Fate of the Silver Bill After Wolcott's Touching Tribute.

HE SCORED THE ADMINISTRATION

By Accusing Harrison of Being Afraid to Act on the Measure.

REPUBLICAN FILIBUSTERING ENDED

WASHINGTON, April 6.-The sensation of the day in Congress was the arraignment of the administration by Senator Wolcott, The offense for which he cited the President was the exertion of the influence of the administration to prevent legislation for the free coinage of silver, and the Democrats were naturally interested auditors to the criticisms of Senator Wolcott upon President Harrison. The speech of the Senator from Colorado, which is this evening the leading topic of conversation, was delivered in a perfectly cool and collected manner and from carefully prepared manuscript.

The silver bill, said the Senator, has been put to sleep in the Honse, and the Senate might as well face the truth on the silver question. Nobody expected the measure to become law during this administration, because the present Chief Executive last summer foreshadowed his veto; and those in his council had openly proclaimed it since. The friends of silver, however, had hoped that it would at least score some advantage at this session. If the votes of the two Houses had been polled in December there would have been a clear majority of 50 for free silver coinage in the other body and a majority of 12 in this. But, to-day, if a vote were had on the motion to take the silver bill from the calendar it would not be carried. So the friends of silver were left fighting the air on a series of general resolu-

Deserters Caused the Defeat.

It was a proper time, therefore, for the friends of free coinage, having practically suffered defeat, to gather up their wounded and dead, determine where the deserters where hidden, fortify their entrenchments for the next encounter and stop, if possible, the destructive rear-firing which had not only damaged but surprised them. The first great force opposed to the passage of the nist great force opposed to the passage of the silver bill was in this Congress (as it had been for three years) the present administration. No stone had been left unturned, no effort unemployed to compass the defeat of the measure.

The National Convention was soon coming on, and a decisive action on the silver question was supposed to be rather embarrassing, and a thing that it would be better rassing, and a thing that it would be better to avoid. The necessity of a vote had to be prevented if possible, and so the miser-able work had begun. The offices had been able work had begun. The offices had been purceled out, the party lash had been cracked and wavering members had been gained. The work had apparently been effectively done, and yet there was always a to-morrow. Nobody was deceived.

But it would have been a graceful act in the out-going President to have permitted the two Houses of Congress to vote according to their own inclination on a measure of ing to their own inclination on a measure of national importance. The spectacle, humilinting as it was, showed that it was but an amazing change of front by a great section of the Democratic party.

Democratic Pledges Quickly Forgotten. During the last session that party had stood manfully to its party tradition—hard money. A clear majority of its members had taken the stump before the election, and pledged themselves that they would vote for the free and unlimited coinage of silver. The sudden change would be ridicu-lous if its effects were not tragic. One prophet of Democracy announced that tariff reform was the slogan. Another insisted that being a Democrat was the test and the watchword. But each political party had become, in reterence to the silver question, what Disraeli had once had charged the Tory party as being, "an organized hypoerisy." But, unless all signs failed, each side would be anxious before long to unload the responsibility on the other, and the people would then have their innings. Out of the wreck of the hopes they had cherished one fact

The vast mass of the people of the country were unrepresented by either political party concerning the question which they considered paramount to every other. Not only was that true now, but it seemed equally certain that the same condition of forces would continue to exist.

A Chief Executive of Small Stature, It was apparent that the party in power would (with negative unanimity) renomi-nate "the present magnetic Executive." Into this expression Mr. Wolcott threw a tracted much attention.] Not because he was the choice of any considerable body of his party, but because, since the letter of retirement of the great Secretary who held his party bound by ties of deepest affection and regard, no man of greater status than the present in the second of the second man of greater stature than the present in-cumbent had been found willing to stand. Because of the blov that had struck silver aside, it seemed equally manifest that the Democratic party would present its apostle of tariff reform whose vision had no other issue, and who desired again to be consecrated to public office. These uncomplimentary allusions to Mr.

Harrison and Mr. Cieveland, and the highly flattering reference to Mr. Blaine, had all the success on some of his audience that Mr.
Wolcott could have desired. Smiles of approval, pleasure and assent flitted over the countenance of Senators, but no other sign was given, and he went on with his speech.

Still Hopes for the People's Verdict, The Senator then reviewed the silver question in detail and concluded by the prediction that the people would surely speak and tree coinage would be their final ver-

Mr. Morgan formally offered the amendment to his resolutions-which he had pre-sented yesterday-and then the resolutions went over without action, retaining their place on the calendar.

The Indian appropriation bill was then taken up, the question being on Mr. Dawes' motion to strike out the provision for the assignment of army officers to the post of Indian Account.

Mr. Pettigrew offered an amendment appropriating $187,039 for compensating the Indians of the Crow Creek Reservation for loss in their receiving less land per capita in their diminished reservation than was received by the Indians occupying other diminished reservations, which was agreed to.

Mr. Pettigrew also offered an amendment authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to expend not over $50,000 in the construction of two Indian industrial schools, one near Chamberlain, S. D., and the other near Rapid City, S. D., which was also agreed to.

