SEVERAL MINING VILLAGES WRECKED

MAHANOY CITY, PA., June 18 .- The damage done by the bursting of the Water Company's dam last night, is found to be not so great as at first reported. No lives have been lost, although some narrow escapes were made. The route of the flood was down the valley from Park Place to the north of the town. In its course the valley widens, and, besides, the flood had to contend with several large embankments, striking three railroad lines, and several natural

Had it not been for these there would be a sad tale to tell of immense damage to property and great loss of life. While the water was breaking through the Lehigh main line embankment, the first obstruction in its way, the miners gave the alarm in the old-fashioned way by lighting fires, discharging firearms, ringing bells and making a noise in every possible way. The colliery whistles for miles around soon took up the signal, and then the Mahanoy City bells and whistles added their clamor to the tumult; but above all this the roar of the water could be heard. The Rush for Higher Ground,

With one accord the people ran for the hills through the valley. Through the Lehigh embankment the flood rushed on carrying everything before it, tearing up railway tracks, demolishing houses and everything in its way, and finally spending itself along the route of the flood.

The Reading Railrond runs through Michanov back of the principal thorough-tare, and Main street is arched by it. This embankment propably saved the town from greater damage, and it turned the force of the flood to the west. The water came down Main street, however, in a torrent, sweeping all lighter obstacles the town, flooding hundreds of cellars in residences and business bouses. The streets are blocked with debris many feet high in places, and 200 men and scores of teams are busy cleaning up the place.

The water supply of the city is cut off, but arrangements will be completed by afternoon to remedy this. Only timely warning prevented a large loss of life, as the people all rushed for the hills, and the loss is confined to property and the rail-ronds. It will be Monday before the Lehigh can run over its own lines again.

Points of Resemblance to Johnstown, Ever since the Johnstown flood, there have been various speculations about the safety of the water dam from which the town obtains its water supply. Of late the company has had a gang of men at work raising the breast with a view to increasing its storage capacity, not unlike Johnstown. Last night it broke, and if it was not Johnstown in horror the people here lived the terrors of it before the water had spent its fury. The streets were hardly cleared before the water came with a deaf-hour and then began to subside. John Moll, the gashouse man, had been fixing his fires in the furnace for the night, and retired to his house. When he entered his house some one remarked that it was raining. "No," he replied, "it cannot be." but he listened, and heard the sound of mehing water. He ran out of the house, beard the alarm, and, after looking to the safety of his family, returned to the rail-roud. He had not been there long before he was nearly caught by a floating shed. Only a limited amount of water could and its way through the culvert under the arge filling of the railroad, and as the timarge filling of the railroad, and as the tim ers were rushed down the mountain it accumulated at the culvert, which formed another dam. Meanwhile on the bank stood young John Fry, who, with gun in hand, fired heavily loaded blank cartridges and yelled at the top of his voice. This was re-echoed along the valley until it reached town.

Havoc Made of Mining Villages.

The branch of the Lebigh Valley from this point to Park Place on the main line, was almost completely torn up. The main line itself was washed away for a consider able distance, and tracks are being built around the washout. The Reading's branches to its collieries in the valley are also torn up or covered with debris.

The flood, in its course, struck the little mining village of Robinson, in this valley, and many people are rendered homeless by the washing away of some of the houses an the unsale condition of others. Many houses in the mining villages of Robinson and Bownans were either carried away or builty damaged and the debris carried a mile or more into the heart of Mahanoy City, where the homeless ones to-day found fragments of their former residences and furni-

At 2 P. M. all the people were sufficiently recovered from the effects of the disaster to fully realize their almost miraculous escape. Among the rescues worthy of note was that of Granny Allen, aged 78 years, who occupied a basement on Main street, who had to be carried out through water almost over the heads of the rescuers. There were many similar rescues and narrow escapes.

The Mounted Messenger of the Flood, The most remarkable experience was that of Dr. Lewis Weber, who heard the flood coming while at Robinson's Patch and drove down the valley for two miles to town over the roughest kind of roads, completely wrecking his vehicle, but managing to keep ahead of the flood, and sounding the alarm to the inhabitants along the way.

The waterworks dam was built 20 years ago. It broke five years after it was built, and has long been considered unsafe. Workmen had been repairing some days, and only left baif an hour before it gave way last night at 10 o'clock. People along the line of the wasteway to Mahanoy City were aware of its unsafe condition, and hence were quick to get out of the way when the warning came The electric light and gas works are stopped, but will be running to-night. The quantity of trees, stumps, boards, logs, poles, boats and household furniture in the line of the rushing water for two miles is

The extent of the losses in money value Ennet now be given. The Lehigh Valley Railroad's loss is estimated at $10,000. The Reading collieries and colliery railroads will show a loss equally large. About 50 or more buildings were demolished.
