and practice were carried out and not in taking command to carry them out himself. Considerable space is given to the discussion of the proposed re-organization of the guard on the battalion hasis. The charges of misconduct involv-ing the Thirteenth Infantry were found to be without foundation. The example of Colonel Hulings putting his men into camp outside the regular encampment is com-mended. As to the presence of the guard at the World's Fair, he thinks the time selected-from the 5th to the 20th of August, 1893-is the most suitable. As to the Third Brigade. General Gobin says in the report of the Third Brigade that there has been no change in the organization and that the reg-iments have maintained their organizations intact. A feature has been the organization and arming of several cadet companies in connection with or under the supervision of regular commands. These are intended to repare men to enter the guard when of prepare men to enter the proper age. The inspections were rigid and exacting and to him eminently satisfactory. The various organizations appeared with full ranks at the brigade encampment at Mount Gretna. The commissariat was in every respect satisfactory, the sanitary conition excellent and the discipline unexceptionable. The routine work and drill were marked improvement seemed to follow each

He calls attention to the necessity for an entire new equipment for the battery. The rifle practice produced results exceeding his sanguine expectations. There was a gain of 518 marksmen over the previous year. It is startling to think of the execu tion which could be accomplished by such a body of soldiery, capable, with the im-proved weapons in rapid firing, of loading and firing from 12 to 13 times a minute. The Third Brigade won the brigade trophy at the annual rifle match at Mt. Gretna and thereby becomes the permanent owner. General Gobin is not favorably impressed with the perfection of the changes in tactics recently recommended by a board of officers and approved by the Secretary of War. It is evident that the radical changes made by these tactics will require changes made by these tacties will require judicious, careful work, which cannot too soon be begun. He suggests the propriety of issuing an easy, low-heeled, broad-soled army shoe. They would protect the feet of the men and be inexpensive. If the national guard is to keep pace with the march of progress and produce the army of the future with change of tactics and movements, it should also be made to conform throughout to the new and changed condithroughout to the new and changed conditions. He deplores the loss of a valuable staff officer in the resignation of Major Everett Warner, Judge Advocate.

Praise for the Western Boys. General Wiley, of the Second Brigade, refers at length in his report to the strike in the coke regions last spring and the ad-mirable conduct of the troops detailed for duty during the trouble. He returns his most grateful thanks to Colonel Hawkins, of the Tenth Regiment, Colonel Smith, of the Eighteenth Regiment, and every commanding officer and man of these com-mands for their splendid service while on duty in the coke regions. The spring in-spictions of the brigade, General Wiley says, show a marked improvement over the previous year. He calls attention to the unnecessary additions made to the issue of the Commissary Department of green corn, milk, butter, eggs, etc., during the en-campment, which should not be issued at all. A good full army ration is sufficient for camps and campaigns. It is not his be-lief that soldiers are not fond of these articles and they should never eat them. Two or three issues will entail the belief that they are part of the rations and without them dissatisfaction and complaints acculate. Then the cost is considerable.

Brigadier General Dechert, of the First

Brigade, in his report gives the strength of the brigade as 178 officers, 2,475 enlisted mes, a total of 2,653, a gain of 27 enlisted men and 23 officers over last year. He regrets that a comparatively small portion of the command paraded at the spring inspec-tion, as he thinks these are a better test of the general standing of the companies than the inspection at the annual encampment, when every effort is made to secure the attendance of the men of the comman

The Third Regiment Troubles. He suggests that the equipments of some ompanies be renewed, and asks for modern companies be renewed, and asks for modern practical guns and equipments for the battery. The Second Regiment, he savs, is about to build a new armory on Broad street, Philadelphia, and he appeals to the generosity of the citizens to aid in its speedy construction. General Dechert regrets the dissensions in the Third Regiment which have seriously impared its discipline and have seriously impared its discipline and usefulness and resulted in the courtmartial and dismissal of Colonel William B. Smith. The General compliments the First troop on its efficiency and regrets that it was not allowed to participate as a separate com-pany at the Mt. Gretna rifle contest. The General mentions the conflict with the civil authorities over the Hartranft range at Frankford, which was finally abandoned as # dangerous to life, and hopes to secure a unitable range this spring. Quartermaster General Greenland in his

Quartermaster General Greenland in his report strongly advocates taking the National Guard to the Columbian Exposition. He says it is entirely practicable, would cost but little more than a division camp within the State, and would afford an opportunity to 75 per cent of the members of the guard to visit the Fair who otherwise would not be able to attend. his chest, which showed him to have a quantity of wind.

