PETROLEUM FIELDS OF GALICIA.

THE LOWLY FOLK OF AUSTRIAN POLAND

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE DISPATCH.1 LEMBERG, GALICIA, April 17. - My original purpose in visiting Austrian Poland was to inspect, at the invitation of a triend, the new petroleum fields of Northeastern Austria, and incidentally to study the Galician lowly. On first reaching Cracow a hasty trip by rail to Kolomes, in the southeastern corner of Galicia, a half day's walk from the frontier of barbario Bessarabia, demonstrated that there was nothing of very great interest to write of these industrial developments.

An oil belt 300 miles in length and about 25 miles wide extends southeast from near Sanok, in Galicia, along the Carpathian range of mountains. It then passes between Bukovina and Hungary, and thence breaks away into the Roumanian oil fields in detached spurs of the Carpathians. It is perhaps 1,000 miles in length, and altogether forms what is known in the geography of petroleum as the "Galician deposite" and territory of the "Austro-Roumanian re-

Until 1881 the operations were of the Until 1881 the operations were of the most primitive character, consisting almost exclusively of "hand digging" and the "free fall" systems of sinking wells. At the date named the Canadian system of "pole tool drilling" was introduced, and rapid development, backed by English capital and operated by Galician Polish companies, re-sulted. All the steam power machinery is imported from England. Engineers and superintendents have been brought from the Canadian oil fields, and the tools, formerly supplied from Hanover, are now made in Galicia.

No Such Flow as Pennsylvania's,

The flow of oil is not to be compared with that of the average Pennsylvania districts. It becomes most insignificant when the great Russian wells of Baku are taken into secount, yet it is a fairly profitable source of supply; has given employment to thousands of Polish and Ruthenian peasants, whose wages are 90 kreutzers, or about 36 cents per day, with a daily allowance of two sticks of cordwood for fuel; and I find the entire annual production of the Galician petroleum fields equals two-thirds of the petroleum neids equals two-turia.

In so far as these peasant employes, who were too recently agriculturists, woodsmen and mountaineers to have lost any of their hereditary customs and characteristics, gave opportunity of study of the Galician peas-antry, the large groupings of such lowly had interest. But my researches among the peasant class were chiefly carried on upon the large estates and in the purely pensant villages. The acceptance of three invitations as guest at the homes of two noblemen and one rich gentleman farmer furnished opportu-nity to know slightly the aristocratic country landlords and to really see their hinds or laborers and house servants as they hinds or laborers and house servants as they are. The latter differ in no important respect from the laboring peasantry of the villages, save that to me they seem even more soudenly stupid and servile. At this time of the year the outdoor laborer still retains his winter clothing. He is a curious looking tellow. His hair is cut either straight across his forchead, or to a spearlike point upon it, and grows like a lion's mane about his shoulders and neck.

Dressed Like a Robinson Crusce.

Dressed Like a Robinson Crusoe His head covering is a mangy fur hood, often of squirrel skin with the tail dangling loosely upon his shoulders, or of sheep or goarskin with the fleece side next his head. A sort of greatcoat or robe hangs loosely from his shoulders to below his knees. This is of the skin of some animal, with the fur or hair next the body. The reversed exposed side is covered with ancient layers of grease for protection against the snow and rain. If he possesses undergarments of any sort, they are shreds of rags stuffed with chaff and

He usually wears stockings of the heaviest and coarsest material, and high legged, pointed shoes of huge proportions. For not only are the precious hose protected by ropes of straw wound from above the knee of the add wisness. ropes of straw wound from above the knee to the ankle, but enough chaff and wisps of straw participate in occupancy of his cavernous shoes to provide sufficient warmth. Aside from this unique garb, his beard stands out from his face a massy, wiry chevaux-de-frise, in which enough straw and chaff have lodged to provide an adequate "comforter" for his face and neck. From a dozen to a score of these peasant animals seem to be attached to every large estate. If they have quarters—except those who are married, who are provided with low, thatched wooden buts, squalid and fiithy beyond description—I was not able to find them. They are "messed" like hogs from the great house kitchen in corners of the stables, and lie down at night among the other mirrals with their stray rooms. the other animals, with their straw ropes and hide coats for bedding, wherever they are able to find most congenial and comfortable stabling.

