WILL STAND TO A MAN.

Homestead Amalgamated Men Are All in Line for the Crisis.

YESTERDAY'S MEETING A SUCCESS.

The Wage Matter Placed in the Hands of the Convention.

IT WILL ENTER INTO ARBITRATION

President Weihe's call to the Homestead Amalgamated men brought an immense crowd of steel workers together in the town's Opera House yesterday morning. The meeting was to discuss the situation and this was done. As an outcome of the meeting employes of the big steel works are now ready to stand as one man when the crisis comes.

President Weihe, Assistant President Garland, Vice President Carney and a number of other well-known Amalgamated officials were present. President Weihe opened the meeting with the following remarks:

The manufacturers all over the country take advantage of a dull season to ask for a reduction in wages. This is the case at present, although the steel and iron trade is not in such a demoratized condition as the manu acturers would have us believe. In the past few months trade has increased in volume, which is encouraging, even if prices still remain low, and at the present time fron and steel is supplanting timber in so many different ways that it cannot but be a good business for years to come. Notwithstanding that capitalists make an enormous percentage on their investment, many times as great as is possible in European countries, their constant aim is to reduce the wages of American workmen to a level with the foreigner. This statement may not be believed by those who have not been in the conference-room when the wage question was under discussion, but all you who have been members of conference committees know such to be the truth.

The Workman Wants a Share.

Why should not the American workman receive his share of the large difference in the manufacturer's profits under the American and European systems. The foremost principle of the Amalgamated Association is "a fair day's wage for a fair day's work."
We do not want to ask anything unreasonable, we only want what justly belongs to us. You must remember that there is no strike here yet and may not be; the convention will act on the matter this week, and after that I sincerely hope the Conference Committee may be able to adjust matters satisfactorily.

Vice President Carney also made remarks along the same line. A resolution was then unanimously passed by the Homestead men expressing explicit confidence in the National convention and pledging their support to the action of that body. Their will be another demonstration next Saturday at the territory of the same part of the sa day at the association picuic at Rock Point.
All over Homestead vesterday the one topic of discussion was the scale for the coming year. This is not to be wondered at since the 8,000 or 10,000 people of that town are directly or indirectly dependent on the big steel works. Groups of men on the corner, men at their homes and even the women talked this wage problem over.

A Stubborn Fight Anticipated. As a DISPATCH man was coming down one of the principal thoroughtures he over-heard a man say to his companion: "Car-negies have made us submit to their will in many ways. We have helped them over many tight places, allowed them to dictate for whom our votes would be cast, but ever waged between capital and labor be-fore the matter is settled."

A man who no longer works in the big mills, but who spent a number of years there, engaged in conversation with a DIS-PATCH man yesterday and said:

I still take an active interest in the Amalgamated Association. I have watched this trouble grow and finally burst torth. To my mind it points to but one thing, and that is to try and overthrow the Amalgamated Association at Homestead. The lence around the works is about completed. It now looks to be as strong a barrier as the famous Chinese wall, but I hear that it is not yet completed. On top of the barricade three strands of barb wire are to be run. Expense might have been saved in this direction for I do not think the men, if they do strike, would resort to bold warfare. It is safe to assume, however, that the man who tries to work during the strike will have a hard row to hoe if he is found outside of the fortress.

The reduction seems to fall especially hard on the men in the armor plate mills. This is the hardest work in the mills and the slowest because armor plate is rolled slower than other steels.

A Large Increase Refus-d.

A Large Increase Refus-d.

Some time ago the men in this depart-ment asked for a 200 per cent increase, but the company refused. The reason it gave the company refused. The reason it gave was the selling price of armor plate was too low to warrant an increase. We, all knew different. If the men could have gotten this 200 per cent they could have made fair wages. They would not have been excessive. As it is now, the men in this department have to work very hard to make wages, but with a 40 per cent reduction they would not make a living. I think the fact that the hardest blows were directed toward a department, where so much importance is attached, is evidence that the company wants to drive the union to the wall.

that the company wants to drive the union to the wall.

The 23-inch mill and several other departments are not included in the ones which the new scale will effect. In these departments new machinery and changes are to be put in working order during the next few months, and just now a scale to suit fould not be made. The men working there have not the least idea of what they will be asked to work for. This is not employing their thoughts, however, as they will stand by the other fellows in the mill.

The Amalgamated Convention knows what it has to do. If it allows the scale presented by the company to go into effect the Amalgamated Association is doomed. Every member in Homestead would break away

Amalgamated Association is doomed. Every member in Homestead would break away and with our membership gone the Association would not be so firm as it now is. I think the convention will do the right thing. It will certainly try to arbitrate. If arbitration fails then the strike is the last resort. I think the men are well prepared for that. The mill is well organized. The majority of the laborers are on our side and the trainmen are all organized and ready to help the Amalgamated win.

