[BY CABLE TO THE DISPATCH.]

BRUSSELS, April 28 .- [Copyright.]-A duel was fought this afternoon by Edward Fox and Hallett Alsop Borrowe, in the hollows of the sand dunes on the Belgian coast, near Newport Bains, a few miles from Ostend. It resulted in nothing worse than a triple perforation of the skirts of Fox's new frock coat, but was as close a call as a Borrowe's bullet went into the coat about six inches below the lowest button, so close to Fox's abdomen that it scraped his trous ers. Had Borrowe bettered his aim by half an inch the result would have been fatal beyond a doubt.

There were seven persons present at the encounter beside the principals. Fox was seconded by William B. Bacon, Jr., of Boston, and Borrowe by Harry Vane Milbank. The others present were Edwin Cleary, the actor of Covington, Ky., a surgeen and Monsieur Provost, proprietor of the Hotel Provost, near which the duel took place, and two reporters.

A Change of Venue Necessary. It had been intended that the men should meet on Colonel North's Belgian property, near Antwerp, the nitrate king having threats of vengeance against all concerned given Fox permission, but as the police got in his arrest, but no attention was paid to wind of the affair it was found necessary, at him.

Bacon arrived at the Hotel de l'Europe, Antwerp, at 8 o'clock yesterday evening, having come from London by way of Queensboro and Fulshing. Milbank landed the night before by way of Dover, Calais and Brussels, and Fox by way of Harwich. Edwin Cleary met Fox on the railroad platform as the train was leaving, and accompanied him as a matter of friendship. Nobody Had a Wink of Sleep,

Borrowe got to Brussels via Paris, and all were at the Hotel de l'Europe, in Antwerp, before 2 o'clock this morning. None of them went to bed. Fox and Borrowe wrote letters all night, while Milbank and Baco discussed the details of the coming duel, and Cleary made arrangements for the place of meeting with a kind-hearted Antwerp man who knew Provost, the hotel man near Os tend, and who was loth that the men should lose the opportunity of shooting at each Milbank and Borrowe left Antwerp for Ostend at 5 o'clock in the morning and the others in two parties, agreeing not to recognize each other en route lest they should rouse the suspicions of the police. Both parties met at Ghent, however, and Borrowe and Fox passed within a few feet of each other. Borrowe's face was impressive, but Fox looked upon his prospective antagonist with ill-concealed contempt.

Luncheon Eaten in Two Divisions Ostend was reached at noon, and the parties drove out in carriages to Newport, where luncheon was eaten in two divisions at the Hotel Provost. As 2:30 o'clock the surgeon arrived, and then the nine men strolled out to the sand dunes, Landlord Provost carrying the surgeon's case of instruments under his coat, and affecting to be showing his guests the scenery. It was not ten minutes' walk to the end of the pretty village, and then only five minutes' stroll over the little hills until a hollow was found from which the roofs of the houses could not

The interest was now ntense, as the two principals and the others watched the seconds pace off the ground. It had been decided that the men should fire two shots at 12 paces and all present knew that both meant business. The weapons were a pair of 45-caliber dueling pistols owned by Milbank, who fired them both in Bacon's presence to show that they were in proper condition.

Both Dressed in Proper Dueling Style The pistols were then reloaded and Fox and Borrowe were called to the scene of action. Both were dressed, as the etiquette of dueling requires, in frock coats and top hats. Fox wore his on the train from Antwerp, but Borrowe came thence in a swagger traveling suit, wearing a round bat and bringing a valise and hatbox. He made the change at the Hotel Provost, and changed back again after the affair was over. If Borrowe is a coward he did not show it this afternoon. He was absolutely cool and imperturbable, and Fox's nonchalance was never disturbed. "Gentlemen," said Milbank, after Bor-rowe and Fox had been placed 12 paces apart, and the revolvers handed to them, 'I shall say ready, fire, one, two, three; you may fire at any time between the words one and three. Are you ready?" "Ready," said Borrowe. Fox did not the word "two" was spoken. Neither of the men spoke a word, and the seconds advanced and took away the weapons. Both men stood in their tracks during the trying ceremony of reloading the revolvers. The only indication of nervousness on Borrowe's part was his lighting a cigarette. For never stirred.

never stirred.

