FOSTERING A PATRIOTIC SPIRIT.

Pointing Out the Evils of Unrestricted Immigration.

GOOD WORK OF THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS

The Loyal Orange Institution of the United States was formally opened yester-day in Sterritt Hall, Allegheny. Most Worshipful Grand Master W. J. Traynor presided over the meeting, and after appointing and receiving the report of the Committee on Oredentials made his annual address to the order.

The Grand Master opened his remarks by a reverent tribute to the great Creator, and continuing, said: Of the members of our order who have, during the past year, journeyed to that bourne whence no carthly man returns, I cannot make mention individually, but I have a cheerful trust that the faithful observance of the precepts and lessons taught them as loyal Orangemen while here on earth, has secured for them that heritage in heaven which is the just portion of righteous men made perfect. It would ill become me, however, to omit saying a few words about our departed brother, Gambie Weir, of Pittsburg, Past Supreme Grand Master. It is a long time since the Orange Institution lar to that occasioned by the death of this most worthy and estimable gentleman.

A Tribute to the Dead Superintendent, A Patriot of the deenest and most intense nature, a gentleman of the most chivalrous character, a brother to honor and to love, we have lost one in whom all the virtues vouchsafed to sinful humanity seemed to have been centered and intensified doubly. In season and out of season his principal n and object in life was the strongthening and upbuilding of Orangeism in America No work was too hard, no task too difficult for him to perform, and to his Herculean efforts is to be attributed in no small degree the abundant measure of success which the abundant measure of success which has been poured upon us during this and recent years. He has left behind the shining example of a devoted and unselfish life to steer our course by and encourage us in works of patriotism and true philanthropy. After life's fitful fever let us prayerfully hope that he rests well.

The truly wonderful hold which the principles of our Order is taking upon the patriotic people of this country, is one of the most gratilying spectacles of the century. From Maine to California, from the Jertile prairiciands of Minnesota to the great Gulf, the glorious tidings of an awakening public conscience are being blazoned abroad. Everywhere lodges are springing up under the stimulus of patriotic men, eager to rally around and defend the God-given institutions of our country. We Orangemen viewall this with honest pride, for we are the parent body, and all other patrictic institutions are offshoots from our

A Plea for a Patriotic Spirit. The speaker then made a plea for the fostering of a patriotic spirit and the proper observance of national holidays, particularly Washington's Birthday and the Fourth of July. He continued:

Washington's Birthday and the Fourth of July. He continued:

An open Bible in the public schools is something that the Orangemen are in profound sympathy with. Our children should early be taught to reverence the God that forsook not our forefathers in their day of direst need. At no time during life can the seed of religious thought be sown so deeply into fertile soil as when the undeveloped imagination of childhood is groping with a reeble hand after the eternal truths to be found in the Holy Word of God. We want to remove the stigma of Godlessness so flippantly cast at us by the enemies of our grand nublic school system and stifle to the death the base insinuation that we have become a body of agnostics or worse.

We Orangemen view with increasing alarm and grave apprehension the unrestricted inpouring upon American shores of the Old World. There was a time when the United States got the pick of the intelligence, the muscle and brawn, and the hardihood of Europe, for then a journey across the Atlantic was no small undertaking, and the country only afforded a livelihood to men able and willing to work hard for it. To these men we all owe an everlasting debt of gratitude as the founders and builders of our present greatness. But the condition of affairs has materially changed since the days when every man had to be a hero and every woman a Spartan. We are now tasting of the miseries of overcrowding in many portions of the country, and in a very few years, unless a thorough and radical measure is adopted to put a check upon the inflow of immigration, we will experience in an intensified decree all the horors of the worst congested district in Europe.

The Evils of Unrestricted Immigration.

The Evils of Unrestricted Immigration. The chasm between the rich and the poor is growing wider and deeper every day. The middle class portion of our population, once our strength and pride, is gradually being effaced, while a race of arrogant plutocrats is springing up and forcing heretofore lawbiding, intelligent citizens into acts of lawlessness and anarchy. There is nothing but danger and trouble ahead. The American dessness and anarchy. There is nothing but danger and trouble ahead. The American workingman has to give place to his foreign rival, and the native-born artisan is compelled to stand idly by while his children's bread is being eaten by European contract and pauper labor. Fellow Orangemen, this is a dismal picture, but we all know it is true. What is to be done? The disease demands a heroic remedy, and it must be applied without delay. The Orange Institution of the United States should utilize every resource at its command to have Congress immediately pass a bill capable of fully meeting the danger, for I tell you, brethren, no patriot could be engaged in a better or more praiseworthy act than by trying to save his country, the flower of all the centuries, from the perils surrounding it, from unrestricted immigration.

