FOUR NEW TEMPLES.

Laying the Cornerstone of an Italian Catholic Church.

IMPRESSIVE RELIGIOUS SERVICES.

Dedication of the Homewood Avenue Methodist Episcopal.

REV. WILLIAM SHADRACH MEMORIAL

It was an important day in the church history of Pittsburg yesterday. The Reman Catholic Italians laid the cornerstone of their first house of worship in this city, and the new Homewood Avenue Methodist Episcopal and the Shadrach Memorial churches were dedicated. Just outside the line, in Knoxville, the cornerstone of the Incarnation chapel was laid. The cornerstone of the Italian Catholic Church was laid in the afternoon with appropriate and impressive ceremonies in the presence of a large concourse of people. Preceding the ceremonies there was a parade acting as an escort to Bishop Phelan, which was made up as follows:

Troop of Four Horsemen.

Troop of Four Horsemen.

Hays Post Band.

Duquesne and St. Mary's Commanderies Uniformed Enight's of St. John, Messrs.

Alaud and McAllister Commander, So men.

Chief Marshal Joseph Commo and Assistants A. J.

Martini, J. C. Muzzio and Staff of 39 Horsemen.

American Millitary Fand.
Colonia Italian Society, 100 men.

Carriages Containing Prominent Citizens and Their Familles.

Laxing the Carner Stone.

Laying the Corner Stone, The parade, after passing over the principal downtown streets, brought up in front of the new edifice. Bishop Phelan, accompanied by Fathers Gallagher, Wall, Canne-vin, Faboglos, Bendine and others, clad in their priestly robes, marched over from the convent of the Sisters of Mercy and went through the ceremony of laying the corner

The procession of priests headed by six altar boys first circled the church, chanting a hymn, while the bishop sprinkled holy water over the walls. After circling the building the procession of priests halted at the southwest corner, where the corner-stone, in which was placed a tin box con-taining the official records of the church, coins, etc., was placed in position.

Addresses in Italian and English. After the corner stone was laid the priests mounted the structure, where a platform had been erected. Rev. Father Bendine addressed the assembled crowd in Italian and was followed by Rev. Father Caunevin, who made an address in English dwelling on the name of the church St. Peters and the works of the Saint, after whom it was

The new church, which is located at the corner of Webster avenue and Tunnel street is to be a two-story building of brick and stone and will cost, when completed, $25,000. The basement is to be used as a schoolroom, and on the second floor will be the church proper. Ten thousand dollars has already been raised and the rest of the money will be ready when the church is completed, which will be in October.

DEDICATION AT HOMEWOOD,

Opening Services in a Handsome Methodis Episcopal Church,

The new Homewood Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church was formally dedicated yesterday, when three services were held. In the morning the dedicatory sermon was preached by Rev. C. W. Smith, editor of the were principally on the way to build up churches and enlist new members. One thousand dollars was raised at this session In the evening Rev. C. V. Wilso preached the sermon and remarks were nade by Dr. Miller, the presiding elder. The church is of stone and brick and was built at a cost of $17,000. The design is Romanesque and the church has a seating capacity of 500. The pulpit platform is deep, allowing sufficient space for a pipe organ on one side and for the choir on the other. The old frame church which has been used for years will be turned into a Sunday school room. The church was organized in 1871, with 18 members, and it now has a membership of 250, with Rev. O. A. Emerson as its proctor. The Young People's Association of the church has contributed largely to its support as well as to the building of the new church. The stained glass windows were furnished by this association and the cupola by the Ladies' Aid Society.

THE SHADRACH MEMORIAL

Dedication of a Church Erected to Commemorate a Divine's Services.

A handsome little church, erected as nemorial to the life and services of the late Rev. William Shadrach, D. D., was dedicared yesterday and christened as the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church. The beautiful weather and the interest in the occasion attracted many persons. The ceremony was of interesting character and throughout the day and evening.
The new edifice is located on Fifth avenue opposite Gist street, and presents a nent and artistic appearance from an archi-tectural point. The cost will amount to

At the morning service Rev. Clarence A Adams, of Franklin, Pa., preached the ser-mon, and the financial statement relative to the cost of the building was made by Thomas Corde, Treasurer of the Building Commit-tee. The choir, assisted by Mrs. H. C. Fry, of Rochester, and Mrs. O. J. Sturgis, of Pittsburg, contributed appropriate music.
In the afternoon Revs. J. K. Cramer,
H. C. Applegarth, W. A. Stanton,
D. D., and other divines made addresses on interesting topics.

and other divines made addresses on interesting topics, and the pastor, Rev. A. J. King, led in prayer. The collections during the two services netted about $800 in cash and dedges. This will be applied to paying the mortgage on the church property.

James Beatty was the architect of the edifice, and the Building Committee consisted of Rev. Thomas Chatman, Thomas Hart, George Corde, William Verner and W. W. Williams. The congregation numbers 850, and the Sunday school about 200.

AN EPISCOPALIAN CHAPEL

Corner Stone Laying Yesterday Afterno in the Borough of Knoxville.

The corner stone was laid yesterday afternoon of the Incarnation Chapel, an Episcopalian house of worship in Knoxville. The building will be small, but very handsome. The services were conducted by the Revs. W. R. Mackay, A. D. Brown and H. D. Tarrant. Music was rendered by the vested choir of St. Mark's.

WAITING FOR SPIRITS.

John Morrow Opens His Season a Week Earlier Than Anticipated-A Small Congregation Attends the First Seance, but No Startling Developments Are Ap-

John Morrow, the ex-reverend of Bethany Home, has begun his campaign against wickedness of the soul and the illness of the flesh just a week earlier than he intended. A regular meeting was held yesterday afternoon at the new home of the latter day apostle on Nunnery Hill, and some 14 of his believers and 16 curiosity seekers graced the dark little parlor where the good

Mr. Morrow held forth.

The meeting house or abode of Morrow and his much-enduring family is a large 12room residence, decorated without with a dull, clayey yellow and baked canvas-back duck brown within. A dank, dark feeling is in the atmosphere, which is said to be t conducive to the advent of the spirits, who have plenty of room to enter through the many open windows and roam through-out the silent building before descending upon the unfortunate sufferers and healing their hypochondriscal silments. There are children in the house, but as they are Mr.
Morrow's children they, like the spirit guests and residents, eschew unseemly plays, and the popular silence is unbroken by their voices. Yesterday's meeting began at 2:30 o'clock. The 30 people present, some with a sad, far-away expression on their oft-furrowed faces and a dreamy look in their lusterless eyes, and others with a smile lurking "prunes prisms"-like in a corner of their mouths, sat stiff and formal upon the straight-back chairs ranged around the room. Mr. Morrow ebbed into the room with his brush-like whiskers brushed out sternly and the bright red spots blazing pleasantly just beneath his deep-sunken eyes. A Bible was held in his brown, hairy hand, and his shiny, black coat set religiously upon his loose, long figure. He read a little from the Bible, prayed more from memory and sang with seemly vehemence from a book. Then he blessed everybody, and as no one arose to tell him they had received the much wanted faith he bade them a careful religious adieu. Kissing was not indulged in in the open meeting and the believers lingered upon the porch, but the good Mrs. Morrow was present and the osculatory benediction made famous by Mr. Morrow at Bethany was not practiced. A meeting will be held next Thursday night at 7:30 o'clock.;
