Economy's sacred traditions are daily being violated, and so grossly violated that could the shade of old Father Rapp appear before the desecrators upon the scene after the death of the venerable man, he would be aghast at the things that are being done.

In times ago the air was laden only with the frequent odors from the perfumed toilet and the sweet, sweet perfume of the flowers. Now an occasional breath of smoke from a pipe or a cigarette causes the viewer with delicate olfactory sensitivities to harken to a different locality than the deadly scent can be avoided.

Vanity Fair in Rural Economy. The sweet girls, with their double braids of lustrous hair, fit in and out of the picturesque red brick, vine trellised cottages with an aspect so alien to that of their sisters here that the peace-loving tourist upon his semi-annual visit stands aghast with astonishment.

White old Father Rapp was in the flesh and Father Henri in his prime, the maids and youths kept themselves unto themselves. There were no moonlight walks, no lovers' lanes, no thrilling appointments, no single chairs just with enough for one and a half, no broken gates.

English politics is a good deal of a conundrum to Yankees, just as the average follower of the Queen can't understand what Democrat and Republican means in the States.

CREMATED IN HIS BED.

Old Francis Tucker Fails to Heed His Son's Warning and Is BURNED WITH HIS DWELLING.

A Mysterious and Fatal Fire Starts in Disputed Property.

BELEIVED TO HAVE BEEN INCENDIARY. A fire of undoubted incendiary origin and attended with fatal results occurred at 2 o'clock yesterday morning at Arch and Shaffer streets, Thirteenth ward.

The fire, which lived in Frank Tucker's house, was caused by the incendiary, who was believed to be the son of the deceased.

The Tucker family consisted of the father, mother, and three sons, William, David and Peter, William having a wife and four children. They occupied the half of the double frame dwelling, having four rooms, while the other half, where the fire originated, was the other half of the building.

The family had retired early Saturday night except David, who had gone to Hazelwood, and Peter, who was attending a theater. David returned home about 1 o'clock and, being an Englishman, sat down to a lunch in the kitchen before retiring. An hour later he stepped to the front door and, looking out, was startled to see a volume of smoke issuing from the second story of the vacant house adjoining.

Rescuing the Family From Death. David ran into the house and gave the alarm, then started out again with the intention of going into the burning building, but in the moment that had elapsed before his return the whole house seemed to be in flames, and he ran back to rescue the balance of the family.

With the assistance of his brother William, the latter's wife and four children, who were sleeping on the first floor, he succeeded in getting out of the house, but the flames had eaten their way into the family's apartments, and the aged father and mother, who had been sleeping on the second floor and who had been awakened by the fire, were first discovered, but not come down.

When he sprang up the stairs and caught his mother, who was tottering about her room half dressed, and carried her down the stairs, he found her in a state of collapse, and she passed through and the old lady's face was severely scorched. William, in the meantime, was seen to be sleeping on the second floor, and when told the house was burning, testily called to his son to stop knocking.

Driven Back by Flames and Smoke. William assured him that he was in deep earnest and called to him to jump for his life, but still the old man hesitated, and the son, choked with smoke, was forced to run out for air. Then he ran back again, called the old man to come, and caught him by the foot and pulled him partially out of the house, but the flames were so close that the stairs and William, with a final call to the old man, jumped for his own life and left the old man behind. The front doorway was burning, and the flames were so close that the firemen had arrived in the meantime, but it was too late then to go back for the aged father and mother, who had been killed.

The fire was extinguished by the firemen, but the house was practically burned to the ground. When the body was recovered, it was found to be that of an elderly man, and the body was buried in the cemetery.

A WEST VIRGINIA MOB

Wants the Life of a Pittsburger Who Shot a Saloon Keeper

IN A SUNDAY MORNING QUARREL. Armed Guards Placed Around the Jail to Prevent Lynching.

A COMPANION MAKES HIS ESCAPE. Ex-Policeman John Poesel, of Martinsburg, W. Va., was shot and instantly killed in that city yesterday morning by Timothy Desmond, of Pittsburg.

Desmond, James Hunter, Lawrence Derner, Martin Shanahan and John Brider, all men employed on the Scholtz Bridge Company, of Martinsburg, W. Va., are doing the work. The men were paid off Saturday night and started into Martinsburg to spend their money and have a time.

Quarreled on Their Way Home. About midnight the men started a quarrel among themselves. Finally they started toward town, and on the way to the Baltimore and Ohio depot, when in front of the saloon of Paul Strauser, John Poesel's employer, and he ordered the men away from the door.

Police Prevent a Lynching. The fight had drawn a large crowd of people and a minute after the shot was fired, the Pittsburgers were surrounded by an armed force of police. The police were heard on all sides, but just at that moment the police arrived and hunted the mob.

THOUGHT IT A RACE COURSE.

A Young Man From the Rural Districts Uses Carson Street as a Training Ground and Lands in the Lockup—He Faints on Beholding the Prison Bars.

John Hailon, of 228 Zara street, Knoxville, was a prisoner for a short time at the Twenty-eighth ward yesterday on a charge of driving. John is a youth from the suburbs who is unacquainted with the ways of the city, and as a consequence his innocence led him to break statutes of which he never dreamed.

Early yesterday afternoon Captain Stewart was notified that a young man was driving up and down Carson street in a very reckless manner to the danger of pedestrians. The Captain at once proceeded to that thoroughfare and laid in wait for the man. It was not long before he came driving along at a terrific pace, seemingly trying to pass an electric car of the Pittsburgh Light Rail Road.

Magistrate Leslie had ten cases at the Seventeenth ward station. William Updegraff went to the station for six months for begging in Lawrenceville.