There is also another point to which I desire to particularly call your attention. It is the proud boast of Orangeism that members of our order seldom if ever become the objects of public or private charity. The beneficiary features of our order cannot be given too great encouragement or be too closely attended to, so that every brother should have a provision made for his future. We want to have it known that no Orange-man under any possible condition of circumstances, can in his hours of sickness, or in the declining days of his life, become a public charge. We should all be as proud and self-dependent as we are loyal and true. It should never be said of one of our order that he humiliated the glorious traditions of our institution, by accepting pauper bread. Nor need it ever be scammed if we are all true to ourselves and provident enough to take advantage of the wise provisious provided by our laws.

After referring to the Parliamentary con-

After referring to the Parliamentary contest in Ireland and expressing disapproval of the home rule cause, the Grand Master spoke deprecatingly of the "freedom of worship bill," adopted by the New York Legislature, and the Faribault and Stillwater school systems. He then said:

The Place Where Work Counts. Our beloved institution, while by no means capable of being turned into a political or-ganization, should take a deep interest in politics. Orangemen, as a rule, from the very nature of their business pursuits, have taken but little interest in politics. Very few no doubt neglect to make full use of their privileges on election day, but there is really very little choice generally between the nominees of either of the great parties— the one being as deep in the mud as the other is stuck in the mire of political corruption. A person might almost as well not vote at

A person might almost as well not vote at all.

The primaries are the places where good work can be done that counts. If care is taken to nominate honest men, then it is a certainty that none but honest men can be elected. One ballot cast rightly at a caucus is worth a hundred polled upon election day. The paramount necessity of attending their party caucuses cannot be too strongly impressed upon Orangemen.

The heart of our giorious Republic, the center from which she draws the life blood of patriotism, the misthy impetus which sends the stream of civilization and advancement through the veins of the greatest pation on earth, are the American public schools. We, as Orangemen, revel in the proud results wrought by that immense hive of little beings which years of careful intellectual care and restless energy have reared in order to place within the reach of all—the high and low—the rich and poor alike, the priceless git of an American education. Our public schools are not merely the seminaries of intellectual training, they are the nurseries of good citizenship—the hotbeds of Americanism, where the infant plant of loyal childhood develops into an adult citizen, whose eyes turn to the Stars and Stripes as the eyes of the prattling little one at its mother's knee turns in love and confidence to its parent. The educated citizen is the wealth, safety and bulwark of his country. The uneducated man is the curse of the nation wherever it may be his lot to reside, Ever at the beck and call of the loud-mouthed Anarchist and the follower of the blatant demagogue, he forms the nucleus around which riot, revolution and anarchy gather to defy our glorious Constitution, bought with the blood of millions of patriots and baptized with an ocean of tears from the widow and orphan. Hence we turn to education as the panacea for every social evil, and our public school system as the completest system in the world.

The sessions of the institution will be resumed this morning.

Submitting a Union Demand. PHILADELPHIA, June 14.—The second day's session of the International Typo-graphical Union was continued here to-day. The Committee on Laws reported unfavorably the proposed amendment to the con-stitution, relating to strikes, as follows:

Immediately when called upon the organizer of the district shall repair to the city involved, and, failing to make a settlement of the question at issue, he shall call meetings of all the unious represented in the allied Printing Trades Council in said city, and should a melority of said allied trades allied Printing Trades Council in said city, and should a majority of said allied trades decide by a three-fourths vote to strike, such action shall be deemed binding upon them all, and a strike may be authorized without appealing to the Executive Council of the International Typographical Union; provided that this shall only apply to cities where allied printing trades councils exist.

The committee's unfavorable report was rejected. Among other business was an invitation to the convention from Colonel Elliott F. Shepard, of the New York Mail and Express, to attend the opening of his new publication building. Instead of accepting, the delegates decided that a committee of five should wait on him and ask him to employ only union pressmen and stereotypers. If he acceded to the demand they would attend the opening.

PAINT AND NATURAL FINISHED HABD

How It is Frequently Destroyed, and the Proper Way to Prevent It.

In washing paint or varnish great care should be taken that the soap used contains no free alkali. The destructive tendency of ordinary soap is well expressed by Theo. N. Ely. General Superintendent Motive Power of the Pennsylvania Railroad, who, in a recent order, says, "The ordinary common soap used in cleaning paints and varnish is very destructive to the varnish, dissolving it rapidly. A car cleaned two or three times with strong soap must be revarnished, and in some cases repainted."

Walker's Family Soap has been analyzed by the chemist of the Pennsylvania Railroad, ound to meet the requirements and is used to wash their cars. This is the soap to wash your paint, varnished woodwork and clothes. It costs no more than other soaps. How It Is Frequently Destroyed, and the