When Fitzsimmons entered the ring a shout of applause went up, and it was quite evident that whatever the views of the sporting men as to the fight, the popular feeling was with the Australian. When his coat was removed his audience was able to appreciate his magnificent muscular development. His legs still have the appearance of being weak and undersized, and this was more than ever apparent, because his body looks Inspector General McKibben accompanies the tabulated statement of the ratings of the different regiments with a report in which he recommends that inspection by brigade inspectors be made hereafter in January or February, that the reports may be more early available and speaks of the

be more early available and speaks of the poor condition of the equipments of the guard in general. He found that the brigades while in camp made rapid improvement, and suggests that if the First and Second Brigade inspections had been held a few days later their ratings would have been much higher. He also points out the necessity for attaching more importance to the inspections made by brigade inspectors. The Inspector General calls attention to the number of instances of officers, men and musicians departing from the prescribed So Much Larger Than Formerly, with the 16 pounds he has added since he met Dempsey, but a closer inspection of the legs showed that, while undersized, they were not weak, for they appeared all muscle, and the sinews stuck out. His chest development was even more marked than before, and his long arms were undoubtedly fuller, but no one could say that this was due to any excess of flesh, for nowhere did the flesh show, and he seemed a bundle of muscle and sinews. A glance, however, convinced everyone that he was a much heavier and stouter man than before.

The universal verdict was that he slipped into the ring a better man than when he the results of the spring and fall inspections of 1891. At the spring inspections the possible general average is placed at 80; in the fall at 100. This must be borne in mind

DETAILS OF THE BATTLE.

Pitzsimmons Has the Advantage From Round 1 to Round 13 - One of the Greatest Pugilistic Parties Ever Seen-How the Fight Was Lost and Won. Fitzsimmons did not seem like a man

The men entered the ring exactly at 9 o'clock, Peter Maher first, dressed in black trousers, with black stockings and black ighting shoes. Fitz entered a moment later and grasped Maher's hand, and was cheered to the echo for so doing. Jimmy Carroll followed his principal's example, and Choynski and Greggains, who assisted Carroll in Fitzsimmons' corner, imme liately began the preperations for the Madden was pale as death during this preparation for the fight. The usual parley in the center of the ring took in one of the greatest pugilistic parties ever seen, and the good fellowship that marked the opening chat elicited very favorable comment. Both men were stripped to the waist. Fitz wore a scarlet breech cloth, with black fighting shoes and black cloth, with black fighting hoes and black stockings.

The Fight Told by Rounds, Time was called at 9:15, and the men met in the center of the ring. Fitz opened the ball by feinting Maher. The latter made two left leads for the face, and Fitz countered on the eye. Maher made another lead with the left, but missed. Both men missed lefts, and Fitz jabbed his left glove into Maher's nose. Fitz knocked Maher down was a terrible round, and both men were carried to their corners. Honors even.

Round 2—Fitz assayed the left, and Maher ducked both very cautiously, and both missed face blows. Maher landed a heavy left on the body and repeated it in the ribs with the right. Fitz landed a heavy left on Maher's ear and jabbed his left into Maher's bloody mouth. Maher bled profusely from the mouth, but landed again with the left on Fitz's body. Both landed heavy hits, and Maher landed a heavy blow on Fitz's ear, and the latter ran away. Both men landed and the latter ran away. Both men landed right and left, and Fitz staggered his man with a left in the mouth. Fitz jabbed his left repeatedly into Maher's bloody mouth, and both men went to their corners very weak. Honors still easy, though Fitz appeared to be the cleverest of the two, and had landed most blows.

Round 7-Both men stepped up to the center briskly, and Fitz landed a left stomacher. Both exchanged lefts on the head, and Maher flung his right lightly in his opponent's ribs. Fitz cleverly ducked, pulled himself out of a tight corner into which the Irishman had placed him. The latter, however, reached a heavy pivot blow which was not barred in the agreement. It was a heavy blow but the neck, and drew forth objections from Maher's corner. The Irishman landed a heavy right on Fitz's jaw, got in too close, and received two heavy lefts in the mouth. Fitz now lands a left on Maher's law.