The Free Wool Fight Ended. The fight in the House on the free wool bill, which began yesterday, ended quietly to-day. After the transaction of some miscellaneous business Mr. McMillin moved that the House go into committee on the free wool bill, pending that he moved that all debate on the first section be limited to one hour and a quarter. After some good natured discussion between Mr. Mc-Millin and Mr. Burrows, Mr. McMillin suggested that three-quarters of an hour be given to each side.

Mr. Burrows said that the time offered was not sufficient, but he was so anxious to proceed with the bill that he would acquices. So yesterday's battle was over, and the House went into committee of the whole (Mr. Blount, of Georgia, in the chair)

The pending amendment was that offered by Mr. Burrows, striking from the first sec-

Wool Growers Insulted and Ro Mr. Otis, of Kansas, moved to strike out the first section. The bill, he said, in its first section insulted the wool grower and in the second section proposed to rob his pockets. Mr. Alexander, of North Carolina, spoke in favor of a proposed amendment, imposing a duty of 30 per cent on imported wools. Mr. Alexander's amendment was rejected.

The vote recurring on Mr. Otis' motion to strike out the first section was lost. There was no fight made on either amendment and no interest was shown. The second section was then read and a discussion ensued as to the effect had upon the price of wool and woolen goods by a protective tariff. After a long debate the committee rose and reported the bill to the House and the House, without action, adjourned.

INDORSED RAUM'S NOTES.

Some Last Year's Testimony Introduced in the Pension Office Investigation-Attorneys Break the Rules and Escape-The

Commissioner Still on the Rack. WASHINGTON, April 6.-The Pension Office investigation opened this morning with a motion by Mr. Enloe to put in evidence testimony taken in last year's investigation with reference to the refrigerating company, and with reference to Mr. George E. Lemon's indorsement of Commissioner Raum's paper, and the issuance of the completed files order. He said that his object was to show that the Commissioner had favored Mr. Lemon in that order, and that its issue was probably due to the favors given the Commissioner by Mr. Lemon. Mr. Payson objected to the admission of the testimony, and the matter went over for the

Mr. Enloe asked if immediately after the completed files order was issued George E. Lemon did not indorse Mr. Raum's note for $12,000. The Commissioner, under advice of Mr. Payson that the committee had no right to inquire into Mr. Raum's private business, declined to answer, and then Mr. Enloe read for admission last year's testimony in which the Commissioner admitted that Mr. Lemon had indorsed his note.

Mr. Enlowerid he purposed to show that

Mr. Enloe said he purposed to show that instead of the completed files order resulting beneficially to claimants it had resulted in a blockade of Pension Office business, and also in great pecuniary benefit to Mr. Lemon and other attorneys in this city and was a system of favoritism. Mr. Payson objected that this statement was "putting the cart before the horse," and Mr. Enloe retorted that sufficient testimony had been offered to furnish a cart for the present horse. Mr. Wheeler, the Chairman, thought the evidence admissible, and by a majority vote it was put in the record.

Mr. Eulos called attention to the fact that the Commissioner had said that if attorneys had cases placed on the completed files, knowing they were not complete, they would be subject to disbarment, and asked why it was, that when attorneys had repeatedly had cases placed on the completed files that were not complete, not a single attorney had ever been disbarred or punished. Mr. Raum-Well, they have usually offered some satisfactory explanation in re-gard to them, and where it was shown that there was no intentional misconduct on their part, as a matter of course, the thing would be overlooked.

A Close Call.

Mr. J. P. Blaize, an extensive real estate dealer in this city, narrowly escaped one of the severest attacks of pneumonia while in the northern part of the State during the recent blizzard. Mr. Blaize had occasion to drive several miles during the storm and was so thoroughly chilled that he was unable to get warm, and inside of an hour after his return he was threatened with a severe case of pneumonia or lung fever. Mr. Blaize sent to the nearest dragstore and got a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, of which he had often heard, and took a number of large doses. He says the effect was wonderful and that in a short time he was breathing quite easily. He kept on taking the medicine and the next day was able to come to Des Moines. Mr. Blaize regards his cure as simply wonderful and says he will never travel again without a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy—The (Des Moines, Ia.) E. V. Wood, of McKee's Rocks, Allegheny county, Pa., in speaking to a traveling man of Chamberlain's medicines, said: "I recommend them above all others. I have used them myself and know them to be reliable. I always guarantee them to my customers and have never had a bottle returned." Mr. Wood had hardly finished speaking when a little girl came in the store with an empty bottle. It was labeled "Chamberlain's Pain Balm." The traveler was interested, as there was certainly a bottle coming back, but waited to hear what the little girl said. It was as follows: "Mamma wants another bottle of that medicine; she says it is the best medicine for rheumatism she ever used." 50-cent bottles for sale by druggists.

There are thousands in this dangerous condition to-day, unmindful of the fact that thousands of others, sufferers in the same way, have been made well by that great remedy for all forms of nervous diseases, Paine's celery compound. Said Mr. Budlong recently:

"Gladly do I improve the occasion to speak a few words in praise of the very excellent remedy, Paine's celery compound. For several years I was great sufferer from nervous exhaustion and inomnia superinduced by a too close attention to my books and study.
