PASTOR AND PEOPLE.

The Time Is Here When Prophets Should Raise Their Voices

AGAINST POLITICAL CORRUPTION.

Timely Topics to Be Presented in Our City Pulpits To-Morrow.

CLEANINGS FROM CHURCH FIELDS

Tammany has evidently caught a Tartar in its assault on Dr. Parkhurst. All honor to the preacher who has the courage of his convictions and attacky correction that is backed by money and political power. The prophets of the olden time made it their business to attack wickedness in high places, and, though they were rewarded often with bitter persecution, they did grand work in helping the world on toward the better day. The minister who does not lift his voice against the sins and follies of his times is not up to his high calling. It is high time that the prophets should denounce the corruptions of our great cities, and Dr. Parkhurst has done a good work in leading the in the championship tournament of the Brooklyn Chess Club Hodges beat Olly, Kemeny beat Souwelne, Russell beat Finlay, and Olly beat Russell. Great interest was evinced in the meeting between Pollock and Deimar, which took place on Tuesday evening. On the seventieth move the Irish champion queened his pawn, whereupon the result of the simple ending, Q against rook, was no more doubtful. Blackmar defeated Finlay. The game between Hodges and Pollock was adjourned. It is rather in favor of the latter.

A CLERGYMAN ON CHECKERS.

The Rev. C. C. Macdonald, St. Clement's Parish, Aberdeen, editor of the new church paper, the Beacon, on Saturday formally declared open the minth annual draughts match, played between teams representing the city and county of Aberdeen, in St. Katharine's Hail, Aberdeen. The reverend gentleman told the draughts players that there was undoubtedly an advantage in every way in oultivating such a pastime. He did not know that there was a "couthier" game than draughts. The very name implied that—the "dambrod." He supposed some people would think he should not say that. [Laughter.] But the fact was, it was the gentlest, peaceablest name in the world; it simply meant the "ladies' board," which had been corrupted into "dambrod." It was an instance, said the reverend gentleman, of the old Scottish connection with France. The French, as a matter of fact, called the game, "les dames"—the ladies; and the French phrase for crowning a king was "aller aux dames"—to go to the ladies; and he supposed that a man really got the highest crown when he did that in a proper way. Those who took kindliest to this game were the gentlest spirits—men of calmness of temperament and repose of disposition. It was not a bloodthirsty game, although it was singular that it was supposed that the game that a gentle kind of indignation swelled the draughts player's bosom when he got two kings and had three taken from him. [Laughter, and "Hear, hear."] And then, again, when the three kings got into line of battle, and demanded the surrender of the two, there was a despair that darkened for a moment the dying warrior's brow. But, for the nost part, he made safe to say that the "dambrod" was a very peaceful, restful battlefield. The neatness of the speech, which Mr. Mucdonald delivered, which could only have been made by an appreciative draughts player and an expert at literary description, roused its hearers to a pitch of enthusiasm, which lound vent at its close in boisterous applause.—Heroid. THE SCOTTISH DRAUGHTS PLAYER.

Part I of Kear's reprint of the second edition of Drummond's "Scottish Draughts Player," commencing the "Single Corner" opening, has come to hand this week, and presents an appearance at once attractive and unique, from the fact that every variation is illustrated with a diagram of the position at its commencement, so that each variation may be played separately, or may be studied in conjunction with the opening in the usual way. Mr. Kear is to be congratulated upon having introduced a decided improvement both in the appearance and practical utility of the work; the diagrams will be of the greatest assistance to the learner, and scarcely less so to the expert, presenting as they do a series of photographic views of the ever-varying phases of the game from its commencement to the end. The improvement must have entailed a considerable amount of extra trouble upon the indefatigable reviser, Mr. J. Lees, Dalmellington, as well as additional expense to the publisher, but no increase has been made in the price, Mr. Kear relying upon a large increase in the circulation to recoup himself. The value of the play in Drummond's "Second Edition" has never been properly estimated by the majority, owing to the wretched method in which it was arranged in the original; we trust the joint abova of Messirs, Kear and Lees will lead to THE SCOTTISH DRAUGHTS PLAYER. to the wretched method in which it was arranged in the original; we trust the joint labors of Messrs. Kear and Lees will lead to a wider knowledge and appreciation of its worth, and that the reprint may also prove a success financially. Readers wishing for further information regarding this work should address Mr. Kear's agent, 42 Cliff street, Pittsburg.

THE AMERICAN CHECKER REVIEW.

This magazine for March is before the public, and however much may be said in its iavor through editorial courtesy, it comes far short of a representative checker journal. This is the expressed opinion of a great many leading experts. It gives 40 columns of matter to its shaders, and only two-fifths of this space is devoted to games, problems and solutions, the other three-fifths being devoted to reading matter, and outside of the biography of Mr. Spayth, is of little interest to the majority of players. This has always been a weakness of the Review, and in no way does this become more manifest than a comparison with the Quarterly Review. The student, in looking over these volumes, finds analysis on nearly all openings and a great deal not found in standard works, which makes the Quarterly Review the best checker journal that has ever appeared. If the Review would devote its entire space to compiling such material, along with analysis contributed such as that of A. J. Hefiner's on the Kelso opening, the Review would have a larger circulation; would nave the support that such a magazine would deserve, and one that would be invaluable for future reference.—Checker Editors. CHECKER ITEMS OF INTEREST. Mr. L. S. Head, champion of Minnesots, is at present the guest of the four C Club, of Chicago, and during his short stay he has made himself many warm friends, so much so that it is spoken of that he may make Chicago his permanent home. His scores with the leading players are as follows:

Starkweather 0 Crowell 1 Doyle 2 Hefter 2 Denvir 1 Wins. ..... 0

Mr. Chapman is ready to defend the medal against all players in the State.

Hearing so much talk about the checker matches that are now being played in Cumberiand and Mills, I hereby challenge the winner to a series of games.

played a match in Boston, captained by Durgin and Bailey, with the following result: Durgin's 5 wins, Bailey's 3 wins, and 7 games

The English championship tournamen will now be an assured institution by the manner in which subscriptions are coming forward, which now amounts to £22 sterling No. 1 engine house was visited last week by a number of players from the Home Hotel, and a very interesting setting of three games were played between the captain and proprietor of the Home, in which honors were evenly divided; one win each and one drawn.

The Allegheny team will leave for Washington, Pa., on Tuesday, March 22, at 4 P. X. from Pittsburg. The result of the match will be found in the sporting columns of The Disparch on Wednesday morning.