When Milbank spoke the word "one" again, both men fired. As before, Borrowe stood still, but Fox lifted his hat, Borrowe returning the courtesy.

Both seconds ran up and found Fox's coat perforated, as related. Honor was declared satisfied, and Milbank said: "Gentlemen, my pistols have been in good hands." handa."
"I wish," said Milbank to Bacon, "that we could bring about a reconciliation," but that was impossible.
"I will take back," said Borrowe to Milbank, "what I said in my letter to Fox about his being a contemptible coward."

The Letter That Caused the Duel.

The letter referred to, which brought about the duel, was written to Fox by Borrowe, and delivered by Milbank last Sunday. It is as follows:

day. It is as follows:

SIR—You have stated that you had my consent and authority to publish the correspondence in the affair between Mr. Drayton and myself. You lied when you stated this, and your letters to me on the subject prove that you acted without my knowledge, consent or authority. You have further stated that I have been sheltering myself behind the broad shoulders of Harry Milbank. I quote your own words, and I again tell you that you lie. That Mr. Milbank's good faith should have continued after your despicable conduct had placed me in a false position, must be beyond your comprehension. I fully believe it would indeed be difficult for you to understand that to be loyal to your friends is a privilege among gentlemen, not an act of self sacrifice.

As a second you are a lamentable failure, Mr. Fox: perhaps as a principal you might the averages.

Mr. Fox: perhaps as a principal you might be a success. Personally, I doubt this, be-cause, in my opinion, a man who is untrue to others is untrue to himself, and he who has others is untrue to himself, and he who has not the courage of his opinions has not the consage to combat the opinion of others or, to put it more tersely, I believe you to be as contemptible a coward as you have proved yourself a hiar. May I not hope that a man who has once called himself my friend will still give me the only proof that can justify me in changing my opinion. I am, sir, your obedient servant.

Herbert Alsor Borrows.

For Sticks to His Statement. In response to this Mr. Bacon called upon Milbank and invited him to come to Belgium to discuss matters, with the result related. The last thing Fox did before he left the Hotel de L'Europe this morning was to write a statement in which he reiterates that he was authorized by Borrowe to publish the duel correspondence, and states that Colonel Tom Ochiltres prevailed upon him to act as Borrowe's secprevailed upon him to act as Borrowe's sec-ond in the proposed duel with Drayton. The principals and seconds in to-day's duel left Ostend by the 8:40 boat for London.

She also informed the policeman that her husband had been engaged of late in manufacturing dynamite bombs and other deadly articles, and offered bombs and other deadly articles, and offered to convince him that such was the fact if he would accompany her to the house. A policeman went to Stahley's house, and there, in a room occupied as a workshop, was found explosives, pieces of gas pipe with triggers attached, fire bombs, company while provided an according to the control of pressed white powder, swords, revolvers and two boxes of cartridges.

TROOPS DODGING THE RUSTLERS. The Soldiers and Cattlemen Won't Strike

the Railroad at Douglass, Wyo. Douglass, Wyo., April 23.-Major Fechel's troops, escorting the captive cattlemen, reached Brown's Springs last night. It is expected they will arrive at Fetterman this evening or to-morrow morning. Fetterman is on the railroad, and it is be lieved to be the intention to dodge the supposed destination, Douglass, owing to the fact that well-armed sympathizers with the rustlers have gathered here, including "Long Tom" Bird, of Glen Rock, who was on the regulators' death list.

Seeing He Was Certain to Be Ousted, H. Chose Haves as a Compromise. NEW YORK, April 23.-Speaking of the change that is to take place in the presidency of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, and the ousting of Russell Sage and Jay Gould from the directory, a well informed gentleman said to a reporter:

Mr. Gould orrinated the change of management himself. He saw that he was likely to be forced out by a combination of the foreign interests with those of the Vanderbilts. The Vanderbilt interests might have considered it worth while to secure control of the property. They might operate the Union Pacific with advantage in connection with the Chicago and Northwestern, and that scheme, very probably, was the key to the situation which brought about the change of management aunounced to be made. Mr. Gould, foreseeing the probable ontcome, suggested the name of Captain Hayes as a compromise candidate for the presidency of the company. tormed gentleman said to a reporter:

In a first anneal to the people of the city

In a final appeal to the people of the city of New York issued to-day by General

Horace Porter, he says:

Let it be remembered that our city authorities invited the family of General Grant to make the metropolis of the nation his permanent place of burial; that when the atempt was made in Congress to remove his remains to Washington, it was opposed by New York's representatives and defeated; that by such action our city assumed a sacred trust, and is bound by every consideration of honor and patriotism to redeem the piedges made to give fitting entombment to a hero's remains. We have contracted a debt, and like honest men we must pay it.

