

HITTING AT HOLMAN.

The Hoosier Cheese-Parer Getting It in the Neck Right Along.

PARSIMONY NOT AT ALL ECONOMY.

Some of His Plans Given a Severe Backset by His Own Party.

PROSPECTS OF SEVERAL BIG ROWS

SPECIAL TELEGRAPHIC LETTERS.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 13.

It is pretty evident that the Democratic friends of Mr. Holman in the House are ready to rise in rebellion against his almost insane desire to cut down the expenditures of this Congress for campaign effect.

In the naval appropriation bill, now under discussion in the House, he has gone to such extremes of opposition to certain provisions that it looks as though his own anxiety and obstinacy are about to defeat his purpose.

Republicans and Democrats assailed him with bitterness and sarcasm today upon his point that provision for the construction of a dry dock was not properly a part of a naval appropriation bill, though the harmonious ruling of no less than four Speakers of the House and Chairman of the Committee of the whole House was cited against him.

Mr. Herbert, of Alabama, Chairman of the Naval Committee, usually almost as cranky as Holman on demagogic shouts for economy, was especially severe on the Indiana cheese-parer statesman. Cummings and Fellows, of New York, also plied the latter with annoying questions.

Shively Caps the Awful Climax.

Boutelle and Dingley, of Maine, on the part of the Republicans, joined in to make the old man ridiculous, and a final and crushing blow was given by Shively, who was in the Chair, and who, promptly after the long discussion, overruled the point of order. Mr. Shively is from Mr. Holman's own State, and he had been relied upon by the latter to sustain his point, but Shively is a young, clever, progressive member, who detests the humbugging talk about economy, is in favor of liberal expenditures, and was apparently glad of the opportunity to assist at the drubbing of his senior colleague.

But the backset given to Mr. Holman's economical plans to-day was nothing to what they will get when the section of the naval bill is reached which provides for one new battleship and which also meets with Herbert's approbation. A dozen members are ready with fiery and ironical speeches descriptive of the hoopoe patriotism and statesmanship which in the face of recent very narrow escape from two wars in which strong navy only could have prevented great disaster, could provide for but one new war vessel to build up a navy which has been begun on a grand scale, and whose ships bid fair to be rotten or obsolete before the naval machinery reaches any imposing dimensions.

Herbert Comes Out on Top.

The Democrats of the Naval Committee were not all in sympathy with Chairman Herbert in this provision, but he gained a majority and so framed the bill. The committee is composed of 13 members, four of whom are Republicans, all in favor, under the leadership of "Commodore" Boutelle, of liberal appropriation of new vessels. Of the remaining nine Democrats, Cummings, of New York, and Daniel, of New Hampshire, and McAleer, of Philadelphia, are with the Republicans on the question of naval construction. Cummings will attack this Democratic bill, and the narrow vote in his well-known sledge-hammer style, and Daniel and McAleer will ally second him, and it is even possible that one or two other Democrats will agree to such a section of the bill in order to reach a more liberal view of the committee of the whole House.

Cummings holds to the plan of building a navy which was advocated and in a measure initiated under Secretary Whitney. The way to build a navy is to build it. Cummings wants an immediate provision for two large battleships, four smaller gunboats, four torpedo gunboats and several torpedo boats, and will offer an amendment to that effect.

Prospects for Another Row.

The division of the Democrats of the committee and their further division in the House at large renders it quite possible that Mr. Cummings' efforts may result in a provision for more vessels than the one which stands solitary in the bill. Of course, Holman, who, though he has nothing to do with the construction of the naval bill, feels that he should be heard upon everything that involves an appropriation of money in his pig-headed way, oppose any increase, and will try to pare down wherever he can; and so there is a prospect for a nice Democratic row over the provision for new ships. Of course, even if Holman prevail in the House, no one expects the Senate will be so timid as to subscribe to it, even in a Presidential year. The record of the Republican party is one of liberal expenditure. It devotes to the country, as they think, and so pays a high interest on the outlay. Moreover, it makes a liberal outlay on imports, an important source of income for expenditure, and so two of the party terms are made to support each other. The Republicans believe the country will endorse this policy in the future as in the past. And, curious to note, in the matter of liberal expenditures the Alliance people meet the Republicans on common ground.

