turned into a minority of 300. The issue turned on the eight-hour question.

There are some curious anomalies. The Unionist vote at Gateshead has increased 2,000. The Gladstonian vote at Westham has increased 1,500. The balance is a long way in favor of the grand old man. He was jubilant to-day. He says that the flowing tide will turn into a roaring torrent.

The Pall Mall Gaz-tte thinks to-night that the fate of the various labor candidates in yesterday's elections suggests two remarks. In the first place the labor programme has clearly made its mark upon the constituencies. Eight hours in particular scores with the return of Mr. Keir Harele in Westham, the disaster to Mr. Broadlurst in West Nottingham where it turned a majority of Nottiugham, where it turned a majority of 849 into a minority of 301 and the 2,749 votes east for Mr. Tillet in West Bradford. Labor and Liberalism Must Unite.

But equally clear in the second place is the old moral often urged that labor in alliance with Liberalism wins, while labor alone or in opposition to Liberalism fails. Thus Mr. Tillet fails to get a seat against Mr. Iillingworth in Bradford, and Mr. Champion is simply nowhere in Aberden, while Mr. Keir Hardie, who has had the support of the Liberals in South Westham, omes in with a big majority.

The same newspaper enumerates the steps by which Mr. Gladstone is advancing from the complete non possimus attitude to one of cautious assent. First came the refusal to receive the deputation, then the demand for information, then the consent to receive the deputation, then the triumphal Socratic refutation of the deputation's points. Now comes the explanation of the Socratic attitude and it is highly interesting: "That is the spirit in which I should always wish to spenk, to make my conversations or my speeches to laboring men somewhat less tavorable than my own views are, rather than putting on an appearance favorable to them which I might not be able always to

To confound the logic of a working class deputation is of course a comparatively simple task for the grand old dialectician, and it was done to immense satisfaction. But it is well to find that Mr. Gladstone recognizes the argument to be based upon a genuine grievance and is not merely con-tent to discover its logical flaws for practi-cal purposes. Yesterday's speech defines the probable course of action on this sub-ject in the new Parliament; local option, that is to say, will become as much the guiding principle in labor matters as in temperance.

Will Vote Early and Often.

A sporting journalist draws attention to an unprecedented electioneering feat which is to be performed on Thursday by George Frve, the biggest bookmaker in England, This gentleman is to drive from his residence at Bealshill, vote at Wimbledon at 8 o'clock, then be off to London Bridge and on to Tottenbam, where he possesses property. After voting there he returns to Ealing, where he is also entitled to a vote and reaching Paddington in time to catch the Flying Dutchman, will reach Porlock, West Somersrtshire, in time to record the vote he possesses there.

Needless to say these votes are Tory, but ough they were Liberal the instance affords proof of the desirability of altering the law so that a single voter can only cast one vote at a parliamentary election.

WOMEN TRY ELECTIONEERING.

Mrs. Cornwallis West Pleads for Her Husband, but Is Not Listened to by the Crowd-The Son of the Great Liberator Supports the Liberal Candidate.

LONDON, July 5 .- Daniel O'Connell, son of the great Irish liberator, is strongly supporting the candidature of the Rt. Hon. James Lowther, Conservative, in the Isle of Thanet, division of Kent, Upon being asked why he, an Irishman and a Catholic, did not tollow in the footsteps of his father, Mr. O'Connell replied: "It is as an Irish Catholic that I vote for a Conservative. I have seen during the past six years the country wisely governed. Mr. Gladstone's

To-day she tried to quell a row among the electors, who refused to hear the Colonel speak. Amid cries of "Don't shout her down," she obtained a momentary hearing, but the disorder revived, and she became very angry. She said: "I am an Irish woman, but it was not until I came to Wales that I found men capable of refusing to hear a woman who was pleading a cause."

