She Hired a Wicked Thug to Dash Fiery Vitriol in His Face.

THE JEALOUSY OF A HANDSOME WIDOW

(SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.)

CHICAGO, June 2.—Woman's infatuation, love, jealousy, rage, plot, mystery and revenge, peculiar and hideous, have grown to be the elements behind the strange and otherwise unaccountable assault on Joseph K. Fish, by Jerry Trumbly last Saturday. At noon on that day Joseph Fish, the wealthy merchant of the firm of Fish Joseph & Co., was attacked by a thug on Washburn avenue in the business heart of the city. He was knocked insensible with brass knuckles and then his assailant heeled him horribly about the face and head. For a time his life was despaired of, but he is now improving.

Developments show that Trumbly was a mere tool in the pay of a woman, a wealthy and handsome widow, who was desperately in love with Fish. The latter had paid her considerable attention. Fish refused to marry his charmer and became engaged to the daughter of a wealthy Hebrew manufacturer.

The widow threatened revenge and declared that she would so spoil Fish's handsome face that no one would marry her. In the thug's pocket was found a bottle of vitriol.

Fiery Vitriol to Disfigure Her Lover.
The acid had been purchased by the widow and the brute had been instructed to dash the fiery stuff into Fish's face. He was a prize fighter, and when the moment of action came, he resorted to his natural weapons which were reinforced by big brass knuckles. What the knuckles failed to accomplish he finished with his hobnailed shoes.

The woman in the case is a blonde with handsome eyes, and has a dashing air that would attract notice anywhere. Fish stopped going with her about a year ago. She came to his store after that quite frequently and seemed to be anxious to renew her friendship with him. He did not want her to come to the place and there was evidently great ill feeling on her part.

Mr. Tuttle, Mr. Fish's partner, said: "I don't know her name. She had several aliases; she was not a woman that Mr. Fish would think of marrying. We are satisfied that to get revenge on him she hired this man Trumbly to disfigure Fish for life. She was the one that selected the vitriol as a means. He had the bottle all right, but did not have time to use its contents."

The Widow Mysteriously Disappeared.
A call at the widow's house on the South Side revealed the fact that the widow has mysteriously left the city since last Monday without telling the servants where she was going or how long she would be gone. Here it was also learned that the lady had lately dropped the name by which she is known to her friends and which is printed in the directory, and is known to the servants as the wife of a prominent real estate man.

Not a servant in the house had been in the lady's employ long enough to tell when her second marriage took place or much about their employer's habits. The residence is one of the finest on the South Side, everything about it indicating wealth. Conversation with the servants developed the fact that while the woman moved in the upper class and spent a great deal of money she was in the habit of receiving gentlemen in the absence of other members of the family and spent much of her time out driving. To the servants she was known by her second husband's name, but most of the callers called her by her first husband's name. Trumbly is weakening, and it is said that he will confess ere long and clear up the mystery that hangs over the case. Fish's friends declare that he will prosecute the woman to the bitter end as soon as he is able to appear in court.
