

ON GRANT'S BIRTHDAY

The Cornerstone of His New York Mausoleum is Impressively Laid BY THE HAND OF THE PRESIDENT.

A Crowd of Forty Thousand Witnesses the Solemn Ceremonies.

SPEECHES BY PORTER AND DR. DEPEW

NEW YORK, April 27.—The seventeenth anniversary of the birth of General U. S. Grant occurred to-day, and the occasion was selected for a most appropriate commemoration—the laying of the cornerstone of the imposing monument which is to mark the last resting place of the soldier-hero, on the bank of the Hudson, in Riverside Park.

The Legislature ordained that the solemn ceremonial of laying the corner stone of the nation's greatest General should be recognized as a State affair, and that from noon to midnight the day should be a legal holiday. It was generally observed as such, not only in the departments of the municipal and Federal Governments, but also in the exchanges. Most of the factories knocked off work for the day, and the operations ceased for the most part throughout the metropolitan district.

The Large Crowd at Riverside Park. Interest, of course, centered in Riverside Park, the scene of this afternoon's ceremonial, and in the earliest hours of the day people began to set to pre-empt places of vantage at this Mecca of the patriotic citizens. A grand stand had been completed to seat 12,000 persons. It was built upon and around the concrete foundation of the 100-foot-square mausoleum, at the northern end of which rests the casket containing the body of the dead General. Below, on the ground, were arranged rows of benches for the Grand Army veterans, 3,000 of whom were arranged for.

On the southeast corner of the irregular-shaped grand stand platform were seats assigned to the members of the Grand Army, and the President and his party and distinguished guests were placed in the center of the platform, facing the speakers' rostrum, and to the east of the corner stone. The corner stone is at the southeast corner of the mausoleum, and this morning it hung in mid-air, suspended from a powerful derrick. It is 6x6x3 feet of solid granite and weighs more than ten tons.

At 8:30 this morning the Miantonomoh, which had steamed up the river from the navy yard, dropped anchor in the Hudson opposite the tomb, and Commander Segant sent a body of sailors ashore with hunting and signal flags, and these were festooned over the unsightly derrick, and the Stars and Stripes were displayed from every available point.

At noon there was a grand crowd about the Fifth Avenue Hotel, awaiting the departure of the Presidential party for Riverside Park. Troop A, cavalry, Captain C. F. Roe commanding, drew up on Fifth Avenue and saluted the President as he entered. After the parade at 12:45. When President Harrison appeared at the ladies' entrance of the hotel the crowd cheered. The President lifted his hat and stepped into a big barouche drawn by four horses. With the President and General Horace Porter and Lieutenant Parker. In the second carriage sat Vice President Morton and F. D. Tappan; in the third, Secretary Elihu and General Butterfield; in the fourth, Postmaster General Wainwright and John H. Starn, and in the fifth Secretary Noble and H. W. Cannon. Other carriages which followed contained Secretary Hunt, Cornelius Bliss, Chauncey M. Depew and others.

The cavalrymen then wheeled into column, and with four platoons preceding and three following the President's Executive and his party took up the march to Riverside Park. The ceremonies were to begin at 2 o'clock. Long before that hour, however, the 12,000 grand stand seats were filled, and the green-velvet adjoining the platform was a pushing crowd of spectators. The Local Legion and members of the Grand Army of the Republic were the first to arrive.

At 2 o'clock the crowd had swelled to 40,000. The arrival of the President and General Franz Sigel, about this time was the signal for an outburst of cheers by his G. A. R. comrades. Among the distinguished guests on the platform were Generals Schofield, Howard, Dodge and Slocum, the only men now living who commanded army corps during the late war.

President Harrison's Initial Remarks. President Harrison and party arrived at 2:15. The crowd cheered vociferously as General Horace Porter escorted President Harrison to the platform. After the parade the David's Island Band had played "Hail to the Chief," and an invocation by Rev. Dr. John Hall, General Horace Porter, President of the Grant Monument Association, said in part:

We gather here to lay the corner stone of a temple of the dead, to celebrate an event which will be forever memorable in history. This day has been selected for the occasion because it is the anniversary of the birth of the illustrious soldier and citizen whose ashes will repose with the honored remains of the brave men who followed him to victory.

Although the fund required for the completion of this monumental tomb is large, it was decided to lay the corner stone to-day, in the confidence that the progress made in the confidence of the people, and if necessary will never be allowed to stop until completed. Two hundred and fifteen commitments are now on file at work. They have enlisted for the war, and if necessary will fight it out on this line if it takes all summer. A report of the progress made in obtaining subscriptions up to last evening has been received. I have great satisfaction in announcing to you that the amount of subscriptions made up to that date, as the result of four weeks' work amount to $292,500.

