AN ENGLISHMAN'S EXPLANATION.

A Fensation in the Commons Over a Motion by the Government to

STRENGTHEN A NORTH PACIFIC HARBOR

PERCIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCE ! WASHINGTON, March 7 .- There are no new developments to-day so far as can now be learned in the Bering Sea controversy. The illness of Secretary Blaine would have prevented a meeting of the committee today even if one was contemplated. The situation will be fully considered, however, at the regular meeting to-morrow for the purpose of determining the policy of this Government in the event of Lord Salisbury's continued refusal to renew the modus vivendi for the coming season.

General J. W. Foster, of the State Department, who is assisting Secretary Blaine in the negotiations on this subject, had a conference with the President on the situation this morning, and subsequently conterred with Mr. Blaine at his home. Later Sir Julian Pauncefote called at the State Department and had an interview with Asstant Secretary Wharton.

No Cause for the Least Alarm. THE DISPATCH correspondent at New York sends the following: Sir George Baden Powell, of England, member of the Baden Powell, of England, member of the Bering Sea Commission, was at the Windsor Hotel this morning, and scouted the idea of serious complications over the settlement of the seal question between this country and Great Britain. He could not see the faintest war speck on the international horizon, and in the course of his remarks he referred to the Americans as "cousins." He stated that what the Commission was doing in Washington was strict in nature and could not be discussed. Sir George was reminded that the newspapers had published the statement that Lord Salisbury had refused to renew the modus vivendi of last year. He answered with Salisbury and refused to renew the modus vivendi of last year. He answered with great emphasis:

"The newspapers are supposed to reflect the mirror of truth, and often they do, but I must state that in this instance they are wrong. Certainly Lord Salisbury refuses to renew the modus vivendi of last year because the same conditions do not are incause the same conditions do not exist. Modus vivendi in this case is a mere phase, and means nothing. It is totally out of place in the present instance and is used to make a point. I do not mind saying that the work of the commission is progressing favorably."

Will Be Submitted to Arbitration.

He said that the Ministry had practically approved of the plan to submit the question to arbitration. It differed in political complexion from that of the executive Govern-ment, and cannot be depended upon to ratify treaties and conventions made with other countries. Sir George will return to other countries. Sir George will return to Washington in a tew days.

Dispatches from Ottawa, received at Gloucester, Mass., state that Minister Tupper has introduced a bill into the Canadian Parliament which provides for the renewal of the modus vivendi. This, of course, gives the American fishing fleet plain sailing as far as all desirable privileges in Canadian ports are concerned. Under its provisions American fishermen, by paying a license fee of $1 50 per ton of their craft, can buy bait and outfits, ship crews, etc., in Canadian ports. This gives all that is desired, and if fish are found in average quantity in the Grand Banks the coming season, there is every prospect that the season, there is every prospect that the tory in the history of this branch of the business owing to the high price of codfish. A Sensational Motion in the Commons.

A London cable says: In the House of Commons to-day, on a motion to go into Committee on Supply, the Hon. Sir Henry Stafford Northcote, Conservative M. P. for Exeter, took occasion to move that the House of Commons urge upon the Government the necessity of immediate steps to complete the harbor of protection at Esquimault, British Columbia, which is the station for Her Majesty's fleet in that part of the Pacific. Sir Henry argued that the route from Great Britain to Asia by way of the Canadian Pacific route would not be sethe Canadian Pacific route would not be se-cure unless steps should be taken to make E-quimault harbor safe for the protection

Rear Admiral Edward Field, Conservative member of Parliament for Eastbourne. supported the motion of Sir Henry, urging that the defense of British and Canadian interests imperatively required that the Government push to a completion the work at Esquimault.

The motion created a decided sensation in the House of Commons owing to the exlieved that the object in putting forward the motion was to get the sense of the House as to how far the Government would be supported in a firm attitude as to the scal fisheries.

Defeated Without a Division

William H. K. Redmond, Nationalist M. P. for Fermanngh, said in the debate that the defense of Esquimault was of more importance to England than to Canada, and that England's action has not been generous toward the Canadians in insisting that they should stand a share of the burden in excess of what they thought to be fair.

