GENERAL ELECTIONS IMMEDIATELY

THY CABLE TO THE DISPATCH. LONDON, March 12.-[Copyright.]-The strange behavior of Mr. Balfour is the absorbing topic in Parliamentary lobbies and political clubs. The Tories do not scruple to use strong language about this curious philosopher, who treats them with contempt which he does not attempt to conceal, and which they repay by making him look ridiculous as the leader of the House of Commons. The Government has been placed in the minority several times this week, due to the resentment of the Tories against this so-called leader.

The prestige of his administration still envelopes Mr. Balfour, and this, coupled with the fact that he is Lord Salisbury's nephew, has so far prevented open mutiny. Balfour is fully as superstitious as Disraeli was, but he has none of the tact, good humor and untiring watchfulness of the House of Commons which enabled the great Tory leader to mold the party to his will.

It is a painful thing to place on record in THE DISPATCH, but it is a positive fact that Balfour does not care a button for the House of Commons. Last Thursday he outraged its finest feelings by appearing in dirty boots and mud-spattered trousers. Indirty boots and mud-spattered trousers. In-stead of being in his place when important business is going on he is lounging in the smoking room or hiding in the library. As Obstinate as a Mule.

He should be as supple as a professional courtier, but is as obstinate as a mule. He has imported into Westminster the auto-cratic methods of Dublin Castle and his collengues and subordinates dare not remonstrate with him.

The clerks of the House, learned men on all matters appertaining to parliamentary procedure, are afraid to offer advice to Mr. Balfour, with the result that he is in a perpetual muddle, and public business makes no progress. Nevertheless, Mr. Balfour is not always anstere. It was the privilege of a DISPATCH reporter the other night to gaze upon the right honorable gentleman at a moment when he was easing his feelings and exercising his limbs with the arry shoulder of a vone athlete. The come was abandon of a young athlete. The scene was the smoking room staircase, whereon the First Lord of the Treasury, who should have been in the House, where an excited debate was in progress, was testing the condition of his lungs and the length of his stride. Both were satisfactory, for Mr. Balfour did not breathe very hard or otherwise show distress, and his last stride covered six stairs and brought him to the top of the staircase. He did not have his eyeglasses on, so that the wondering reporter was able to continue his observations.

Balfour's Absence Noteworthy.

All the members were in the House, an important division was about to take place, and Mr. Balfour noting the empty corridor, with evident satisfaction, grasped the balustrade on either side, preparatory to resuming his gymnastic exercise. But at this interesting moment one of Mr. Balfour's Secretaries rushed into the corridor and interesting the state of the sta formed him that his presence was urgently required in the House.
"Tell them," said the great mogul, "that I will be there presently," and turning on his heel Mr. Arthur James Balfour strode down the corridor to the library. He did not take part in that debate or division, and the Government was beaten.

Rumors of these selitary "goings-on," together with his disregard of his personal appearances, inattention to business, and his rudeness to individual members of the party, have given rise in some quarte doubts as to Mr. Baltour's sanity, but they are simply indications, clear enough to those who know the man, of his disgust with his position.

Anxious for a Speedy Election.

Mr. Balfour is vigorous enough, mentally and physically, but he is tired of playing an undignified part. Furthermore, he has not had his own way in the Cabinet, lately, and he is sulking. He is anxious, as the fight cannot be averted, to have a general election at once, and he is doing what he can to compel Lord Salisbury to dissolve Parlia-ment. He will soon be gratified. The Queen will hold a privy council Monday atternoon, previous to her departure for the south of France, and it is pretty certain that among the documents which she will sign will be an undated proclamation dispensing with the further services of her faithful Commons. Lord Salisbury will fill in the date as soon as public business shall have become sufficiently blocked to afford him a considerate excuse for appealing to the country against Liberal "obstruc-tion," and the date will not be, a distant

A significant sign of the times is Punch's political cartoon this week entitled "Off His Feed." The Conservative party is represented as a sick horse, whom Balfour and Chaplin, as the two grooms, vainly try to tempt with the oats of "Local Govern-ment for Ireland" and the hay of "Small Agricultural Holdings," while Salisbury, Agricultural Holdings," while Sales as a veterinary surgeon, standing on a use-less end of the discarded blanket of "The Majority," says: "Hum! Conservative Majority," says: "Hum!
Seems to have wasted a bit! Wants a Tory!" It is only when Punch is very sure which way the wind blows that it deserts the Conservative party.

