The Game That Was Lost.

For two weeks the Pittsburgs have been trying to locate Red Ehret. He was sent to Louisville to get into condition, but nothing was heard of him until to-day, when Manager Burns put him in the box against the Louisvilles. The home team did not hit him hard, for "Red" kept the balls too far from the plate. To his wild ness is chiefly due the Pittsburgs' defeat, ogh the Cyclones experienced no great difficulty in hitting them when he put them plate. Sanders pitched his first game in a Louisville uniform, and he kept the few hits made by the visitors well scattered. The home team started off by score Brown was hit with the ball, and he stole second rather easily. Weaver made a seratch hit to first, Jennings struck out, but Fieffer forced Wenver at second and Brown red. Ehret was very generous in the third, and sent both Brown and Weaver to

Burns, who had taken Miller's pince in right, the latter going behind the bat when Mack injured his finger, hit safe. Corkhill flew to second, Ehret sacrificed Burns to third and Miller sent him home on a single to center. Louisville again scored the ninth on McFarland's base on balls, Brown's single, a scratch by Weaver, and Burns' mufl of Pfeffer's ball on which Weaver was retired at second. Pittsburg was never in the second game. The scores:
