SHOUTS FOR SILVER

To Be Heard in the House of Representatives To-Day, When the DEBATE ON BLAND'S BILL-BEGINS.

Practical Politics Very Likely to Complicate the Situation.

POLICY OF THE REPUBLICAN OPPOSITION

[SPECIAL TELEGRAPHIC LETTER.]

BUREAU OF THE DISPATOR, WASHINGTON, D. C., March 21. The great debate on the Bland silver bill, the most important and far-reaching, from a party standpoint, of any that has occurred or that will occur during this session of Congress, will begin to-morrow, at once after the opening of the session. The point of interest is not in the identity of the orators, nor in any possible display or unusual eloquence, nor in any new complexion that will be put upon the financial question, but in the course of the opposition by what is assumed to be the Democratic minority, led by Harter and Tracey and Williams. If those gentlemen have decided what policy they will pursue they are keeping it well within their own faction. It is reported that they have determined to filibuster, but the report is simply an inference from their impotent attack on the rule fixing a time for consideration, and not upon any announced line of action. The chances are that they will engage in the most elaborate of filibustering exploits.

Following in Bland's Footsteps,

No matter what the merits of the question, a great deal of practical and personal politics enter into the processes of the antisilver as well as the tree coinage faction, and Mr. Harter, Mr. Tracey and Mr. Williams are no less open to the charge of demagogism that Mr. Bland or any other advocate of the unlimited coinage side of the question. Let them claim what they will In the way of independence and reform, they are simply doing as Mr. Bland and his colleagues are doing, and that is to trench nearest on what they think is the sentiment of the people of their districts, regardless, at least to a great extent, of the vital financial spinging in a product. cial principle involved. Therefore, it must naturally be interred that the leaders of maturally be interred that the leaders of what is now admitted to be the party minority on this question will take the course that will make their opposition to the majority most conspicuous, and that could only be a scheme of systematic filibustering which, while it would add novelty and possibly excitement to the contest, would cer tainly tail in the end.

The Eloquence of fouth, Interest in the oratory will center largely

Interest in the oratory will center largely in the efforts of the young men from the East who have put themselves in the fore-front of the opposition. Mr. Harter, Mr. Sherman Hoar, Mr. Williams and Mr. Andrews, all save Harter being from Massachusetts, represent the young blood violently and unchangeably opposed to the Bland bill. Messrs. Tracey and Fitch, the New York leaders on that side, have had several years of experience, and at best are several years of experience, and at best are not interesting. On the other side the leaders are mostly old wheel-horses of the party who will say little that is new. Bryan, of Nebraska, and Pierce, of Ten-nessee, may offer some useful diversion from the track long ago blazed out by Bland and and his colleagues.

The discussion will doubtless have greater interest on account of its being crowded into three days than it would have if the time were unlimited. The speecher will be shorter and spicier. The colloquies will be sharper and more trequent. A Probable Republican Policy.

The Republicans will, of course, with the exception of a few Western members, put themselves on record in opposition to the bill. They will do nothing, however, to break the force of the fight between the Democratic factions. They will encourage acrimony, and will place no obstacle in the way of filibustering. Whether they will generally join in the final vote is yet a generally join in the final vote is yet a mooted question. They may record their opposition in speeches, and refuse so vote in the ultimate 'roll-call, if that be necessary to accomplish the passage of the bill. They want to place upon the big Democratic majority the burden of passing the measure, knowing that if its career be not stopped in the Senate, it will be stopped in the Executive Mansion. Therefore their policy will be not to obstruct the course of the bill through the House, but to make its progress as disastrous for the Democrats as possible.

Bering Sez. Shrouded in Secrecy. While it is admitted that an important note has just been received from Lord Salisbury on the Bering Sea controversy, never was more care taken to conceal the character of a diplomatic missive. It is not inacter of a diplomatic missive. It is not in-ferred that this is so much on account of its gravity, as of a complaint from the Senate, the court of last resort in treaty affairs, that news of the recent past was given out from the State Department or the Executive Mansion which should have first reposed for a time in the deliberate and sagacious bosom of the Senate. Where two or three persons are, however, possessed of such news, it is difficult to maintain entire secreey. The man-ner, if not the matter of replies, often suggests the nature of the thing inquired about, and from this it is assumed generally by correspondents who have been probing the matter to-day that the latest communication from Salisbury is of a temporizing character and not of a kind to warrant an increase o sherm or anxiety.