Something Very Like Seridon Something Very Like Seridom.

Serfdom is not supposed to exist in this land, but I have a well-founded suspicion that something very like it is in vogue. The wages of such laborers do not exceed an average of 30 kreutzers per day, perhaps 12 cents, although they are glad enough to get this. Each estate is provided with a steward, or overseer, who, like the Irish agent, adjusts matters so that human effort is not permitted to prothat human effort is not permitted to pro-duce more than this kind of human life is supposed to require. He has a storehouse filled with the rude requirements of these estate laborers—coats, shoes, hose, belts, something that is called tobacco and snuff, caviare and vile brandy. These are issued, after the manner of our own exquisitely devilish "truck" system with miners, with such discretion that the estate laborer is in life long debt, and is subject to the prison and lash if he attempts to escape his master and his obligation.

And yet the households sustained by this lovely adjustment of human equities and ethics are as serene and sweet as I have ever found. Wherever my host and I moved about the estates these white slaves first bent and kissed the hems of our greatcoats and then stood with bared heads in silence until we had passed. No doubt this sort of thing gives the master a grand cran-like feeling, and it is lording it cheaply besides. So, 100, within the mansions where the servants are few in comparison with similar establishments in other European countries, when the somewhat better conditioned white slaves, because better housed and fed only, are not eternally grabbing at one's sleeve or coat skirts to perform this osculatory rever-ence, they are continually, when entering or leaving any apartment, or receiving an order or serving you, ejaculating, with ducked heads, "Ich kuest die hand."

Eng ish Governesses for Teachers.

There are no schools or colleges for the better class of girls, and at nearly all these Polish aristocratic homes I found a bonne, an English governess, or both, and a French an English governess, or both, and a French tutor. They receive excellent salaries, live on something like terms of equality with their employers, are usually broken down gentlemen or gentlewomen with a "literary turn" like provident Mr. Wegg, and are the most glad and grateful people on earth when chance brings a traveler like myself from the outside world of glowing activities among them.

I do not know whether to pity them or the manual servants of the household most. The live in a refined sort of Siberia in which there is scarcely a ray of lightsomeness or opportunity for enjoyment, with the advantage rather on the side of the serfs beneath them; for the latter know only the doll, plodding, beastly darkness into which they have been born. I found one woman here, a governess, whom I know to have been a fushionable leader in the "English circle" in Berlin in 1882, while a tutor in another establishment is an Oxford linguist, who has published a creditable book in London within five years last past. Both of them begged me in God's name not to reveal their present whereabouts and condition.

Outside of the great estates, the Galician peasantry in general are of two distinct moes—the Ruthenians, of Russian descent, and the Poles. Their conditions are equal, but they have many distinct characteristica. Neither actually possesses a foot of soil. Most hold their patches of ground, or huts, when they are simply cotiers and laborers, at the will of the lord; and rent is seldom collected in money, for of money they have little or none. Field products are sometimes taken in lieu of money, but rents are usually, almost universally, collected in labor, amounting to from 80 to 100 working days in each year to each man. days in each year to each man.

The More Manly of The Two. The More Manly of The Two.

