The back was draped with white satin, over which was festooned parlands of smilax, while tall vases of Easter lines were everywhere. This, with the pains of deep green, made a pretty background for the minister in his white gown, and the vested choir that sang the responses and anthems of the beautiful Episcopal service. Nearly all the churches in the city were crowded with people, and were heavy with the fragmance of flowere, and Easter was nearer welcomed with more beartiness or with pretter ceremonies.