Round 8-The Irishman still played for a right cross-counter, but Fitz was wary and seldem got close enough to give it. Maher missed two leads by Fitz's clever side stepping, Maher tried for stomach, landed lightly, but Fitz landed right and left on head and clinched. Fitz dashed his left repeatedly into Maher's sore mouth, and nearly knocked him down for a leit on the nose. Maher now ducked cleverly and avoided a wicked leit aimed for the nose. Both landed heavy lefts on the nose, and Maher seemed weak as he went to his corner?

Round 9-Maher appeared rather weak, still trying for the right. He landed a moment later, but received a left heavy on the nose. Fitz ducked neatly out of a corthe nose. Fitz ducked neatly out of a corner, but received a right uppercut on the ribs, which made him grunt. Maher's left lead for the head fell short, and he wasted a great deal of his strength by missing frequent blows. Fitz landed two lefts on the nose, was perfectly cool, and avoided several heavy swings. The Australian laughed and chatted with his opponent in this round, and really looked like a winner. He landed a light jab on the nose as time was called. Round 10—Maher's left missed again, and so did his right for the body a left on the nose from Fitz's forearm, but landed a heavy right on Fitz's law. It was anybody's fight now, from appearances, though Fitz landed a left on the sore mouth. Maher aimed a heavy right for the body, but struck the point of Fitz's left elbow. The latter immediately sent in a heavy blow on the yore mouth, one circulad. A well-meant right slipped off Fitz's jaw, and Maher missed a right-and-left swing for the head. Maher was bleeding again as time was called. Honors were still easy, and barring a knock-out blow, it looked like Fitz's battle.

Round 11—Fitz landed 4 light left and avoided Maher's right in return. Both landed light lefts, and Fitz avoided two-right swings intended for the stomach. Fitz hit Maher a heavy right in the jaw and avoided a return blow. Both men were cautious. Fitz feinted to draw Maher on, the latter trying a right on the body. It met only Fitz's elbow. Fitz landed a left on the sore mouth, and again got a stinging right on the back of his head. Fitz stagered his on the back of his head. Fitz stagered his on the back of his head. Fitz stagered he same hand under the sore nose and mouth again as time was called. This was Fitz's round.

The End in Fitz's Favor. Round 12-Fitz stock went up as the battle progressed, and as his left shot into Maher's sore mouth again the blood responded freely. The Australian was taking his time, now, seemingly feeling secure. Maher's head went back twice with two heavy lefts, and the Australian stepped away to avoid punishment. The Irishman staggered in response to two heavy blows, and the Irishman played groggy, to draw

Fitz. The latter would none of him, how-ever, until he with the same left again hit the sore mouth, and Fitz's stock rose above par. He staggered as he went to his corner, and gave up the battle. Fitzsimmons fought a fair fight and offered a flask to his beaten opponent. Fitzsim-mons himself took a hearty pull of the red stuff, and then congratulated Maher on his game fight. The cheering for Fitzsimmons was deafening in the extreme, and the same merciful methods that marked his fight with Dempsey were offered again to the Irish champion. The decorum was something wonderful, and stamps again the Olympics' great name for fairness and managerial

Some people commented on Maher's courage when he gave up the fight, but it is only reasonable to think that he should have done so when the superior science and generalship of the man from Australia is called to mind.

Fitzsimmons walked around the ring, rereceiving the congratulations of his friends. He certainly proved a wonderful fighter to-night, and his cleverness with both hands was really marvelous, and it is but fair to say that there are few tricks in the ring and few hits that Fitzsimmons is unacquainted with.

Consensus of Opinion of the Experts Who Witnessed the Fight-London's Interest in the Meeting-What the Best Witnesses of the Battle Think of the Out-

After the fight the leading sporting men present, fighters, newspaper men, sports and others, gathered in the rooms of the Olympic and discussed the fight and the merits of the men. Charley Mitchell and Slavin were to-

Said Mitchell, with emphasis, when asked his opinion: "Maher ought to be ashamed to own himself an Irishman, and Irishmen ought to be ashamed that he is one of them. He is the most cowardly fighter, to my mind, that ever stepped into the ring. Fitzsimmons, on the other hand, is a wonderfully clever fighter, and a surprise."
"I agree with that opinion," chimed in Slavin, who was standing near. "I knew Maher would not win because Madden was behind him. Fitzsimmons is very clever and very shifty, and handled himself splen-didly from start to finish. I am more than pleased at the result because Madden was behind him. Maher is a man who was built up and advertised on the achievements of Both Mitchell and Slavin agreed in saying that the fight, in its conduct, was the finest that they ever witnessed in this or any other country.