Too Big Army Estimates.

British taxpayers have been brooding a good deal for a week past over the figures given in the army estimates for the cor year. The amount asked for, nearly £18, 000,000, is large enough to make a deep impression upon every man who has to help pay the bill, and criticisms, loud in assertions, that even this tremendous sum has failed to secure effective fighting machinery, cause many worthy citizens to think harder than is good for their mental powers. Yesterday the naval estimates gave them fur-ther food for thought and additional for

All parties are agreed that the maintenance of the naval supremacy of England is a matter of life and death to the country a matter of life and death to the country which could be starved into submission by stoppage of its food supplies from abroad. Even Cobden used to urge that the British may should be 50 per cent stronger than the French navy, and, barring France, equal to the combined fleets of any two nations; but critics, foreign and domestic, are agreed that the British navy, considering the man-ner in which it is dispersed all over the world, is not more than a match for the French fleets, and that by certain conceivable combinations it might be swept off the

Not a Question of Money.

Here again, as in the case of the army, it is not a question of money. Sixteen millions three hundred pounds sterling are to be spent on the British navy during the coming year, and that sum is more than last year's naval budgets of France, Germany and Italy combined. Everybody feels there is a shameful waste somewhere, and taxpayers want to know where it is. They have felt and expressed the same desire for years past, but they have fatled to obtain satisfaction, and they are not likely to be more success

The young Earl of Dudley having sold his gambling, is steadily striving to obtain recognition as a serious politician. He is blessed with a wife who possesses because race horses, forsworn betting, and given up blessed with a wife who possesses brains and who believes that her husband is equalby well endowed in that respect. It was at the instigation that the Earl deserted his boon companions, and it is by the stimulus of her faith in his abilities that he has set of her faith in his abilities that he has set before him a worthier goal than the Derby Dispatch. stakes It will be well for him, however, at the outset, to restrain his oratorical flights. He has already shown a tendency to wander away from beaten tracks instead of keeping to the safe path of commonplace. In particular he is prone to over-indulgence in figures of speech which, if not checked, will surely get him into trouble.

A Painful Show of Weaknes

He gave a painful exhibition of this weakness Thursday night, when he was entertained at a banquet at Birmingham by the Midland Conservative Club, for Lord Dudley, of course, is a Tory. He commenced his speech very prettily, by expressing "that he has as yet but small claim to the respect which was accorded to those men who had at the expense of almost every personal treasure voted all their energies to public activity and usefulness," and from a Liberal point of view he distinctly improved when he proceeded to declare that "the day of the old Toryism, the Toryism of privilege and prescription, had gone beyond recall"—a sentence which, by the way, bears upon it the stamp of the Countess Dudley, but after enunciating the sound principle the orator plunged into metaphor, when he said: "In 1886 the good old crusted port of Toryism, valuable and respectable from its age and antiquity, had at last become stale and tasteless. The blending with the strong spirit of modern liberalism, ardent and fiery in itself and a little inclined to lead to dangerous consequences if taken undiluted, has resulted in a liquor whose delicate flavor and power had secured for it a monopoly at all respectable clubs." He gave a painful exhibition of this weak able clubs."

The Midland Tories, having just disposed of a good dinner, laughed heartily at this joke, which seemed very good at first hearing, but the next day, when they saw it in cold print, they did not like the look of it, and to-day they are asking Lord Dudley for proof that Toryism is or ever was take and tasteless.

Preparations for Them Proceeding Quietly in All European Capitals.

IBY CABLE TO THE DISPATCH. 1 LONDON, March 12.-Little is publicly heard of preparations for labor demonstrations on May 1, but they are proceeding quietly in every European capital and in most large towns in every country in Europe. In Austria there is talk among the governing classes of suppressing such displays; in Germany they will not be interfered with, according to the present intention of Kaiser Wilhelm; in France, now that the strong man Constans has been in-trigued out of the Department of the Interior, they will be perfectly free, and in Italy and Spain the police will in all proba-bility provoke bloodshed.

In London there is to be a demonstration, the magnitude of which will depend upon settlement of disputes now existing between various labor societies as to the men to whom the work of organization shall be

Men of Other Views Expelled From Parlia ment for Their Sins.