The work of obtaining subscriptions will continue until every company, firm and individual has been offered an opportunity to subscribe. While some generous subscriptions will be received from other cities, the people of the nation have seemed to say to New York, You have secured the honor of entombing within your borders the ashes of America's greatest captain; the memorial to be reared will be the chief ornament of your city, pilgrimages will be made from all quarters of the globe to visit that monument. You are the metropolis and the center; you must, unaided, build the structure. New York has accepted the challenge and will make good her word.

The Laying of the Corner Stone. As the moment drew near when the stone should be placed in position the mighty throng of persons on every side became very quiet. Workmen muffled the wind-lashes on either side of the immense wall of granite. With hands uncovered they waited for the President to scatter the mortar, when they would raise the stone to lower the stone. The President stepped down from the platform. A gold trowel placed in his hand, he stepped over to the southwest corner of the foundations. The crowd, which was equalled only by that which saw the body of the dead General placed in the tomb, became so still that the chirp of a robin calling to its mate from the trees just behind the stands was heard distinctly.

The President stood on the foundation directly in front of the stone. Then he passed the trowel between the stone and the bed of cement beneath it, and the wind-lashes began to crack. In a moment the stone was in place. The corner stone had been laid. The President stepped upon a small stand in front and made a brief address, as follows:

President Harrison's Short Speech. LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—My assignment in connection with these exercises has to do with to-day, rather than with oratory. The pleasing duty of bringing to your memory to-day those brilliant public services and those personal and manly virtues which have placed the name of Ulysses S. Grant so high upon the scroll of fame, and settled the name of a man so deeply in all patriotic hearts, has devolved upon another, who never fails to do credit to himself or give pleasure to his favored hearers. (Cheers.) No orator, however gifted, can over-praise General Grant. (Cheers.) The most impressive and costly memorial that an architect can plan or wealth can execute is justified when it honors a man whose name is inscribed upon it. (Cheers.) This monument, which has now been laid, accompanied by this magnificent expression of public opinion, is only the topstone of a foundation. It speaks to us of a structure imposing and graceful in its completeness, which is being built with steady progress, without check or tardiness, till the capstone is set amid the plaudits of the liberal and patriotic citizens of this great city. Thus his fame grew, from Belmont to Appomattox, in whose honor this dome is being built. I am glad to see here that seems to me to be the double assurance that the work so nobly planned will be speedily consummated. Four distinguished citizens who have assumed, as a labor of love, the burden of conducting this great enterprise, from his beloved chief to exclude the word failure from his vocabulary. (Loud cheers, during which the President resumed his seat.)

Chauncey Depew's Oration. Music followed, and then the orator of the day, Dr. Chauncey M. Depew, delivered his address, saying, during the course of his remarks:

Every State cherishes the remains of its citizens, whose illustrious achievements are the glory of the country and the pride of their respective States. The noblest of these lives are ever living lessons of love and devotion to the flag and Constitution of the United States. The noblest of these lives are ever living lessons of love and devotion to the flag and Constitution of the United States. The noblest of these lives are ever living lessons of love and devotion to the flag and Constitution of the United States.

Grant's claims upon the gratitude of his countrymen are many. He will have peculiar remembrance in the hearts of the people of Lincoln, immediately recognized that the Republic must live as the fathers had founded it. American liberty is entrenched in the indissoluble union of sovereign States and cannot exist with subject provinces. Above Belmont and Appomattox, above Shiloh and Vicksburg, above the campaign in the West and Appomattox in the East, the noblest of these lives are ever living lessons of love and devotion to the flag and Constitution of the United States.

Close of the Afternoon's Ceremonies. Rev. Dr. Hall then pronounced the benediction, and the guns of the Miantonomoh thundered forth a national salute. A novel feature of the programme was the part taken by school boys, to the number of 1,500 or 2,000, who marched by the tomb and sang the national anthem. The President and his party, with one of her grandchildren and a party of her friends, occupied a position of honor on the grandstand. The Chinese Minister at Washington, with members of his staff, were present at the express invitation of Mrs. Grant. He has subscribed $800 to the fund.

The cavity beneath the stone contains the following articles: Constitution of the United States, Declaration of Independence, Articles of Confederation, the Bible, printed by the American Bible Society; Memorial Day, May 30 and 31, 1868, containing among other things list of contributors of the Grant Monument; Memorial Day, May 30 and 31, 1868, containing among other things list of contributors of the Grant Monument; Memorial Day, May 30 and 31, 1868, containing among other things list of contributors of the Grant Monument.

As soon as the ceremonies at the Grant tomb were over, President Harrison, Miss Dimmick, Secretaries Noble and Wainwright, Vice President Morton, General Morton, General Porter, Lieutenant Parker and Superintendent Elr, of the Pennsylvania Railway, took carriage and were driven to the ferry. They crossed over to the Pennsylvania depot, in Jersey City, where the Presidential party took a special train for Washington at 6:30 o'clock. Secretary Noble stopped off at Philadelphia to attend the Grant dinner in that city.