The Ruthenian is the tidier, thriftier, more mantul of the two. His dress is of coarse, hempen stuff, with his shirt hanging outside his trousers, with occasionally a sack-like coat made of the coarse, long hair of the mountain sheep. His feet are covered with moccasins pointed at the toes and laced from the toe to the ankle. He wears no stockings, but loosely winds his legs with cord from his ankles half way to the knees, where it binds his baggy trousers closely. In the summer he wears a straw hat, and in the winter a Lapland hood. He is a coarse, clean man, never fat, of splenis a coarse, clean man, never fat, of splen-did muscular development; wiry, active, alert, and by all odds the best workman or

The Ruthenian woman has some odd ideas of dress. The material is usually of coarse linen. Her gown, which is in reality her linen. Her gown, which is in reality her chemise, is open from neck to knees and is belted in loose folds about the waist. Another curious and distinguishing article of dress is her woolen apron. She is never without this, but it is worn behind, never in front. She has no stockings or under garments, but her feet are shod like her husband's—with pointed and laced moccasina. Her head, in winter and summer, is always bound in a gaudy handkerchief, but she possesses no other article of clothing whatever, except a sheepskin coat for winter use. What she lacks next her skin she makes up in ornamentation. I have counted more than a score of brass rings on the fingers of her two hands. Her earrings of hollow brass would hold enough oil to light the family fireside for an evening; and her necklace of glass or imitation coral beads, coiled a half dozen times about her by no means charming neck, is always yards in length.

A Box of Treasured Keepsakes.

A Box of Trensured Keepsakes, Often five to ten families live under one roof, but usually the doma, or house which the Ruthenian calls his buda, is a tiny hut of one room. All the furniture in thiscots, stools, tables and chests—are handmade and almost always made by the peasant himself. There is invariably one box on which he has lavished his most loving art. It contains his keepsakes and trees. art. It contains his keepsakes and treas-ures and all his kreutzers and gulden. He never relinquishes the key to this, and not even his wife knows how little or great is even his wife knows how little or great is the store it contains.

The Polish peasant's stove is a square box of stone or brick, with a square hole in front and another square hole on top. As his stove is more modern than the Ruthenian's, his food is more varied and better. He is a lover of all vegetables, and cabbage is almost a staple of food. This is varied by his barsz soup, or a vegetable soup containing chunks of pork, and each Polish peasant is said to consume half a ton of gorken, or encumbers preserved with bay leaves and salt, every year. Another meal of which he is very fond is potatoes and sour milk. The latter costs but 5 kreutzers per quart, or 8 cents per gallon. He is a slave to spirits and the average Polish peasant consumes one gallon of vile German schnapps every week.

The houses of both Ruthenian and Polish peasants are but one story high, with one room open to the roof. They are made of slabs and bits of refuse timber from the mountain mills. These bits are rudely mortised together. When the inner structure is completed, pegs are driven into the the pegs and pounded until it is solid. The surfaces are then wet and worked by hand and light mallets until perfectly smooth and dry, when the huts are whitewashed and thatched. Little groups of these charmingly diversify the often dreary Galician landscape. EDGAR L. WAKEMAN.

The Cook Not to Blame.

Many nice delicacies are often spoiled by the abominable flavorings used in them and generally their having been spoiled is attributed to the cook. Now if Dr. Price's Delicious Flavoring Extracts are used, cooks will not be unjustly blamed; nice dishes will not be spoiled, as they always impart the delicate fresh-fruit flavor in whatever they are used. To have enjoyable and healthful food, the best articles must be selected to make it. It is economy for the poorest to use

WOLZ STILL MISSING.

Frank Chase, the man who left the city a couple of weeks ago with John C. Wols, bookkeeper for Samkenmyer & Sons' planing mill, has returned, but his companion ing mill, has returned, but his companion is still missing. Chase admits Wolz was with him, and they went together as far as Chicago, but what has become of him he does not know.

Wolz's employers say these are numerous mistakes in his books, but will not give their opinion. He left his young wife behind him, and she has heard nothing from him.

AN OPPORTUNE FRIEND will be found in Dr. D. Jayne's Expectorant when racked by a severe cold and the many lung or throat affections which sometimes follow. This old remedy has met the approval of two generations, and is to-day as popular, safe and effective as even