A Billion Dollars Against a Nickel.

The outcry against the "billion-dollar Congress" is met with the appellation "the five-cent-nickel Congress." One sportive Democrat who detests Holmanism and admires the Republican policy in this respect, said to me to-day: "The one is a penny-ante Congress and the other a table-stake Congress."

A constant and very interested spectator and auditor of the scenes and discussion in the House pending the discussion of the naval appropriation bill is Mr. Charles Cramp, of Cramp Brothers, the great Philadelphia ship builders. Few men are better known here and plain, hearty, genial, social qualities makes him a great favorite. Naturally with their almost unending plant for the construction of war vessels, he would expect to capture some of the contracts if a liberal provision be made for naval ships.

A good deal of amusement and gossip were excited in diplomatic and other circles, here to-day, by a report that one Senator Antonio Hilario da Coelho, of New York, had sent a friend, "Colonel" Tom Wilkinson, on to Washington, with a challenge to the duel directed against Senator Salvador da Mendonca, the accomplished and popular Brazilian minister. The Senator with the musical name claims to have been grossly mistreated by the minister, who is asserted to have called him a fugitive from justice and a mulatto.

The Minister Not at All Alarmed.

The minister tells me to-day that he has received no challenge, and does not expect one, and that he looks upon the theory as a "fake." Senator Mendonca "catches on" quickly to the idiomatic vocabulary of Americans.

"Colonel" Tim Wilkinson, if he is in the city, must be spending in great seclusion the money of Senator Antonio Hilario da Coelho with the other "Colonels" who are plentiful here, as he cannot be found. Mendonca is a quiet gentleman, very domestic in his tastes and an enthusiastic art connoisseur. He is a liberal buyer of pictures, but is now disposing of a large portion of his fine collection that he may have space for a greater number of modern pictures than he now possesses. Unlike most collectors he depends on his own judgment, and he delights to give his patronage to living and struggling painters whom he believes to be coming men, rather than to pay extravagant prices for spurious or ordinary pictures of dead masters.

Recently the minister's eyes have been painfully affected, and it forced into a duel at this time he would certainly have to fight by proxy. His young son, Mario da Mendonca, an artist with the sword and pistol as well as with the painter's brush, might possibly insist upon representing his father, though it is probable that unless Senator Antonio Hilario da Coelho could prove his birth and life to be gentle and honorable, no attention would be paid to his bluster which, according to the story, has gone the length of an assertion that if the minister will not fight he will kill him in the street.

In Washington on Private Business.

Ex-Governor Beaver is in the city to-day, but though he called upon the President, he avers that he is not on any political mission. He lunched with ex-Secretary Stone and dined with Representative Hank but was obliged to decline an invitation to partake of an informal dinner at the White House before his departure. The presence of Judge Wickham, of Beaver, his visit to Senator Quay and a subsequent call of both gentlemen at the White House, also gave rise to a report that some political move was on the carpet. The report went out that Beaver was here to urge Judge Brown, of Lancaster, for the Supreme Bench, and also that Wickham was a candidate for that office being urged by the Pennsylvania Senator. But both Senator and Judge declared that the latter was in the city solely for a social visit and desired to meet the President merely to have a friendly word with him.

Messrs. Weibe, Hogan and others, of the Amalgamated Association, who are here to ask for the fixing of a uniform standard weight and gauge for iron and steel products, were introduced to the Committee on Coinage, Weights and Measures by Representative Stone to-day, and had a pleasant hearing. Mr. Weibe presented the plea of the association and greatly interested the committee. Chairman Bland suggested some difficulties in the way of adopting new weights and measures, illustrating by a reference to the obstacles which had hitherto presented the adoption of the metric system in America; but Mr. Weibe pretty effectually showed the chairman that while the bill might possibly be improved somewhat, he thought the changes entirely feasible. Mr. Bland promised that with perhaps some modification the bill as prepared by representatives of the association would be favorably reported.