SIDE DOORS FOR BARBER SHOPS.

Ohio's Brand-New Sunday Closing Law Goes Into Effect To-Day. Nearly all It goes into effect to-morrow. Nearly all the barbers accept the new arrangement gracefully, but some of them, observing that a similar law with respect to saloon keepers has been violated by the use of side doors for years, and that when any have been brought to trial the juries obtainable in the police court have invariably acquitted or disagreed, have determined to admit customers by side doors and take the risk of punishment. They say they must serve their customers, to many of whom a Suuday shave is as much of a necessity as a breakfast.

tary's Nomination

ISPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATOR. CINCINNATI, April 23.-Grover Cleve land's friends were out in force to-night at the Odeon, at a meeting called to boom him for the Democratic Presidental nomination. There were present many prominent in the Democratic faith, and a sprinkling of the much abused Mugwumps. Such old-time Republicans as Lawrence Maxwell, Charles B. Wilby and Rev. George Augustine Thayer were numbered with Democrats of the local school like Captain Hollowsy, Judge Harmon, ex-Postmaster Riley, Colonel John W. Harper, R. B. Bowler and Adam Kramer. The rank and file was also there to hear "Dixie" played on the organ and enjoy the addresses laudatory of the leader of the party in the past two national campaigns.

Hon. Theodore Cook occupied the chair, and he at once sounded the keynote of the evening in declaring that while admitting the good qualities of others, there was a man above all others fitted to lead in the coming conflict. He declared that Grover Cleveland was the logical candidate of the Democratic party. His nomination would serve as a platform for the party on Tariff Reform and Honest Money, for he stands a leader of the opponents of a tariff that enriches one million at the expense of a hundred million. He had been pense of a hundred million. He had been attacked. So were Jefferson and Jackson. Like them he would be triumphantly elected a second time, and become enshrined forever in the hearts of the Democracy. Ever since the day he came upon the stage of public life he has grown in the estimation and confidence of the American people, and was to-day hailed as one of the first statesmen of the age. men of the age.

Hon. William M. Ramsey next spoke, and arraigned Tammany as a lot of spoils-men. He asserted that the Democracy had better put up the shutters than yield to the dictates of such a clan. The Democracy was tired of their dominations, and New York would send thousands to Chicago for Cleveland. The Democracy had become sick of Tammany's wail that New York could not be carried save by their grace. That was proved false in Tilden's case. A General Demand for Grover,

The country demanded Grover Cleveland, and he would be nominated, for he has earned the confidence of the whole country. earned the confidence of the whole country, irrespective of party. If the Democracy was organized simply for spoils the sooner it was dissolved the better. Tammany did not want Tilden. It does not want Cleveland. The threat repeated every four years that we must nominate a New York man or suffer defeat is no longer feared. Grover Cleveland will not only get New York's electoral vote, but that of Ohio and other States that Tammany could not get within 1,000 miles of.

General Michael Ryan, Rev. Mr. Thayer, Hon. J. P. Carberry and Judge Harmon also spoke. General Ryan made a reference to Hill, without mentioning his name, de a claring that he did not deserve notice, and hisses were mingled with the applause. Letters from absent Democrats were read and a cheering telegram from M. E. Ingalls, now in New York, was received with plaudits.

