Nominations After All Dictated More by the Fireside Than

THE IMMENSE POWER OF THE MACHINE

(FROM A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.)

CHICAGO, June 15.—All the Republicans and more than half the Democrats expect Cleveland's nomination. This is my evidence. The aggressive leaders expected in Chicago are nearly all for Cleveland. If Mr. Brice is against him Brice is no speaker on the floor, or is Mr. Gorman much of an orator. If Bourke Cochran, who has grown heavy with prosperity, possesses his former speaking facilities he might entice and concentrate the anti-Cleveland feeling, but the power of the Presidential office is probably going to nominate Cleveland as it has nominated Harrison.

Only once in 32 years have the Democrats had a President, and for that all the babies born in his term of Democratic fathers were named for him. The name of Jackson is obsolete, as he had different views of civil service reform from Cleveland. Jefferson was a Prohibitionist to some extent, and he has been replaced by Cleveland.

Within the memory of the living generation is only one Democratic hero. Tilden is forgotten, Seymour and Hancock are no more. Greeley was killed by his coalition, but Cleveland, the star of Buffalo, remains the last articulation, the one memory of a party, with a probable majority, for many years past, with only one named candidate. The reason has been that too many Democrats before the ballot have slipped a Republican ballot into the box, owing to business and other apprehensions.

Cleveland of the Sun Upper Lip. When Cleveland came into power he was in the main operated by the reconcilable element of Republicans, men who attend to the editorial page, which in other directions has decayed. The great body of Democrats like editorially which is the result of another stump speech, re-lections and monodies. From the small mugwump manufacturers a new kind of Democratic sentiment is radiated throughout the new generation. Cleveland's upper lip, is the expression of this feeling.

Men come to conventions mainly to get even with their last bet. I saw Smith M. Weed come into the Richelieu Hotel, yesterday morning, and he was not alone, but with the rough warrior face of a man reared amid the winters and woods of Lake Champlain. He is one of the best living pictures of how men's interests first cripple them and how their suffering friends afterward harden them. One of the best politicians in New York State, a little suggestive, in appearance, of Secretary Tracy, with a face so strong that you might not like to meet on a lonely road after night, and yet upon a second regard, rather the face of a great baron than of a law-breaker.

A PLACE that adds 5,000 population within the next six months is the piece to invest in. Review the manufacturing and building in Ellwood City and get the facts—1,200 new employees, $10 A. M. (city time) Pittsburgh and Western Train has 50-cent round trip next three Saturdays.

line, and the present convention recalls after all this comedy a series of tragedies. In this city, when Cleveland was first brought out by Manning, Peckham & Co., the dead Randall was nominated. But nobody knew the name of Hill. All the mutiny was in the Republican party, excepting that Mr. Kelly went home from the convention, leading his Tammany Indians, without saying "I submit." Kelly paid his debt, and they say he died like Horace Greeley, with that softening of the intellect which too often lays out the kicker. Men who stand in the way of these big party whirlwinds are worse than King Lear defying his daughters in the storm.

At Work in Cleveland's Interest. The vengeance in the eye has adhered to the Cleveland interest. With a leader whose proclamations are intermittent, whose countenance and diction are almost fierce, who punishes discord and remembers all personalities, the Cleveland following has blood in its eye, and it runs over those who hesitate.

Ben Butterworth said yesterday on the lake front: "These nominations are determined by the millions of firesides in the land. I have known two men in a whole county or city to regulate the selections and positions of a great party. But it seldom happens that these national conventions can be created in opposition to the machine. However strong the machine, it knows when an idea is afoot."

Mr. Butterworth therefore thought that Harrison has been properly nominated because the firesides were with him, and he believed that Cleveland would be the Democratic nominee. I understood him to say, moreover: "If I belonged to the Democratic party I would rather die in the breach with Cleveland than prevail by stratagem with somebody else."

Even here personality is at work. It was Foraker who broke up Butterworth at Cincinnati, the latter remarked, when it was said that Foraker had never gotten off his great speech at Minneapolis. "He can get rid of it by the Casarian operation." Foraker was for Blaine, and Mr. Butterworth observed that the Blaine movement was like a stranger's description of Boston soda: "Madam, upon my word, I thought it was sweetened wine." Said Mr. Butterworth: "Chicago is the most aggressive and united community in the interests of building up their city that this world perhaps can show. Many who come here were broken somewhere else, and they join the army of Chicago as if it was the commencement of another life. If anybody drops out in Chicago the ranks close up. I have no doubt," said he, "that in ten years more this city will be recognized as the American metropolis."

RESIGNED CARACAS IN A PANIC.

The Capital Ready to Join the Rebels Now That the President Has Fled. CARACAS, WEST INDIES, June 15.—When the report of Palacio's flight from Caracas, Venezuela, became known the citizens began to cry out: "Down with the adherents of the usurper." To the hands of many of the citizens firearms appeared and shots were fired. Almost immediately the streets were filled with marching rioters. The Government police and soldiers made a feeble attempt to drive them back. There was some sharp firing for about half an hour during which time many persons were shot.

To add to the discomfiture of the Nationalists word has been received that another terrific engagement has been fought between Crespo's followers and the Government troops a few leagues west of Caracas. As in other recent important fights, the soldiers of Palacio were defeated with great slaughter. The Government troops are coming into Caracas and spreading the spirit of panic everywhere.
