DIDN'T LIKE LIBERTY.

Joseph McMullen Preferred the Calm Solitude of a Quiet Cell. HE WANTED TO BE ARRESTED. FREEDOM WAS VERY IRKSOME TO HIM. Joseph McMullen, who was convicted of burglary in court last Monday, was taken over to Warden Wright's boarding house yesterday to serve a term of eight years. McMullen's life has been a remarkable one. Though only 45 years of age he has spent within two or three months of 26 years in the penitentiary. His first sentence was in 1883. He knocked a man down and robbed him at the end of the old Harvard street bridge, and the victim narrowly escaped death from the injuries received. After his arrest another charge of larceny was made against him and he was tried and convicted of both. On November 26, that year, he received a sentence of two years and three months, entering the institution two days later.
