

WILLIAM IS BALKED.

The Kaiser Finds He Can't Make a New Political Party to Order.

OPPOSITION TOO MUCH FOR HIM.

Conservatives and Clericals a Majority Against the Cabinet.

SOCIALISTS WIN IN TOWN ELECTIONS

(Copyright 1920 by N. Y. Associated Press.)

BERLIN, April 16.—Emperor William, hoping his personal intervention would lead to a general friendly relations between the Conservatives and the Government, suggested Count von Helldorf, who is a friend politically of the Conservative leaders, and who holds kindred religious views, with the task to ascertain what concessions it would be necessary to make to affect a reconciliation with them.

Hebrews and Agnostics in Control. This revival of anti-Semitism has received a strong additional impetus from the evidence in a libel action, during the course of which the President of the Berlin Municipal School Board was called upon to testify. His evidence disclosed the fact that out of 24 members composing the board 13, or a majority, were Hebrews and the rest agnostics, and that all of them co-operated against religious teaching in the schools.

The Government is badly left. The sum of the position, therefore, is that when the Reichstag and the Landtag resemble the Government will be confronted with a strong Conservative majority in both parliamentary bodies. The Ministerial weakness will produce two immediate results: The introduction in the Reichstag of a bill adding 100,000 men to the army, will be postponed, and the question of the salary of Count von Helldorf as President of the Prussian Ministry will be held up by dragging in giving him the Ministry of the Interior.

The Socialist Party has obtained a big victory in the industrial district, or Gerichte elections. Even in towns where the Catholic workmen's societies are strong the Socialists won a clear practical victory. In these tribunals the Socialists now hold a majority.

The preparations for the celebration of May Day have been completed in Berlin where the programme is more of a festive than of a political nature. Tableau-vivants, concert and games will rule in Berlin. In Hamburg a grand parade will be given by the authorities who will allow processions and open-air meetings to be held.

The Emperor's visit to Metz in September, to unveil a monument to his grandfather, Emperor William I, will be preceded to a week's maneuvers around Metz on the fields where were fought the battles of 1870. Several army corps will take part in the grand ceremonial at Metz. The whole affair will be a prolonged demonstration of Germany's strength and readiness for war.

German Sugar Dealers Blunder Badly. Charles Johnson, the United States Consul at Hamburg, was in this city yesterday. He asserts that the decrease in the exports of sugar from Hamburg is largely due to the fact that German manufacturers are combining to raise prices, and that the American merchant is, naturally, looking elsewhere for his supplies.

reply. The land is exhausted and the artificial system is a hopeless failure. The peasant and the gentleman are as widely separated as if they belonged to different nations. Instead of deriving profit from his emancipation, the peasant is poorer than ever before, and in many districts whole villages are at the point of starvation. The present distress has brought matters to a climax, yet nobody knows the remedy. The nihilists are eagerly taking advantage of the discontent to extend their propaganda. Practiced reformers are divided on the question of what should be done to remedy the evils. Some still rely on the paternal guardianship of the Zwicki Natchniks. Many hold that the remedy will be found in the application of the land system of Henry George, while others would have the Mir (communal assembly) abolished. A few even suggest the introduction of a law of primogeniture for the peasants, and thus prevent the subdivision of the land. The supporters of Henry George's system declare that the nobles do more land than they can till, and the Government has enormous tracts of arable waste land. They favor the nationalization of the land.

DO YOU EAT? The Time Honored Saying Is the Proof of the Pudding Is the Eating of It. You cannot find the true meaning of this in a more profitable way than by placing an apple in a hot frying pan and taking the risk, not you. Examine, sample and try. Remember, the goods are so ample and so good that you are not entirely satisfied with them you can return at any expense and get your money back.