She was stopped by a storm of yells and hisses. Then, pluckily leaving the plattorm, she forced her way through the mob to the platform from which the opposition orator was addressing a crowd and tried to argue him into silence. He shook his fists in her face and repelled all her attempts to argue with him. There was the greatest sort of excitement in the crowd, and finally a melee occurred around Mrs. Cornwallis West that forced her to return to the Unionist platform. The meeting broke up in

Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, in a speech at Walsall, said: "Mr. Gladstone never proposed measures for the benefit of the workingmen until he required their votes. He has suggested home rule for Ireland on the colonial model; but colonies are empowered to make tariff, and unless Ireland is allowed to do the same this solution of the problem will not be accepted as final, and Mr. Gladstone will be in a dilemma."

Mr. McCarthy replied to the Commission o-day that he must consult with the members of his party on the subject. It is known that the anti-Parnellites are utterly opposed to considering the question until after the elections are over and that the Parnellites are also unwilling to discuss the natter at present. The Commission say they do not despair of smoothing matters after the elections have taken place.

Charles Shanahan Strikes John McGuire and His Victim Is Killed.

END OF A DRUNKEN BRAWL

The Murderer Too Intoxicated to Know What He Had Done.

A WHOLE FAMIL YHELD FOR COURT

To Answer to the Charge of Murdering Frank Belmstetter.

THE DEFENDANTS DENY THEIR GUILT

Charles Shanahan to-day occupies a cell in the county jail, where he broods over the murder of John McGuire, committed by his hands at Walker's Mills yesterday afternoon at 6 o'clock.

The Coroner's jury in the case of Frank Helmstetter was just rendering a verdict which sent four men and three women to jail, charged with taking human life, when Shanahan struck the blow, which made him a murderer.

Walker's Mills is a mining town, five miles below Mansfield, on the Panhandle Railroad. Fourth of July was spent in drinking and rioting, and the spirit, instead of dying, was renewed yesterday. Shanahan, McGuire, and numerous other miners gathered at the house of a man named Skelly.

Skelly's beer, whisky and some peculiar liquid of an intexicating nature, which finds its origin in that region, flowed like water. All day long the men drank. From time to time little altercations would arise between some members of the circle, which for a minute or two would sever social ties, but peace was always restored. So matters ran along until the day was drawing toward a close. Then some misunderstanding arose between Shanahan and McGuire. For quite a time they argued on the inside of the Skelly home. They warmed to their job, and the house got too small for them. McGuire went outside and Shanahan followed him where the broken thread of the argument was taken up. Soon blows took the place of words. They commenced fighting just outside the door. Shanahan was a hard bitter, and Mc-Guire was not able to receive his blows. To save himself, he retreated backward, keeping up the aggressive.

How McGuire Was Killed. Some feet from the door stands the rain Some feet from the door stands the rain barrel. Unconsciously toward this McGuire backed. He was just within a foot or two of the barrel, when Shanahan gained a step on him and dealt him an awful blow under the chin. McGuire's hands were thrown up, and with a mean he fell back, his head and back striking the barrel.

Thirty minutes later he was dead. Shanahan was so drunk he did not realize what he had done. Other members of the party were still able to think, and one went for a doctor and another for the constable The doctor was unable to do anything for the man and until the autopsy is held just what caused his death will not be known.

Too Drunk to Get Away. Shanahan was promptly arrested by the constable, and last night at 10 o'clock he hotor rule scheme would be most disastrous to Ireland."

> McGuire is 45 years of age and unmar-ried. He was a man who had no friends, and the people at Walker's Mills refused to take charge of his body, and the remains were sent to a Mansfield undertaker. There they will remain until the Coroner views them to-day and holds his inquest.

A WHOLE FAMILY HELD.

Four Men and Three Women Will flave to Answer for the Murder of Frank Helmstetter-The Defendants Deny All Connection With the Affair, Joseph Zappe, Angelo Zappe, Joseph Mulinaro, William Reardon, Hannah Reardon, Mrs. Joseph Zappe and Mrs. Joseph Mulinaro are in jail, charged with the murder of Frank Helmstetter, who was stabbed Monday evening at his home, at Matilda and Yew streets.

Coroner McDowell held the inquest in the case yesterday afternoon. The principal witness was Mrs. Ida Helmstetter, wife of the murdered man. Her testimony was an exact repetition of her interview exclusively given in THE DISPATCH yesterday morning. On her testimony, which was given in a very straightforward manner, given in a very straightforward manner, were the seven persons held.