The True Laxative Principle

Of the plants used in manufacturing the pleasant remedy, the Syrup of Figs. has a permanently beneficial effect on the human system, while the cheap vegetable extracts and mineral solutions, usually sold as medicines, are permanently injurious. Being well-informed, you will use the true remedy only. Manufactured by the California Fig.

A Shirt That Makes Itself Felt.

Everyone who wears a shirt has noticed that after it has been worn a short time the neck and wrist bands become frayed; that is, the strands of cloth break and stick out around the neck and wrists. The natural inference is that the linen or muslin is of an inferior quality, but this is not the case. The breaking of the strands in the cloth is caused by washing it with soap containing free alkall. The alkali attacks the fiber of the cloth, making it break, and thus destroying the garment. Why do you use soap that you know nothing about when you can buy Walker's Family Soap that contains no alkali, but is all soap? It has been analyzed by the chemist of the Pennsylvania Railroad, found to comply to their standard, and is used by them to wash the paint on their cars.

The popular refrain of "It looks very different in the morning," was sung in various minor keys at the police court hearings yesterday. I the Huntingdon Reformatory, arrived in think Homestead will see the hottest fight Pittsburg yesterday morning and left in the evening. He was on his way from New York to Chicago and only stopped to pay a flying visit to his son, Charles McClaughry, the Deputy Superintendent of the county

The Chief was interviewed at the Union depot by a DISPATCH reporter concerning story that the Mayor of Chicago has asked Inspector Marsh to resign on account of the discovery of a note of his for $5,000, payable to a reputed brother-in-law of John Condon, the gambler. The note, long past due, being unpaid, has been photographed and is in the possession of a municipal officer. It is dated October 20, 1890, at which time Marsh was chief of police, Chief McCluster and the conductive of the conductive o Chief McClaughry evinced great surprise when told of the rumor, and avowed entire ignorance of the whole affair.

"I have been away from Chicago for ten days," said he, "and, although all police officials hold their positions solely at his option, I do not think that the Mayor option, I do not think that the Mayor would take such a step in my absence unless the case was of such importance as to necessitate immediate action. I have always considered Mr. Marsh an efficient officer and a thoroughly honorable man. He has zealously assisted me in my efforts to suppress gaming, and I will not readily believe any amicable relations exist between him and any of the gambling fraternity."

fraternity."

John Condon is one of Chicago's most noted gamblers, and may be said to have stepped into the shoes of the celebrated Mike McDonald. He formerly conducted a magnificent establishment at No. 14 Quincy street, and was supposed to have an interest in almost every resort of any note in the city.

As the department could not do anything in the case, the woman left, saying that she would enter suit on Monday.

SUNDAY IN THE PARKS.

Thousands Visit Schenley and Hightand in Search of a Cool and Refreshing Temperature—Alleghens Parks Thronged by Promenaders in the Evening.

Schenley Park was fairly thronged with visitors from the two cities yesterday after-noon, and the crowds who dissipated the time in the numerous shady hollows and gulches were almost as varied in character as the growth of shrubbery among which pedestrians who passed them.

Upon the horizontally extended trunk of a fallen oak tree a pretty young lady was explaining the Sunday school lesson to a class of embryro theologists which she had collected here and there, while ever and anon a wearied looking girl, seated a few yards distant, would arise and move further yards distant, would arise and move further and further away that the babble of the childish voices might not interrupt the perusal of her yellow-covered novel. In the path leading to the bottom of Panther Hollow a German couple, had halted with sad misgivings before one of Chief Bigelow's omnipresent notices, and in broken English solicited an explanation of the cause of their alarm from the different pedestrians who passed them.

A little further down the path, upon a large flat rock which answered the purpose of a table, a youthful card-sharp was showing "a few points" to a group of admiring friends in utter disregard of the volleys of cood advice fired upon them at intervals of good advice fired upon them at intervals of from 60 to 80 seconds by a couple of vener-able ladies who thought they had a duty to

At the bottom of the hollow a shabbily-dressed man, having satisfactorily filled a long felt want, was lying upon his back in a blissful state of intoxication, while the a blissful state of intoxication, while the empty flask, having discharged its functions, had been seized by some practical joker and placed in the sleeper's hat, the hat suspended from the overhanging limb of a small tree and inscribed with the words, "Am I in it?"

All day long Highland Park was thronged by people who were in search of cool air, and every seat around the reservoirs, full of cool-looking water, was occupied from early in the afternoon until long after nightfall. The Allegheny parks were sparsely visited in the heat of the day, but as soon as the sup went down they were as soon as the sun went down they were filled by thousands of promenaders.