IBY CABLE TO THE DISPATCH.1 LONDON, March 12 .- A sentence of five years' penal servitude, passed upon Mr. Hastings, M. P., for embezzling trust funds, has moved the Pall Mall Gazette to remark sententiously and truthfully: "There have now been three members expelled from the House of Commons, and the only party in the House which has not bad a member expelled is the one which two of the other three parties agree in denouncing as a pack of disreputables."

It should be explained that Captain Verney, expelled for criminal immorality, was a Liberal, Hastings was a Liberal-Union-ist, and De Cobain, the most loathsome of scoundrels, was a Tory.

A Forger Commits Spicide.

BERLIN, March 12 -A tragic event is reported from Liebau, in Prussian Silesia. Herr Eckerd, the Governor of the district, a man of high standing and supposed large wealth, was lately discovered to have been engaged in extensive forgeries. It appears that for some time past he had really been bankrupt and had kept up his credit on forged bills of exchange. Finding that his guilt was becoming known, he committed suicide by taking poison. Since his death additional forgeries have come to light, and the aggregate is said to be enormous. institutions and individuals who have cashed the forged paper are seriously Retrieving a Family Fortune.

IBY CABLE TO THE DISPATCH.1 LONDON, March 12 .- Lord Maidstone, the young son of a clever peer, the Earl of Winchelsea and Nottingham, died the other day in the Riveria of influenza. The last man who held the title drank himself to death after several years of wilddebauchery, during one of which he served as a trooper in a cavalry regiment. The present Earl is endeavoring to retrieve the family fortune by developing quarries on his estate.

NO LOVE LETTERS YET

Marie Blaine Has Been Persuaded Not to Have Them Published.

SHE YIELDED WITH RELUCTANCE

Her Counsel Advised Her to Stand on Her Decision in Court.

RUMORED OVERDOSE OF MORPHINE

NEW YORK, March 12.-The day after the publication of the reply which Secretary Blaine felt Impelled to make to the mputations contained in the opinion of the Judge who granted a divorce to Mrs. Nevins Blaine, a dispatch appeared in the papers signed by the divorced wife.

She called upon Mr. Blaine to publish in full the correspondence from which ex-tracts had been quoted in his letter, and she said that unless he did this in ten days she would herself give to the world the entire correspondence. The ten days have quite elapsed, but it is not likely that Mrs. Nevins Blaine will make another state-

Since she has been in New York she has been quite ill, and was prostrated with a fainting fit, although there was some intimation that she may have been suffering from an overdose of morphine taken to alleviate neuralgie pains.

Mr. Blaine Has Said All He Will,

One of Mrs. Blaine's legal advisers was greatly distressed when he saw the statement which appeared over her signature in reply to Mr. Blaine's letter, and this man felt that any further statement by his client would be inopportune and would tend to perhaps create a prejudice against her. He therefore determined to advise her both as a counsel and a friend against the issuing of any such statement. He knew very well that Mr. Blaine, having said all that his devotion to his wife and family made it necessary for him to say, would be likely to take no notice of Mrs.
Nevins Blaine's challenge. He therefore pleaded with his client as soon as she arrived in New York, and he at first found her very set in her purpose to publish all the love letters and to set forth in great de-tail the miserable story of the domestic trials of herself and her late husband.

The counsel then said to young Mrs. Blaine that the publication of any statement would be likely to injure herself, or at least to cause a reaction from public sentiment such as was voiced in the opinion of the South Dakota Judge. He said to

"You have taken your case into court; you have produced your evidence; on it you have been sustained by the court, and you certainly ought to be satisfied with the opinion expressed by the Judge. You have won your case, and with it you ought to be content. Why should you appeal from a court that has decided in your favor, to a newspaper controversy. To begin a controversy will not only weary those who have already become tired of this affair and of seeing it mentioned in the papers, but will also give rise to the suspicion or accusation that you do not feel fully vindicated by a judicial finding in your favor. For your own sake it would be far better to let the matter drop where it is. If anything is said The Argument of Her Counsel, matter drop where it is. If anything is said in private which reaches your ears, or there appears in the papers anything which seems to be an accusation, all that you need do is to say, 'The courts have heard the evidence in this matter, and have vindicated me.'"

Mrs. Blaine was at last brought to see the force of this presentation by her counsel, and gave him and her friends to understand that she would take this advice and let the matter drop where it is now. She is, how-ever, an impulsive woman, somewhat arbi-trary, and her best friends here are not wholly sure that she may not take it into her head when she recovers from her illness
