

SPRING'S GAY ENTRY.

The Gentle Maid of Balmey Breath Makes Her Advent With a Rush.

GREETED BY THE BLUEBIRD SONG

Pretty Women in Bright Costumes Throng Down-Town Streets.

TALKING POLITICS ON SUNNY CORNERS

SPRING came with a rush yesterday. It dropped apparently from the skies, but no man is now able to see the heavens in Pittsburgh and this statement must pass unnoted.

When the blue bird sings in the tree top, it is the first sure sign to the farmer that the delightful season is here.

Then it is that John, the hired man; Mary, the servant girl, and the boys able to work are routed out at 4 o'clock in the morning by the anxious granger, who scents the cool morning air as keenly as a prisoner released from long confinement.

The plows, covered with dust, are brought out from the barn and made ready for use. Even the old straw hat is not forgotten in the garner, and is resurrected to do service for another year. Soon the cry of the whip-rover will be heard at night, and the pretty petals of the violets and bluebells break forth from the ground.

Very Different in the City.

Alas, the picture is quite different in the city. Husbands know that spring is here long before anybody else. They have seen signs early in March that fill their souls with foreboding.

They understand full well what means those gentle caresses from their wives, while March winds are pitilessly driving the rain and sleet against the window panes on St. Patrick's day.

Bill, for spring dresses and Easter bonnets will soon be presented to mother-families, and it is best to make the way to the ordeal as easy as possible.

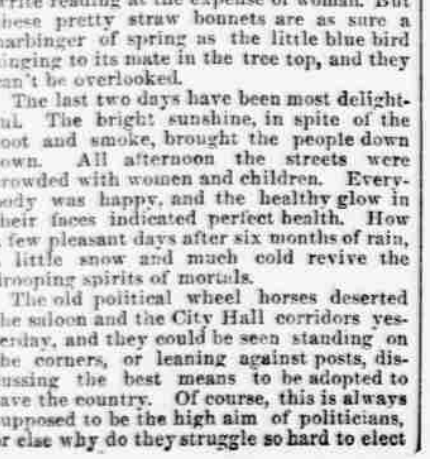

The sun crossed the visible line some days ago, but humanity doesn't need the aid of science to know that the season when young animals love to skip and play has arrived.

The first spring bonnets and straw hats decorated with green leaves and pretty flowers were seen on Fifth avenue yesterday. The store windows are full of Parisian and American millinery, and little cards demurely announce that this is opening day.

These days, by the way, will continue for some time; the sign on the cards is never changed until the stock is sold out. Women know very well that the opening occurred several weeks ago, but that little placard has a wonderful fascination for them.

Sure Harbingers of Spring.

However, this is a very ancient subject. A fellow is not much of a man who tries to Writin' on a Sunny Corner for a Dime.

This man or push that piece of legislation? The good citizen will wish it were so.

"Ah," remarked an old man, as he stopped to greet a friend, "this is a beautiful spring day."

All winter he had nursed limbs racked with rheumatism, and the temporary relief from pain made him happy.

The One Season for the Old.

"This is the only season of the year I enjoy more," he continued. "The sunshine, the bright faces of the people and the perfect weather make me feel good. It is neither too warm nor too cold. The time for that tired feeling that we call spring fever hasn't come.

In the summer the intense heat makes me weak, and the winter constantly reminds me that I am growing old."

You could see men fitting around yesterday minus their overcoats, and ladies wore jackets instead of the proverbial sealskin.

This practice of throwing off the overcoat on the first warm day, said a doctor by way of warning, "is very foolish. The weather is treacherous at this season of the year.

Too Impatient to Wait for Spring.

As the frost is still in the ground, passengers on the Pittsburg and Lake Erie Railway have during the past week been treated to the unusual sight of frozen ground being broken up and planted in onions, lettuce, etc.

Some people suppose they are not versed in the business, but the French colony at Imperial has also taken time by the forelock in this matter.

False Economy

Is practiced by many people, who buy inferior articles of food because cheaper than standard goods. Surely infants are entitled to the best food obtainable.