Jefferson county Republicans sounded the eynote of Eastern Ohio for the national

The story of the Heckscher-Gray duel is remembered as one of the most interesting of which society, especially New York, has ever had any cognizance. The social stand-ing of the principals in the encounter and the position of the lady, as well as the tumult, the great confusion, and the publicity of all the facts rendered it one of tion in the Gray household, but the domestic storm broke in all its fury when Mr. Heck-scher and the wife of his friend met at the Albemarie Hotel, New York, one day and Albemarie Hotel, New York, one day and the fact became known to Mr. Gray. It is said that some time previous to this discovery Mr. Gray declared that a child of which Mrs. Gray became a mother was not his, and he absolutely refused to recognize it or have anything to do with it in any way. After the hotel episode Mr. Gray sent a challenge to Mr. Heckscher, and New York laws being stringent against dueling the belligerents recognized that the proposed meeting could not safely take place.

A Duel Fought in Canada, Arrangements were made to settle the difficulty in Canada. Sunday evening, June 22, 1873, the principals with their respective seconds started on the same train for Rouse's Point, at the head of Lake Champlain. Dr. George A. Peters was Mr. Gray's private physician and accompanied his friend to the field of honor. It was agreed at the lest moment that Dr. Peters should serve whichever principal required his services.

The story runs that a suitable spot for the encounter was found not a great distance from the frontier in the edge of the wood. The late A. W. Clason was Mr. Heckscher's second, and it is believed that Mr. Carroll Livingston acted for Mr. Gray. The weapons A single exchange of shots was to end the quarrel. It is represented that when the word to fire was given Mr. Grav promptly discharged his weapon. His bullet passed through the skirt of his opponent's frock coat. Mr. Heckscher did not fire until several seconds after the significant of the second of the seco nal was given. He kept the muzzle of his weapon pointing toward Gray until the smoke from the latter's pistol had cleared away, when he slowly raised his arm and fired in the air.

The Duel Got Into Court. According to some stories, the belligerents became reconciled while on the journey southward, while other versions of the affair are to quite the opposite effect. Arriving in New York, the dueling party secluded themselves, and in a short time Mr. Gray and Mr. Livingston went to Europe. Mr. Gray subsequently obtained a divorce. Meanwhile the excitement over the affair was intense, and it formed the topic of conversation nearly everywhere, especially in the Union Club, of which organization both men were members.

Mr. Clason, when summoned before the grand jury, gave his version of the duel.

An indictment against the other partici-pants in the affair was found, but through ts faulty construction, at least in the eyes of District Attorney Garvin, it was not formally presented. Before another grand jury Mr. Clason refused to answer on the jury air. Clason refused to answer on the ground that his answers would criminate himself. Mr. Clason was remanded in custody of a deputy sheriff. After staying in jail some days he was discharged.

Clason Took All the Blame, Mr. Clason after his release issued a card. Heckscher and Mr. Gray to go to Canada, and that he had suggested that Mr. Livingston accompany them. He denied that he had delivered either message or challenge.

Mr. Clason's card goes on: Mr. Clason's card goes on:

The duel has been termed a farce. I only am censurable. Had I chosen there that it should be fought with one loaded and one unloaded pistol breast to breast such would have been its course. Had I asked a second or third fire it would have been given. Few of those who sneer at "the isroe" would feel before a pistol at 12 paces only a sense of the ludicrous. A second has no concern with a quarrel. His function is to secure fair play and ends on the field. Compelled to appear before grand juries, I insisted (for others) upon a legal privilege of declining to answer. When that privilege was judicially denied, my duty to others was declining to answer. When that proves judicially denied, my duty to oth

Out in Oakland-He Persisted in Trailing Ladies-How a Frightened Woman Su ceeded in Entrapping Him.

A man who gives the name of Samuel Langsdale and his residence as Allegheny was arrested by Detective Sterck in Oakland yesterday and locked up in the Fourteenth ward station. No charge has been entered against him on the blotter, but he is accused of following and annoying ladies.