Henry Plohr, who was playing with Helmstetter when the murder occurred, told a similar story and testified to having been hit with a brick before the fight started. Plohr is a cripple and uses a crutch, and he said Mrs. Reardon took his crutch from him in the fight.

Wm. Oxley was another man who saw the fight and it was he who carried Helmstetter into the house and removed his bloody clothing.

Walter Coleman was passing the yard at the time of the fight and he saw an Italian brandishing a knife and heard him say: "Kill the Dutch pig."

Mrs. Sophia Plohr and numerous other witnesses testified against the Italian. Drs. Kirk and Espey, who held the autopsy, in their report said Helmstetter came to his death from knife and scalp wounds.

William Reardon denied all connection with the affair. He said he had not been out of the house. His wife's testimony was in the same strain. Mrs. Mulinaro and Mrs. Zappe also denied all part in the crime. The Italians were not asked to testime. tify, and the jury rendered the verdict above named.

All of the women have little infants and All of the women nave little infants and these they took to jail with them. There are six or seven of the Reardon children left at home and they will be taken in charge by the Humane Society.

Thomas Kinney, Overcome With Cramps Sinks Beneath the Waters.

Thomas Kinney, a puddler at Carnegie's Twenty-ninth street mill, together with his brother Daniel and two other men, were swimming in the Allegheny river at the foot of Twenty-sixth street yesterday afternoon. At this point there are a number of rafts and coal barges anchared. Thomas Kinney dove under one of the rafts and Kinney dove under one of the rafts and when he came out at the other end of the timber cramps came on and he drowned before his friends reached him. All atternoon the river was dragged for his body, but it was not found. The suggestion is that it is under the rafts.

Allegheny's Public Safety Committee devoted its attention entirely to the fire department last night. Lots for new engine houses in the Seventh and Eleventh wards were approved and the advertisement for proposals for a new fire engine was modi-fied so as to let in all bidders.

There was but one bid from the Eleventh ward and it was favorably recommended. It was from James J. Brownlee, in behalf of the heirs of Joseph Seifert. The lot is 25x140 feet, corner of Shady avenue and Dixon street; cost $2,300. The proposal of Dr. Nicholas Schenkel, of a $1,600 lot in the Seventh ward was also favorably recomthe Seventh ward was also lavorably recom-mended. This lot has a frontage of 43 1-10 feet on Haslage avenue and is 96 feet deep, running back to Rhine street.

July Celebration.

Now that the Fourth of July celebration is a thing of the past, Chief Bigelow is planning another attraction to draw the people to the big playground. He wants to make the breaking of ground for the Phipps conservatory a ceremonial to which the publie will be invited to hear music, addresses by the Mayor and others, and to see some prominent person throw up the first spade-ful of earth where the world's greatest botanical building is to be erected.

The ground has been surveyed and everything is in readiness for the contractors, Lord & Burnham, of New York. In tact, they desired to begin last week, but were given orders by the Chief to hold off until after the Fourth, as he wanted no excavations made which would any way interfere with the enjoyment of the celebration. Yesterday he wrote the firm asking the exact date upon which their men would be here to proceed with the work. If the time is not too short the Chief will arrange for an interesting meeting of citizens when ground is broken.

Starting the Carnegie Library Buildings. The initial step in the construction of the Carnegie library, which was intended as a feature of last Monday's big celebration but unavoidably postponed owing to a slight misunderstanding about the contract, will probably be made an occasion for music and oratorical fireworks also. From present indications the conservatory will be started first, although it is possible it can be arranged to break ground for both buildings on the same day.

Everybody everywhere in the city and for miles around talked exclusively vester-day of Monday's celebration at Schenley Park. The wonder of all was the size of the crowd. It was estimated at from 100,000 to 400,000. Mayor Gourley said he was satisfied, after careful reflection, that not less than 250,000 people visited the park during the day and evening, and he thought that when the fireworks started here were nearly, if not quite, 100,000

there.
Colonel Elkins says the Duquesne and
Fifth Avenue lines carried between 157,000 and 158,000 people from whom fares were collected. At one time cars ran half trips, one and a half minutes apart, at the rate of 140 to 150 persons per car.

