Fruitful Causes.

TALMAGE'S REGULAR SUNDAY SERMON

BROOKLYN, April 24.-Dr. Talmage's text to-day was Prov. xII:27, "The slothful man roasteth not that which he took in David, and Jeremiah, and Ezekiel, and Micah, and Solomon of the text showed that some time they had been out on a bunting expedition. Spears, lances, swords, and nets were employed in this service. A deep pitfall was would be digged. In the center of it there some raised ground with a pole on which a namb would be fastened, and the wild beast not seeing the pitfall, but only seeing the lamb would plunge for its prey and dash down, itself captured. Birds were caught in gins, or pierced with arrows.

The hunters in olden time had two misone to clear the land of feroclous beasts and the other to obtain meat for themseives, and their families. The occupation and habit of hunters are a favorite Bible simile. David said he was hunted by his enemy like a partridge upon the mountain.

My text is a bunting scene.

A sportsman arrayed in a garb appropriate to the wild chase lets slip the blood:hirsty bounds from their kennels, and mounting his fleet horse with a halloo and the yell of the greyhound pack, they are off and away, and the hunter has just time to be in at the death. Yet, after all the baste and peril of the chase, my text represents this sports-man as being too indolent to dress the game and prepare it for food.

All Nature Despises Laziness. As if to create in us a hatred for indolence, God has made those animals which are sluggish to appear loathsome in our eyes, while those which are fleet and active, he has clothed with attractiveness. The tortoise, the sloth, the snail, the crocodile repel us, while the deer and the gazelle are as pleas-ing as they are fleet, and from the swift wings of innumerable birds God has spared no purple or gold or jet or crimson or snowy whiteness. Besides all this the Bible is constantly assaulting the vice of laziness. Solomon seems to order the idler out of his sight as being beyond all human instruction when he says: "Go to the ant, thou slug-gard; consider her ways and be wise." when he says: "Go to the ant, thou singgard; consider her ways and be wise."

Now, what are the causes of laziness and what are its evil results? I knew a man who was never up to time. It seemed impossible for him to meet an engagement. When he was to be married, he missed the train.
His watch seemed to take on the labits of its owner and was always too slow. He had a constitutional lethargy, for which he did not seem responsible. So indolence often arises from the natural temperament. I do not know but that there is a constitutional tendency to vice in every man. However active you may generally be, have you not on some warm spring day felta touch of this feeling on you, although you may have shaken it off as you would a reptile? But some are so powerfully tempted to this by their bedily constitution that all the work of their life has been accomplished with this lethargy hanging on their back or treading on their heels.

Indolence as Shown in Childhood.

deer that they brought down after long and changed on their heels.

Indolence as Shown in Childhood.

You sometimes behold it in childhood.
The child moping and lounging within doors while his brothers and sisters are at play, or if he join them he is behind in every race and beaten in every game, His nerves, his muscles, his bones are smitten with this palsy. He vegetates rather than lives, creeps rather than walks, yawns rather than breathes. The animal in his nature is stronger than the intellectual. He is generally a great eater and active only when he cannot digest that which he has enten. It requires as much effort for him to walk as for others to run. Languor and drowsiness are his natural inheritance. He is built for a slow-sailing vessel, a heavy hulk and an insufficient cut-water. Place an active man in such a bodily structure and the latter would be shaken to pieces in one day. Every law or physiology demands that he be supine.

Such a one is not responsible for this powerful tendency of his nature. His great duty is resistance. When I see a man fighting an unfortunate temperament all my sympathies are aroused.

is resistance. When I see a man fighting an unfortunate temperament all my sympathies are aroused.

Furthermore, indolence is often a result of easy circumstances. Rough experience in earlier life seems to be necessary in order to make a man active and enterprising. Mountainess make a man active and enterprising. Mountaineers are nearly always swarthy, and those who have tolled among mountains of trouble get the most nerve and muscle and brain. The warm summer sun of presperity has weakened and relaxed them. Born among the luxuries of life, exertion has been unnecessary, and, therefore, they spend their time in taking it easy.

Discouragement Causes Indolence. Another cause of indolence is severe dis couragement. There are those around us who started life with the most sanguine ex pectation. Their enterprise excited the remark of all compeers. But some sudden and overwhelming misfortune met them, and henceforth they have been inactive Trouble, instead of making them more de termined, has overthrown them. They have lost all self-reliance. They imagine that all lost all self-reliance. They imagine that all men and all occurrences are against them. They hang their heads where once they walked upright. They never look you in the eyes. They become misanthropic and pronounce all men liars and scoundrels. They go melanchoic and threadbare to their graves. You cannot rouse them to action by the most glittering offer.

In most cases these persons have been homored and upright all their lives, for rogues never get discouraged, as there is always some other plot they have not sprung. There are but few sadder sights than a man of talent and tact and undoubted canacity giving up life as a failure, like a line of magnificent steamers rotting against wharves, from which they ought to have been carrying the exportations of a nation. Every great financial panic produces a large crop of such men. Reverie is also a cause of indolence. There are multitudes of men who are entirely unwilling to put for the any physical, moral or intellectual effort. They have a great many eloquent theories of life. They are all the while expecting something to turn up. They pass their life in dreaming.

