The bill had been drafted by Hon. Marcus Aurelius Smith, delegate from Arizona, and it is not to be supposed that Mr. Smith would risk his own future by going counter to the wishes of the people evidence. who elect him. Possibly the holders of the bonds are the people to whom Mr. Smith is responsible, and possibly these bondholders live in Wall street and not in Arizona, and are consequently not affected by the desire of the people of Arizons for a liberal treatment of silver.

Silver Men Always Watchful.

However that may be, the provision for the payment of the interest in gold brought the ultra-silver men of the Senate to their feet in remonstrances. Senator Platt asserted that the bill followed the language of the funding act and provided for payment "in gold or lawful money of the United States," but was put to confusion at once by a reference to the bill which contained nothing but a provision for absolute payment in gold.

With this brief discussion the Senators and the occupants of the galleries all awoke to the fact that a veritable dispute between the gold and the silver men was on. Much curiosity was manifested to know why it was that while the funding act provided for payment in either gold, silver or paper, the bill should limit the kind of money to gold; but apparently no one was at hand with an explanation. Senstor Kyle, the South Dakota Independent, moved to amend the bill by striking out the provision for gold payment and inserting "lawful money of the United States." There was little discussion of the matter.

Hill Only Wants a Stand-In. Senators seemed to be afraid of it, as though it was loaded. Hill moved uneasily in his seat, but a cunning look flashed from his little, deep-set eyes, as if he can in the amendment see an opportunity to bid for the favor of the silver men without committing himself on the question of free

A call of the Senate was ordered. Electric bells sounded the triple warning in restaurant, committee and other rooms, but only 57 Senators could be drummed up. This was enough, however, and when the roll called Mr. Kyle's amendment was adopted by 28 yeas to 24 nays, 5 Senators having dodged out, Gorman among them, after the call of the Senate. Hill stood his ground and voted for the amendment, and was heartily congratulated for it by the

The Significance of One Vote.

It was probably a more significant vote than he intended it to be. The fact that the division discovered every Senator voting in accordance with his convictions, so far as known, on the monetary question, lent an importance to the record that could not have been anticipated. The silver Republicans, Allen, Dubois, Hansbrough, Jones, of Nevada; Mitchell, Stewart, Teller and Wolcott, and the silver Independents, Peffer and Kyle, all voted for the amend-ment, with the silver Democrats, including Hill.

All of the negative voters were Republicans, excepting Gray, of Delaware, and every Senator voting no is a known foe to any increase of the value or importance of silver as a monetary medium.

Senator Hill may be said to have Thus placed himself squarely on the side of the ultra-silver men, and exposes his hand for the first time on this question, which prom-ises, before it is done with, a rearrangement of the political boundaries of parties in States and sections. It will be interesting to hear what his party in New York will say about it. No one need think that Hill was caught napping in this matter. He is very wide awake.

A New Bid for Favor.

Hill knows his case is desperate. Cleve-land is gaining and he is retrograding. The prospect was that without some heroid ould go to Chicago with no follow ing but his New York delegation, and with an enormous protest against even so much as that. He must make some new bid for the favor of the South and West, on the silver question, as he had nothing to gain on that score in the East. Without going so far but that he can crawl out of it he has made that bid.

To the South and West he will sav: "Behold my vote for silver on the Kyle amend-ment." To the people of the East he will ery out, "Oh, no, you mistake my meaning; I merely voted that the interest on the Arizona bonds should be paid according to the provisions of the funding act of the ter-ritory, in lawful money of the United Whatever his convictions he will States not fool his friends in the East as to his intentions. His vote of to-day will, temporarily at least, put a new complexion on the race for the Democratic nomination.

The convention will be comprised of about 1,300 delegates, and not quite half of them have as yet arrived, so that it is utterly impossible to state how they stand on the Presidency, but as many counties have in-structed for Gray or have been silent as to Cleveland, the action of the convention on the Presidental question is not readily fore-shadowed. That action will depend largely upon the result of the Thirteenth Congres-sional District Convention, which meets here Wednesday night, and which will select 26 delegates to the Chicago Convention, who, with the four delegates at large to be deter-mined by the convention Thursday, will make up the State's full complement. The nomination for Governor largely hinges on this action. nominate at Chicago just two weeks later but no matter who is nominated at Minne apolis, the issue will be made on the tariff. That, as Mr. Cleveland aptly said, is a condition and not a theory. With tariff the issue, by what method of figuring can party wisdom lead to Cleveland as the candidate ? Tariff reform is Mr. Cleveland's only issue. He was defeated on that issue four years ago and the conditions have not changed in his favor since then. The McKinley bill as a whole has been a magnificent success. Even the brightest thinkers in the Democratic party, with an overwhelming ma-jority in Congress, have failed to conceive a measure or a policy to take its place. The most eloquent political croakers have and will fail to make people believe the country has gone to the bow-wows on account of the tariff.

"Notwithstanding the Presidental year, business all over the country is fairly settled and the outlook is just as bright and cheerful now as it was at this time years ago when Mr. Cleveland and the Democratic party were retiring after four years of administration. Under all the cir-cumstances the cry of tariff reform will go up through the country like the lament of a lost soul. When Mr. Cleveland was first ound he was nominated for President, not ecause he was a tariff reformer, but simply because he was a Democrat and could carry New York. On that issue he was elected. On the tariff issue he was defeated four years later. The fore-most Demogratic leaders of the nation will hesitate before they again go to the country with an issue and a candidate both of when here here heaten in a nonlar conwhom have been beaten in a popular con-

"For these reasons I believe Mr. Cleve-land will not be nominated. There is no new field for the Democracy. To elect a President they must carry the Solid South, New York and the Northern States carried by Cleveland eight years ago. New York now, as then, is necessary to a choice, and no one is wild enough to say, meaningly, that Cleveland can carry New York." "Who will the Republicans nominate?"

was asked. "McKinley is our logical candidate. His great tariff measure will certainly be the ssue, and why not make the issue and the eandidate one and the same thing. Penn-sylvania's determination not to instruct for President Harrison is at this time most significant. It has been announced on every hand that Senator Quay will control tomorrow's convention like an expert baker would control a handful of dough. Quay and Harrison are fighting. That cannot be concealed. Should Harrison be renominated and re-elected, what chance would Quay and re-elected, what chance would Guay stand of being re-elected United States Senator? The Federal patronage so potent in politics would be controlled by Mr. Dal-zell, and would, of course, be used in his own behalf. The public officers would methem that little preference in the solution. mother what little sentiment there is in olitics and Mr. Quay would not be in it.

For this reason Mr. Quay and his political as-sociates will not, I think, permit the renomination of Harrison. They are not going to help build up a President by tearing themheip build up a President by tearing them-selves down, and the simplest way out of the confusion is to nominate McKinley. That, at least, is the programme now, and you can bank on it that the knowing ones in both political parties have turned their faces to the West for candidates, and all political straws are blowing in the direction of Obic I would be way that the Renybli