Several theories are advanced to show why His Lordship should wish delay and refuse a renewal of the modus vivendi, such as a desire to further discuss his proposition for a 40-mile prohibited radius around the Prihylov Islands a desire partially the Pribylov Islands, a desire partially hinging on this to permit the Canadian sealing vessels to get out to sea and at work on the scals pending an adjustment; and a de-termination once for all to force an admis-sion (or leave to a possible favorable arbi-tration, with seal killing constantly in progress) that the theory of the United States Government of the Bering Sea being a closed one is nuteriable.

a closed one is untenable. No Imminent Danger of War.

So long as the Premiers' purpose is not understood-and it does not seem to be understood anywhere-any one reasonable theory may be as well entertained as any other, but one thing is very certain in regard to the whole question, and that is that Great Britain does not seek war with the United States any more than the United States seeks war with Great Britain.

Much that is sensational has been written on this subject by theorists professing military and naval expert knowledge. Thrilling fanciful descriptions have been given of the fanciful descriptions have been given of the entrance into our harbors of British warentrance into our narrors of British war-ships and of the impotency of our coast de-fenses and naval vessels. The clever but well-worn "Battle of Dorking" has been worked over in a dozen different forms. This worked over in a cozen different forms. This may be interesting reading, but it does not change the fact that the highest authorities who are forced to deal with this question have not the least fear of the country's becoming involved in a war with Great Britain; and the ground source of security is that the first gun of such a war would open a thousand batteries in other parts of the world, and elsewhere give Brit-ish cannon possibly more than the ish cannon possibly more than they could do for the protection of interests and the maintenance of principles vastly more important than those involved in the Bering sea. These are the considerations that lead the diplomatic authorities of this Government to sail along easily in the complications of Great Britain.

GENEROUS DELIA PARNELL

by the Suprefie Courf-The Story of Self-Sacrifice Following a Losing Stock

PHILADELPHIA, March , 21 .- The Supreme Court to-day affirmed the decision of the Court of Common Pleas on the appeal of Edward Stewart administrator of the estate of Charlotte Smith, deceased. In July, 1876, Charlotte Smith deposited with the appellee, Delia T. Parnell, $4,536 to be devoted, in her discretion, to speculation in stocks for the benefit and risk of the owner. The money so intrusted was ap-plied by the appellee in accordance with this understanding, but the speculations were unsuccessful and the money lost. This fact the appellee did not communicat to Miss Smith, but attempted to retrieve the losses by using her own money after the loss, remitting over $3,000 to Miss Smith, allowing her to believe that the money was the proceeds of her investment. The concealment was from the best motives, as Miss Smith was in ill health, and Mra. Parnell was afraid the disclosure of the loss would be fatal.

After the death of Miss Smith Allows would be fatal.

After the death of Miss Smith, the administrator brought suit to recover the full amount of the money intrusted to Mrs. Passell, on the ground of her silence respecting the loss and the remittances. In delivering the opinion of the Court, Justice McCollum says:

McCollum says:

It may be doubted whether her (Mra. Parnell's) action was judicious, but it is clear that the motives which prompted it were generous and honorable. The strength of this claim lies in the suppression of the truth concerning the transactions on which it was founded. It is the essence of the estopped that the party alleging it must have been induced to act upon the representation or concealment, and his action must have been of a character to result in substantial prejudice. There is not even a scintilla of evidence that Miss Smith's condition was injuriously affected in the slightest degree by the matters claimed as the basis of an estoppel. Certainly she was not prejudiced by the remittances, and the knowledge that her money was lost would not have enabled her to recover it. She could not have acquired anything thereafter, and she released nothing.

Lives, Besides Many Injured. FINDLAY, March 21. - [Special.]-A di tressing wreck occurred on the Findlay, Fort Wayne and Western Railroad at 3 e'clock this afternoon, to the cannon ball assenger train, about two miles west of this city, by which Alexander Shannon, the engineer, and E. E. Whitt, fireman, were fatally injured by being crushed about the body and limbs by the debris of the engine. Several passengers were painfully injured. There were 25 passengers in the coaches overturned, but few suffered serious injuries. The cause of the accident was a broken rail, which threw the engine from the track, demolished two passenger coaches and destroyed one baggage car, the whole loss to the road being about $25,000.