The Evils of Vicious Literature, They have read in light literature how men suddenly and unexpectedly came to large estates, or found a pot of buried gold at the foot of the rainbow of Good Luck, or had some great offer made them. They have passed their lives in reverie. Notwith standing he is pinched with poverty and any other man would be downcast at the any other man would be downcast at the foriorn prospect, he is always cheerful and sanguine and jovial, for he does not know but that he may be within a day or two of astounding success. You cannot help be entertained with his cheerfulness of temper. All the world wishes him well, for he never did anybody any harm. At last he dies in just the same condition in which he lived, sorrowful only because he must leave the world just at the time when his long-thought-of plans were about to be successful.

Let no young man begin life with reverie.

There is nothing accomplished without hard work. Do not in idleness expect something to turn up. It will turn down. Indolence and wickedness always make bad luck.
Again, bad habits are a fruitful source o

Again, bad habits are a fruitful source of indolence. Sinful indulgence shuts a man's shop and dull his tools and steal his profits. Dissoluteness is generally the end of industry. There are those who have the rare faculty of devoting occasionally a day or a week to loose indulgences, and, at the expiration of that time, go back with bicared eyes and tremulous hands and bioated checks to the faithful and successful performance of their duties. Indeed their employers and neighbors expect this amusement or occasional season of frolic.

Rushing to Destruction on Wings, But, as the time rolls on, the season of dissipation becomes more protracted and the season of steadiness and sobriety more ited, until the employers become dis

Equity Description of the year and then leaves him for weeks and months entirely unemployed. There are many men who cannot endure protracted leisure. They are like fractious steeds that must constantly be kept to the load, for a week's quiet makes them intractable and uncontrollable. Bad habits produce idleness and idleness produces bad habits. Sin will take all enthuslasm out of your work and make you sick of life's drudgery. Bad habits unfit man for everything but politics.

Now, what are the results of indolence? A marked consequence of this vice is physical disease. The healthiness of the whole natural world depends upon activity.

Every Living Thing in Ceaseless Motion.

Every Living Thing in Ceaseless Motion. There is an endless activity under foot and everhead Not one four-o'clock in the flowerbed, not one fly on the window pane, not one squirrel gathering food, but is busy now and is busy always, fulfilling its mission as certainly as any monarch on earth or any angel in heaven. Everything is busy. Nothangel in heaven. Everything is busy. Nothing is inanimate, except the man who cannot see the life and hear the music.

Men will be healthy—intellectually, morally and physically—only upon the condition of an active industry. I know men die every day of overwork. Nature in time arraigns every such culprit at her bar, and presents against him an indictment of 100 counts, and convicts him on each one of them. The laws of nature will not stop their action because men may be ignorant of them.

them, There are many who estimate the respect

There are many who estimate the respectability of an occupation by the little exertion it demands, and would not have their children enter any employment where their hands may be solied, forgetting that a laborer's overalls are just as honorable as a priest's robes and an anvil is just as respectable as a pulpit. Health flies from the bed of down and says: "I cannot sleep here;" and from the table spread with ptarmigan and epicurean viands, saying: "I cannot eat here;" and from the vehicle of soft cushious and easy springs, saying: "I cannot ride here;" and from houses luxuriously warmed and upholstered, saying: "I cannot live here."

Satan Has Work for Idle Hands.

Satan Has Work for Idle Hands. Furthermore, notice that indolence en dangers the soul. Satan makes his chief quests over men who either have nothing to do, or, if they have, refuse to do it. Ther is a legend that St. Thomas, years after Christ's resurrection, began again to doubt, and he went to the Apostles and told them about his doubts. Each Apostle looked at and he went to the Apostles and told them about his doubts. Each Apostle looked at him with surprise and then said he must be excused for he had no time to listen any longer. Then St. Thomas went to the devout women of his time, and expressed his doubts. They said they were sorry but they had no time to listen. Then St. Thomas concluded that it was because they were so busy that the Apostles and the devout women had no doubts.

Idleness not only leads a man into associations which harm his morals, but often thrusts upon him the worst kind of scepticism. Loafers are almost always infidels, or fast getting to be. Consummate idlers never read the Bible, and, if they appear in church, can be distinguished in an audience of a thousand by their listlessness, for they are too lazy to hear. It is not so much among occupied merchants, industrious mechanics and professional men always busy that you hear the religion of Jesus maligned, as in public lounging places, given up to profanity and dissoluteness. They have no sympathy with the book that says: "Let him that stole, steal no more; but rather let him labor, working with his hands the thing which is good, that he may have to give to him that needeth." I never knew a man given up to thorough idleness that was converted. Simon and Andrew were converted while fishing, and Lydia while selling purple.

Opportunities That Are Unimproved. But my text is descriptive also of those who hunt for opportunities and, when they get them, do not use them. The rabbit they overcome by an early morning tramp lies for weeks uncooked in the dooryard. The deer that they brought down after long and exhausting pursuit in the Adirondacks lies

One of the interesting relics of Waldboro is a silk dress 104 years old, belonging to Mrs. Benjamin Kaler, whose great-grandmother was a sister of Daniel Webster. It is old and faued and of curious design, but still preserved as a sacred relic. A dress so old is indeed a wonder, but a greater marvel is the flour made by the Marshall Kennedy Milling Company. It has stood the wear of 40 years in popular favor, and gets better every year. Their Camellia and Bayard Amber stand without a rival. Ask your every year.