Colonel Thomas Waring, Conservative M. P. for North Down, ridiculed the statement of Redmond, and defended the Government. The Right Hon. George Osborne Morgan, Liberal M. P., for Dennigh Wales, said that in behalf of the opposition he desired to approve the extremely fair attitude of the Government.

of the Government.
Sir Stafford Northeote's motion that the defenses of Esquimalt be at once completed, was then put to a vote. It was defeated without a division of the House.

COUNTERPEITING IN A PRISON.

How a Convict Manages to Keep Supplied With Cash.

BOSTON, March 7.—[Special.]—The State prison is the last place in which one would expect to find counterfeiting going on, but it is a fact that the secret service officials have recently, but uselessly, ransacked that institution in search of molds which were being used in the manufacturing of spurious being used in the manufacturing of spurious com. A couple of weeks ago Jennie Bolan, with many aliases, turned up at the West End police station in an intoxicated condi-tion, and with counterfeit money in her little seal purse.

Finally Jennie said that a certain convict Finally Jennie said that a certain convict now serving a sentence in the State prison had melted some lead, mixed it with flint glass, ground fine, run it through some moids which had been overlooked in the prison from the time of previous administrations, and then by dropping the counterfeits into a solution of silver plating, the State prison bird had completed his little game. Jennie said she took them out and left good money behind, which the prisoner could use to advantage if he got a chance to scale the wall.

telegram fram Italy, stating that Bovivene and Villaia, who, with "Red Nosed Mike," in October, 1889, killed Paymaster McClure and Flanagan, would be tried for murder on the 29th of this month.

The two former escaped from the detectives here, and on their arrival in Italy were arrested. As they were not citizens of the United States at the time of the murder, the Italian Government claims them as its subjects and will now try them in that country. The extreme penalty in Italy for murder is imprisonment for life.

A CONGRESSMAN'S ETES CPENED.

NEW YORK, March 7. — Congressman Funston, of Kansas, a member of the House Committee on Immigration, had his eyes opened Saturday, while he was at Ellis' Island. He was much affected by what he saw. With Congressman Epes and one or two others and an interpreter he visited a room where a portion of a poor family was de-tained. It was thought this family must be sent home. There were several children in the family, the youngest a little girl of & The mother had been taken away from them, sick with typhus. With the aid of the interpreter Mr. Funston talked with the children. They were very poor, and, as they told of the hard time they had had, they began to cry. The little girl was mouning for her mother.

The Congressman could not stand it. He The Congressman could not stand it. He took the little thing up in his arms, and before he could comfort her there were tears in his own eyes. Then he drew out his pocketbook, put the little girl down, and began distributing two dollar bills. He cave one to every member of the family, from father to 4-year-old. Then he straightened up to his full six feet, and his heavy voice was husky as he said: "I'm heavy voice was husky as he said: "I'm not used to this. I've got some children of my own. I can't stand to see that little thing crying for its mother."

A SUPREME COURT DECISION

WASHINGTON, March 7 .- The United States Supreme Court to-day affirmed the judgment of the Colorado Circuit Court in the case of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway Company, appellants, versus the Denver and Rio Grande Railway. A contract was entered into between the two roads, by which, for an agreed compensation, there was to be a foint use of the tracks of the Denver and Rio Grande road between Denver and Pueblo, the Rock Island having constructed a line to Colorado Springs, midway between the two places. Subsequently the Rock Island entered into a traffic agreement with the Union Pacific, and sought to use the terminal facilities of the Denver and Rio Grande at Denver for

The Denver and Rio Grande maintains The Denver and Rio Grande maintains that the use of these terminals was a mere incident of the use of its tracks from Colorado Springs, and that the Rock Island couldn't use the Denver terminals for Union Pacific business. The lower court decided in favor of the contention of the Denver and Rio Grande, and the Supreme Court to-day affirmed that judgment. Justice Brown read the opinion of the court, Justice Brewer dissenting.