Yesterday afternoon a well-known lady, whose name the police refuse to give, came to the city shopping. As she left a Penn avenue store she noticed a man watching her closely. He followed her to the Diamoud market and from there to several stores. The lady, annoyed, took a Fifth avenue car and the fellow jumped on after her. At Oakland she alighted and took refuge in a drugstore, her persecutor leaving the car and standing ward station brought Detective Starck. At his advice the lady left the store, and when the fellow again started after her he was arrested. He refused to tell who he was, what he did or where he lived, other than that his name was Samuel Langsdale, and his residence in Allegheny. in Order to Supply Boston With Pare Water for 50 Years. Boston, April 23 .- [Special.]-The Box ton water board has a stupendous scheme in contemplation for a greater water supply which, if carried out, will mean, before the end is reached, the expenditure of fully $20,000,000 and the wiping out of two towns The plan is to bring water from the Deer field river to Boston. The ground has already been surveyed by the water board. The Deerfield valley is about 90 miles from Boston by a direct line. The river follows the line of the Fitchburg Railroad. The country for miles about is sparsely settled, and there are but a few small manufacturing concerns which are in any way dependent upon the Deerfield river for their water supply, but should the plan be finally adopted, it would be necessary to wipe out one, if not two villages in Frank lin county. These are Colerain and Charle-mont. The former has a population of almost 1,700 persons and the latter about 1,000. To take the waters of the Deerfield river now would, in the opinion of experts, insure a pure supply for Boston. The stream is almost entirely free from pollution, and the supply would be good for at least 50 years.

The cow-catcher on the car struck the child and she fell over on it and was carried some distance before the car could be stopped.

The terrified gripman hurried to the front of the car to find the child seated on the cow-catcher unhurt, but somewhat bewil-dered. An examination of the little girl showed that she suffered no injury. The case was rather a miraculous one.

MAY BE A CRAZED CIGARETTE VICTIM ISPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH. KANSAS CITY, April 23. - John O. Bishop, boy of 17 years, well bred and tenderhearted, is under arrest here charged with committing a long series of burglaries. For a month he worked hard for Contractor Gordon painting buildings, but at night he has alone robbed two street cars and nine persons. As a desperado he has shown much nunning. He said to-night: I went into this business about two months ago because I was in debt. I've been working for a man named Gordon, who is a painter and lives at 1609 Alexander street. He's a good man, and he didn't have anything to do with this. I had to pay my debts somehow. There were two fellows that came somehow. There were two fellows that came to me last winter and said this was a goodousiness to work and wanted me to go in with them, but I did not. When I got ready with them, but I did not. When I got ready I went in for myself. I do all my work alone. I've held up ten men. One of them didn's get into the papers. That was about six weeks ago, 'way out on Myrtle avenue, outweeks ago, 'way out on Myrtie avenue, out-side the city limits. He shot at me and I shot at him. It was dark and I chased a round a good deal. He fired five shots at me and I fired nine at him. I had two re-

The Personification of Cheek. On a Friday night I met H. O. Wheeler, leader of the orchestra at the Grand Opera House. At the point of a pistol I ordered him to hold up his hands, and, on his failure to do so, shot at him once and ran. I took off my mask, went around the block, took off my mask, went around the block, took off the overcoat I wore and threw it over my arm, and then met Wheeler again. "I heard some shooting. Was anybody hurt?" I said. Then I listened to his story of the attempt at highway robbery. Wheeler said the robber was 5 feet, 9 inches tall.

The night after that I robbed Conductor van Meter and shot Gripman Phillips. I rode on Van Meter's car the next day and asked him about the robbery. He said the robber ran away. In fact, I walked south on Brooklyn avenue, with my head turned, so as to see behind me, and I never ran once.

The capture of the highwayman came in this way: Some little boys were playing in the vacant timbered lot across the street from 1611 Alexander street. In a hollow from 1611 Alexander street. In a hollow tree they found a revolver, some money and a watch chain. They told the police. The police lay in wait. A little after dark Capt. Burns and Sergeant Burgess arrested Johnny as he was about to look for this property. They took him to the station. There Johnny made a confession.

One of his pistols, he said, was hidden under the sidewalk in front of 1725 Montgall avenue, and there it was found. Miss Rowbolton, a pretty 15-year-old girl, lives in this house, and Bishop often called on her. Her parents thought he was an exemplary young man.
"No, I don't spend my money on any girl," said Bishop, when his name was mentioned. "I have taken her to the thea-

The police say the boy has committed every robbery reported from the East Side for the past six weeks. An effort will be made to show that this boy is insane, the result of excessive eigeratte smoking. Medi-cal treatment will be given to break him of the habit. He smokes a cigarette every 15 minutes for 12 hours in the day.