Jim Hall, Fitzsimmons' old enemy, sat in a front seat and watched the fight with Parson Davies. When it was over he said: "It was a very good contest, indeed."

Maher Not Able to Stand Punishment, Referee Duffy was equally laconic. "I think Maher lost because he is a fighter that cannot stand punishment," was the opinion he expressed of the contest.

Billy Myer, the "Streator Cyclone." said it was a good fight, and he believed Maher was a fair fighter. In his opinion, however, it was Fitzsimmons' fight after the first

Lou Houseman, of Chicago, who saw all the great fights of a generation, considered the contest similar to a match between a selling plater and a stake horse. He did not think Fitzsimmons should have been hit at all.

Tom Allen, the ex-champion heavy-weight, had this to say: "Maher was never in it, from opening to the close. He is very slow, when compared with Fitz, while the Australian is a wonderfully elever man. and especially in avoiding punishment. I believe that Maher was bothered from the first round.'

Sporting Life Representative Galliher, of London, thought the fight was the best regulated tournament he had ever attended. He sent bulletins of the fight to Lor and got word from England that Fleet street was packed with people eager for news. He thinks Fitzsimmons showed surprising ability in getting away from Maher, and said that the Australian won honestly because he was the better man of the two.

Fitz Tickled Nearly to Death. Fitzimmons, as soon as the battle was over, danced around the ring with delight. The crowd pressed around him and nearly shook his bands off. He was unmarked, and as chipper as a bird. When he succeeded in tearing himself away from his enthusiastic friends he pushed his way through the crowd and went to his room, where without asto his room, where, without as-sistance he quickly donned his street clothes. He was in the best of humor, but his had nothing to say except that he was satisfied and believed beforehand that he would win. He did not remain any length of time at the club, but, with his party, entered a carriage and drove up town, promising to call in the morning for the big end of what call in the morning for the big end of what he fought for—the purse.

After the fight the gloom in Maher's quarters was thick enough to cut with a knife. Maher remained in the ring some time after the battle was over, while his seconds washed the blood from his face. His corner, after the fight, resembled a slaughter pen. When he reached his room he put on his clothes and stuffed a moist handkerchief into his mouth to stanck the flow of blood. Madden, Holland, Tuthill and others were with him, and they were all very much cast down over the result. When the Associated Press reporter was admitted into the room Madden said: "Fitzsimmons punched him in one place all the time. The blood was flowing from Maher's mouth and was choking him. In the eleventh round," continued Madden, "I saw he had no chance to win and told him he had better quit. It was no use to go on. If the fight had continued Maher would have been put out completely, and there was no need for that.

Plenty of Time to Get Bendy. "Our man was not in as good condition as he ought to have been, but of course that is no excuse now. We had plenty of time to no excuse now. We had plenty of time to get ready, and ought not to complain," concluded Madden. "The fight was per-fectly fair. We have no complaint to make, for it was satisfactorily contested, and quarely lost. We shall stay here a day or squarely lost. We shall stay here a day or two, and then go home."

Maher's upper lip was puffed out, and he looked the picture of woe. "I have very little to say," Maher replied to an inquiry, "except that Fitzsimmons was too clever for me. He was very skillful in getting away. I had him out in the first round, but the bell prevented me from finishing him. Fitzsimmons is a nice, clean, gentlemanly fighter."

"Maher broke a blood vessel and the

"Maher broke a blood vessel and the blood choked him," said Billy Macey. "He could not go further because he was unable to breathe. That is the old story. We have been whipped and are sorry for it. We have no fault to find with the contest. Many sporting men said that Maher was miserably handled by his seconds, while others insisted that the Irishman's stubbornness had a great deal to do with his defeat. It is hardly within the oo with his defeat. It is hardly within the range of possibility that Maher could have won if he had prolonged the contest, but the men who backed him would have been pleased to have seen him make the attempt. As it was, he did what Dempsey refused to do—quit before he was knocked out."

