Since that decision the real heirs, most of them living up in the back-woods of Maine, have heard by accident of the death and wealth of their kinsman, and the lawyers have, for the past three years, been hunting up the facts to prove their claim.

the lawyers have, for the past three years, been hunting up the facts to prove their claim. In 1819 a boy was born to the wife of a tough old backwoodsman named Bean, in Hartiand, Me. The boy, Thomas Cheeley Bean, lived at home until he was 17 years old, and then went into the Kennebeo woods. The boy was frugal and saving, and in time had a sung sum due him in wages. One day his father appeared in Bangor and collected the money, whereupon the young man angrily vowed never to see his father again, and worked his way to Boston on a coasting vessel. After living hereabouts until 1340, Thomas started westward. The next heard of him was in 1389, when a relative saw in a news-paper that he ind died two years before in Bowham, Tex., leaving an estate of 85,000 acres of hand and $500,000 in Government bonds, mortgages and money in bank, the whole valued at $2,000,000. He had lived and died a bachelor and left no will. It soon appeared, however, that the estate had been claimed recently. Two families, the Howards, of Alexandria, Va., and the Dorrs, ot Washington, claiming to be chil-dren of two sisters of Thomas Bean, laid claim if the Fexas court to the dead man's millions and got judgment uncontested against the administrator. DISPATCH. THURSDAY, JUNE 30,

HE NOW WANTS IT DECLARED VOID

The Arguments Are Presented on th Business Tax Tangle.

A DAT'S DOINGS IN THE COUNTY COURTS

A suit for divorce with a peculiar series of allegations was entered vesterday. The case is that of Joseph C. Kissick against Catherine Kissick, filed by Attorney James Bredin. In his petition Kissick says: "On August 12, 1873, while under arrest your petitioner, then a youth of 22 years, without experience, was frightened into a marriage with one Catherine Krasher, the mother of a child of which she claimed petitioner to be the father. That petitioner, though he stood up with Catherine before the justice of the peace, did not answer the justice when he inquired whether he would take said Catherine for his wife, and though the justice pronounced petitioner and said Catherine to be man and wife, your peti-tioner has always contended that he did not take said Catherine for his wife."

Continuing, he states that a year after-wards, he not having lived with her, he asked her what she was going to do and if she intended to hold him responsible for her support. She said she did not consider the ceremony as a valid marriage and that she was about to be married to another man and Kissick could not prevent it. Soon after she left the State and took up with Julius Stevens, who removed to Illi-nois. She lived with him 16 years and until his death, two years ago. She had seven children, five of whom are still living. Since the death of Stevens, it is al-leged, she claims to be the lawful wife of Kissick. In consequence he now asks for a Atorney J. M. Swearinger filed the divorce sult of George W. Moss, of Robin-son township, against Mary Moss. They were married August 15, 1879, and it is al-leged she deserted him October 1, 1887.

Charged With Criminal Negligence.

PORT JERVIS, N. Y., Jude 29 .- [Special.] -The grand jury of Orange county recon-vened at Goshen to-day and examined 10 or 12 new witnesses about the lynching of Bob Lewis. Last week, after a five days' ses-sion, the jury reported to Judge Cullen that they could not find sufficient evidence to in-dict anybody. The judge directed them to continue their efforts. The result was that no indictments were found against the lynchers, but the jury reported that they had found a true bill against the village officials of Port Jervis, charging them with criminal negligence,