Money in the Double-Decker. The double-decker had the largest receipts of any car on the road, the conductor turning in $170. Another car turned in $87. Hundreds of fares were not collected simply because the cars were so full that the conductors could not get through, or the people reached their destination before the the conductor reached them. The Junction Railroad ran trains, every half hour, of eight cars each and it is esti-mated that they carried 25,000 people from the Allegheny side of the river to the park. The Second avenue line carried 50,000 people during the day, nearly all of whom were Schenley Park visitors. Thousands of people walked to and from the park and thousands more went in vehicles. Never before were there so many vehicles at one point in this end of the State as there were

It was not only immense but it was fair, impartial, good-natured, and orderly, and our party was as well treated as we could ask. We will be glad to come back here next year, and you may rest assured we will all talk about Pittsburg hereafter in connection with jolly big crowds, parks, athletic sports or the Fourth of July. This city forms in our minds a basis for comparison on any of these points."

Thousands of other visiting people probably received similar impressions, and will talk about Pittsburg wherever they go Great Advertising for Pittsburg.

"That," said the Mayor, "is one of the best features of our celebrations. They not only give happiness and enjoyment to our own people, but they bring visitors from all over the country and they advertise us in a way that will last and continue to grow. Chief Bigelow tells me he will keep them up after my term expires. I am glad of it. They are a permanent institution of Pittsburg now.

Chief Bigelow said: "No matter who is our next Mayor or who follows him the Fourth of July celebrations will continue. No matter what his inclinations might be a Mayor could not afford to refuse to take part in these annual gatherings that three years have rooted so deeply in the public affection. A Fourth of July in Pittsburg now without a big celebration would be like the play of 'Hamlet' with Hamlet left out." Yesterday contributions to the Fourth of July fund were sufficient to cover all the expenses. They were: J. M. Guffey, $50; Hardy & Hayes, $25; Joseph R. Hunter, $5; W. C. Wright, $5. PISHING CLUBS MOVING.

The B. & O. Boad Decides to Turn Ohio Prie Into a Picnie Ground.

The B. & O. road has decided to turn Ohio Pyle into a picnic ground. After experimenting with hotels, the company has come to this conclusion. Ohio Pyle is one of the prettiest spots in the western part of the State, and as a pienic ground will equal the best. The excursion rate of $1 for the round trip is making the place very popular. Societies and Sunday schools who were unable to seenre dates at Aliquippa, Rock Point and Idlewild are applying daily to Division Passenger Agent Smith.

On July 12 the Catholic League Clubs of the Pittsburg Diocese will picnic at the B. and O. resort. From 600 to 700 people are going. One of the largest picnics of the season will be the Knights of the Maccabes from the Edgar Thomson steel works. This is a big organization, and Mr. Carnegie presented the members with a hall in Braddock. Their picnic takes place Thursday, July 14, at Onio Pyle. It is estimated the society will have 1,500 passengers. The Potomac river region is looming up as an attractive place for hunting and fishing clubs. This morning the Forest, Stream and Fishing Club of the Southside, leaves Staley club goes to Romeny on the M. G. Frost club goes to Thornton, O., on the Shawnee branch of the B. and O.

Her Daughter in an Insane Asylum Mrs. Sarah Lorenzo, of 418 Beatty street, East End, called on Detective Gumbert last night and asked assistance in ascertaining information of her daughter, who married a wealthy New Yorker a few years ago named W. J. Reed. Mrs. Lorenzo heard that her daughter had been placed in an insane asylum by her husband, for what reason the mother did not know. The detective will write Superintendent Byrne, of New York, to look the matter up.

A Deceiver Held for Court. Frank Herzog, who is alleged to have victimized Katie Lutz, a 19-year-old Allegheny girl, by living with her and making her believe they were married when they were not, was given a hearing before Magistrate Succop yesterday on two charges and held for court. Another serious charge will be lodged against him as it has been learned that he has a wife living in Germany.