Maher's Backers in the Dumps.

Of the 6,000 who witnessed the contest few except those who were backing Maher were sorry that he weakened before the in-evitable knockout blow was administered. It was merely a question of time. Fitzsim-mons would have finished him in the next round. It was a gruesome spectacle to see Fitz round after round drawing blood from Maher until the former's left boxing glove was dyed red. On the other hand, do what he could, Maher could not touch Fitz. He stuck to it gamely, and every time he hit at the Australian he was foiled by a clever

DIVORCED BY DEATH. Wealthy Detroit Woman Who Fails in

the Courts, Resorts to a Revolver. DETROIT, March 2.-Charles W. Ayers, & prominent business man, formerly a partner in the Richmond-Backus Company, was shot and fatally injured this evening by his wife, Annie D. Ayers, at their residence on Bagley avenue. The cause of the tragedy runs back through a number of years, but the climax was brought about through the Supreme Court rendering decision dismissing Mrs. Ayers' suit for divorce, which was first filed last October and dissolving the injunction restraining Mr. Ayers from entering the family resi-

Mr. Ayers, in consequence thereof, late this afternoon went to his house and proceeded to pack up his personal effects. His daughter remonstrated, and he grew very excited. Mrs. Ayers soon came in from the street, and a scene followed, the details of which have not been ascertained; but as Mr. Ayers left the house his wife fixed at him with a revolver. house his wife fired at him with a revolver, but did not hit him. As he was on the veranda she fired again, the ball entering the left breast and lodging in the lungs. Mr. Avers was immediately taken to the hospital but is not expected to live through the night. Mrs. Ayers was placed under

AN IMPORTANT MONOPOLY.

As Necessary for the Super as the Actor to Know His Part.

The veteran actor, Richings, on one occasion at least, found that it was almost as important for a "super" to know his part as for the chief actors. In the transformation scene of one of his pieces the flats had to his daughter and himself in apotheosis in the clouds. On the occasion referred to he was a little slower than usual in changing his dress, and all the performers had taken their stations for the scene as he came rushing on with his daughter to complete the picture, when, to his horror, he discovered upon the elevation which they were to occupy a great, gaunt super in dirty tights, tin armor and a gilt helmet, already in apotheosis.

"What are you doing there, sir?" gasped Richings, as soon as he could find breath.

"Standing in 'ipothisis,' responded the super, who had evidently read the play-hills, and was proud of his position. "Come down, you scoundrel! come down at once!" ejaculated Richings, who imagined the man was chaffing him. "The manager told me to stand 'ere in this 'ere 'ipothisis," responded the super, sturdily, with the air of a Roman sentinel ready to die at his post.

"But do you know where you are, sir?"
shrieked Richings. "You are in heaven, sir
—in heaven; and, hang you, sir, no one is allowed there but Caroline and myself—no

YEARNING FOR CLEVELAND.

Mayor Manning's Heart Not in Sympathy With His Tongue,

ALBANY, N. Y., March 2.-The strange reticence of the Albany Argus in regard to Senator Hill, not a single allusion to whom has appeared upon its editorial page since the day of the Albany Convention, has made Mayor Manning, one of its controlling spirits, the theme of much speculation. The young Mayor is a delegate at large to Chicago from Hill's Albany convention, and was appointed one of the committee to escort Senator Hill to the hall after his omination.

It is feared that Mr. Manning's eloquence for Hill at the convention will not resemble that of Demosthenes, and that he is yearn-ing to fly to his old love, Grover Cleveland.

Odd Result of a Teacher's Effort to Distinguish Two Small Boys.

The application of the teacher's wit to suit circumstances often receives unexpected results: One of Pittsburg's teachers had two boys named Davie Jones, and they became so dreadfully mixed up when she wanted to call their attention that she recently concluded to dub them Davie Jones No. 1 and Davie Jones No. 2. She was not aware that her nomenclature was faithfully copied, but one day she was electrified by hearing Davie Jones No. 1 call out: "Teacher, Davie Jones No. 2 is hitting me!" -There are about 700,000 houses in Lon-
