THE SLAVIN AND JACKSON FIGHT.

A Few of the Leading Points and Causes of Defeat Discussed.

JACKSON AND SULLIVAN COMPARED

If a real close struggle is what is wanted in the contest for the League pennant, patrons of the national game have nothing to complain about. The first six or seven clubs are remarkably close together, so close that only a few games could make a very big transformation in the positions of the clubs.

But there is another team coming to the first division with a rush; that is the Philadelphia representatives. After struggling away amid many misfortunes they have made a most brilliant spurt, and from now on it may be expected that they will make a very serious run for the place among the first six. It seems to me that they will finish among the first half dozen.

The Cincinnati and Cleveland teams are also playing grand ball, and it must be very gratifying, indeed, to the patrons of Cincinnati's players to find them holding so well together. Most especially they were much better last year than they were in the year indicated. Their improvement this year on their work of last year is one more proof of what harmony and unity of action can do. None of us can overestimate the worth of that element, and it is beyond all doubt that the Cincinnati team have done their best work since the season.

Well, well, and Slavin was defeated after all. This element was a very good thing for us to be sure. I had thought the result would be different, and had written to that effect in this paper. Last Sunday I said that I was sure that Slavin would win for reasons which I had heretofore given in these reviews. Mark you, I gave my reasons for thinking that the colored man would win. I had thought that Slavin's condition of things to exist again, most certainly I would come to the same conclusion as in the case in question. None of us can deny that Slavin's performance was a good one, and that he was well served with the number of times I have hit the nail on the head.

Of course, since the contest I have met Slavin and know all about it. But before the encounter begins in Jackson's ability to win very, very few, and even in that small number scarcely a man would give him a chance. Slavin, on the other hand, is a man who has a good reason for thinking that Jackson would win. When a man tells me that a certain contestant will win this or that and can give me a good reason for it, I will believe him; and I think that Slavin's reasoning is all right. It is merely a guess, and the fact that so much Slavin money went begging shows that the big majority of those who fancied Slavin were wrong. But the fact that the latter class are winners there, indeed, the noisiest portion of the sporting community.

Public Form Was Awfully Drowned. But once more public form was woefully drowned in the sea of the public mind. It certainly is again. The form displayed by Jackson convinces me more than ever that there was something wrong with his contest with Slavin. Before that contest I had thought Jackson to win it, and ever since it occurred I have maintained more or less that he should have won it. He fought like a man, but he was not a man. He was a man who may have been a little better conditioned than Slavin was, he proved himself very good at a sportsman's fight, but his methods of fighting were just suitable. The methods of fighting in some respects the contest reminded me of one of the fights between Slavin and Jackson. The former simply won by King's persistence in rushing.

Many of us thought that Slavin's rushes would win him the battle and they were just what he needed. Slavin's rushes, however, should not have "rushed," but his rushes were ill-timed. They were done so hurriedly that they were as anything else but rushing. When I saw Slavin's rushes I was not surprised that they were proving comparatively ineffectual and yet he continued to do so. It is a pity that Slavin's rushes should have been so ill-timed. Slavin's rushes were proving comparatively ineffectual and yet he continued to do so. It is a pity that Slavin's rushes should have been so ill-timed.

Proposed Promotion of Mr. Duckenberger. One of the good baseball features of the week has been the news relative to the proposed promotion of Duckenberger to the New York Ball Club. Mr. W. C. Temple has decided to retire from taking an active part in baseball affairs. He is a large stockholder in the club and has been a member of the board of directors. He has also decided to retire from taking an active part in baseball affairs. He is a large stockholder in the club and has been a member of the board of directors. He has also decided to retire from taking an active part in baseball affairs.

When the latter definitely represents the stock of Mr. Temple most certainly he will become a director, but as far as I am aware Mr. Temple has not said that he will become a director. I do not, and for me, Mr. Temple would be a director as to state now what the directors would do or what they should do. While nobody in office has said so, it is possible that Mr. Temple will be a director of the club. Mr. Temple has a little sourness of temper that there is no possibility of Mr. Duckenberger becoming President of the club.

Prospects of the State League. So far I have had little or nothing to say regarding the State League since it has become an existing fact. Before it was definitely organized I questioned the wisdom of its organization. I thought that it was a waste of time and money. I thought that it was a waste of time and money. I thought that it was a waste of time and money. I thought that it was a waste of time and money.

Some Facts Which Will Enable the Average Person to Judge Correctly. Many people, even among those who frequently take up the subject of horse weights, would have hard work to guess whether a given animal, standing before their eyes, weighed 1,000 pounds or 1,500 pounds. Yet they would have no such difficulty with a man, and would probably be able to guess within 10 or 20 pounds of his weight.

The Weight of a Horse. The French military authorities find that an ordinary light carriage or riding horse weighs from 850 pounds to 900 pounds. Such horses as these are assigned to the light cavalry corps.

It is a good deal easier to find men who have caught hundreds of trout and know all about them. My experience has taught me to avoid tips on trout with the same cautious firmness to be observed as tips on the winning horse.

THEY WILL BE OF HEROIC SIZE. The Administration building, designed by Richard M. Hunt, is likely to be the most interesting and beautiful of all the buildings at the World's Fair. The directors have decided to increase the vast exterior attractions by means of symbolic groups of figures, which will be placed around the base of the dome, on the upper rotunda and in front of the entrance on the ground surface. The groups will be placed in pairs, and will cleverly symbolize the great forces of civilization in the progress of man.

Count Herbert Bismarck.

Count Herbert Bismarck has not been half such a big fish since the Iron Chancellor, his father, went into enforced retirement. He has been beaten by Sullivan in less than ten rounds if he (Jackson) had shown as much fight as he did on Monday evening. The fact that Sullivan was victorious in a glove contest I fail to see how Jackson could defeat a man like Sullivan when the latter is in anything like his best condition. Sullivan is a very much cleverer man than Slavin; in fact, there is no comparison; he is also a much harder hitter and had been a near champion of the world.
