GRAND EXODUS FROM THE CITY. Thousands of Brawny Workers Start on a Summer Vacation.

WHERE MANY OF THE CLUBS LOCATED

With banners flying, bands playing and red fire burning, the Half Moon Fishing Club, of the Southside, left for Ashtabula last evening, over the Lake Erie road, to go into camp for the summer. Not all the bunting and fishing organizations for which Pittsburg is noted travel in such style, but, to use the current slang, "they get there just the same." About 100 members of the Half Moon joined in the parade, and at least 75 went into camp.

The exodus to the lakes has commenced in earnest. Yesterday morning the Lake Erie road put on two extra sections of eight cars each to accommodate the club business, and last night four more sections in addition to the regular trains were run. The office of E. C. Dunnavant, the city passenger agent, was swamped with people buying tickets. Captain McCormick delegated several of his clerks to assist, and they managed by hard work to dispose of the people.

Leaving Furnaces for Fresh Air.

The glasshouses and many of the mills closed down last week, and the men are losing no time in getting away. The big, brawny fellows, with fat rolls of boodle in their hands, act like a lot of schoolboys on a village green. The prospects of camp life for a period, with plenty of fishing and hunting, fill their souls with delight, and it is impossible for them to conceal their glee. The old hands try to maintain a certain degree of composure, but the good-natured smile lurking around the corners of the mouths and the joyful look out of the eyes betray them. Nobody begrudges labor its summer vacation, and the men who have toiled during the heat and cold will come back after awhile with renewed bodies and lots of vigor to continue the prosperity of this thriving city.

Men work in Pittsburg when they work, and they know how to enjoy themselves. It is fortunate that the city is located so near to the fishing grounds furnished by the Great Lakes. The rates offered by the vailroads and steamboat lines are reasonable, and the cost of living in the camps is pot high, so that it is about as cheap to go away for the summer as to stay at home.

A Feaceful Army in Camp. Mr. Dunnavant remarked yesterday that a great stir is made about Atlantic City and other seashore resorts, but he was willing to wager that more Pittsburgers visit the lake regions than take a dip in the Atlantic during the summer. He figures that not fless than 4,000 people from this city will camp during the hot weather somewhere in

He searched all his desks and stone sidewalk in front of one of the piano stores a large advertisement had been writ-ten with soft blue crayon. Over this crayon the two urchins rubbed their hands until the palms were as blue as Henry James Venetian sky. Then they approached in an innocent way another newsboy, and sud-denly drawing the hand over his cheek, took to their heels. The result was strik-ing, if not ornamental. In an hour or two nearly all the newsboys and bootblacks down town looked like Indians painted for the scalp dance. the blanks. He searched all his desks and pigeon holes, but the search was vain. As a last resort Alderman McKelvey was called in, and he being au old hand at the busi-ness, soon finished the job. Philip Mo-Donough, being best man, kissed the bride, while the other front office men looked green, and the couple departed for weal or we the scalp dance. Margaret Mather Given a Divorce. Poor Farm Beyond Question.

creek. As soon as Chief Elliot was notified he called on Chief Bigelow and arranged to have a careful survey made of the city's newly acquired property. Captain Neeld says no survey has been made of it since long before he bought it, when it was traus-ferred in bulk as 223 acres, more or less. He thinks there are 236 acres in the tract, but as the city pays by the acre it is im-portang to know just how many acres there are as well as to establish definite bound-aries for the farm.

aries for the farm. As soon as the survey is completed a detailed plot of the property will be sub-mitted to the State Board of Charities, after which the buildings will be taken up. The officers are directed personally, or through the detail of an assistant, to visit the vessels as they arrive in port, if need be, and vaccinate the crews on board.
