One of the Firemen Gives Due Credit to an Inventive Crank.

A CURE FOR TOO MUCH RELIGION

How the Columbia Poys Put a Candidate Through Initiation.

ROUGH EXERCISE FOR HOT WEATHER

IWRITTEN FOR THE DISPATCH, I "If you want a story about an engine house crank, I can give you one," said Fireman Reynolds the other day as he lighted a cigar and leaned up against the wheel of the big steamer that graces the floor of Engine House No. 11.

"William Borrett was the crank's name and he was a member of this company. Billy was a crank, sure enough, but a crank in the same sense that Benjamin Franklin. Eli Whitney or Samuel Morse were cranks -he was an inventive gentus, but like many others he never reaped the glory of his labors. Somebody else got the prize.

"Hoseman William Borrett was the first man to conceive the idea of stringing harness over a pole as a time-saving arrangement in a fire engine house. He procured an old set of harness a ball of twine and some nails and for many days worked silently away without revealing his plan to unybody. He experienced all of the successes and discouragements of young inventors and soon became an object of jest to the other members of the company. But Billy stood it all brayely and did not divulge his

Eurors About His Head.

"As usual in such cases, it became noised about that Borrett was suffering from brain trouble, and expressions of deep regret were made by the firemen over their comrade's offliction. Late one night after the bed for several boars, he suddenly leaped out of hed and yelling: Tve got it, I've got t, rushed for the pole. The whole comrs with blankets, to catch the man whe they were now thoroughly convinced was a subject for a mad-house. The fleeing man was intercepted and before he had a chance say a word was bound hand and foot. unfortunate inventor realizing the dicrous nature of his situation was con rulsed with laughter. This only made puntters worse, for besides being a mad man e was also an idiot, thought his guards.

"Billy begged to be released, but not until physician was called was he listened to. e then explained his plan to his associate who one by one slunk off to bed leaving the genius glone with his ideas. The scheme as successful, but another man perfected it and the true inventor, the crank of No. 11, never obtained either credit or money for his labors."

Just Suited to the Salvation Army. 'We once had an over-religious member this company," began the champion story

He had not been in the engine house five minutes until he began singing, praying and reciting verses of Scripture. At first we allowed him to go ahead and enjoy himself, since such conduct in an being home was something new. Finally the new member made his presence so offensive that one day, during his absence, a meeting of the firemen was lied to concoct a cure. We were afraid a would become violent if unrestrained.

Preaching Through a Section of Hose, "Well, the meeting proved a success. That night a section of hose was laid from he engine room in through our friend's ed room and one end was snugly secreted inder his pillow. When the religious rits, owing to the contemplation of his career and was inclined to be sulky. finally he retired for the night, turning he lights out as usual. "Notwithstanding the temperature was near the melting point, General Herr Heinrick von Schlagen was soon rigged up very handsomely in all of the above mentioned articles. When at last the boys got through with him he looked like an Arctic explorer. But the candidate never said a word, not even when the big horse collar was buckled around his waist for a belt. So eager was the General to become a fireman he never suspected. "Well, when the costume was complete, we set the candidate to work. The first de-gree consisted of pole exercises. And how the General did slide down that pole! We kept him sliding for a dozen times or more. No sooner did he alight than he was off up-stairs and down the pole again, the big horse collar thumping on the floor each time like a load of lead.

The Candidate Never Cracked a Smile, "The scene was actually too ludicrous to describe. Everybody was overcome with laughter except the candidate, who kept sliding down the pole as though his life de-pended upon it. Some of the boys were rolling on the floor, some leaning against the wall and some were up on top of the hook and ladder truck, holding on to the rounds of the madder while they laughed. It was the funniest sight I ever saw. the boys recovered enough to talk we stopped the pole performance.

"The next degree consisted in the testing of the General's heat endurance and hi alertness in responding to an alarm. We put him to bed without removing his costome, not even his horse collar belt, and piled bed ticks and blankets upon him until the warmth must have been equal to that of an oil fire. Then someone downstairs pulled the gong and the way the General escaped from his environment was a caution. He was out of bed, down the pole and upstairs again be-fore we barely had time to wink.

"We were just putting him to bed for an "We were just putting him to bed for another trial when the Captain returned and

A FAMOUS MILEMAN.

An Unwritten Chapter From the Life of

It has been written of Garibaldi by one of his biographers that, though he, like all mortals, had his taults, his motives were never selfish. A visitor at his house in 1858 gives a description of it. It was Garibaldi's habit to retire very early. In the morning, as the visitor looked out from the uncurtained window, he saw : cow rushing by impetuously, with its head down and its tail in the air. No sooner had the animal disappeared than Garibaldi and his daughter, Teresa, came in sight, one carrying a milk pail and the other a milking stool. About an hour afterward, when the company had assembled round the breakfast table, the explanation of this cow hunt was given. Garibaldi apologized for the scanty supply of milk. "You see, Teresa," he said, addressing his daughter in a tone of mild rebuke, "your temper is the only cause that prevents us from offering enough milk to the signora. "I repeatedly impress upon my children," he continued, turning toward the lady who tells the story, "that one ought always to treat animals kindly, and that they are much more amenable to kindness than to blows. This Zoni, for instance, is our best cow, but she will not endure a blow; so that, when Teresa thoughtlessly hit her in the stable it excited her and made her quite unmanageable. I had to go a long way in the field to find her. Teresa came up to hold her horns, and I had begun to milk her, but in less than a minute she upset me, stool and all, and took to her heels During breakfast Garibaldi continued to talk to his children about his tavorite aniand unselfish in their treatment of al

LOWELL AS A SOCIALIST.

creatures with great warmth and intelli-

He Ranked in this Ethical Views With the Modern Idealists.

"James Russell Lowell was a Socialist in the broader sense only of that elastic termthe sense in which it may be applied to every man who feels acutely the wrongs suffered by the poor, and has formed for himself a high ideal of human equality and brotherhood," says Edward Grubb in the July New England Magazine, "He was a Socialist after the type of Isalah and the Hebrew prophets, and stands in our own times alongside such idealists as Rousseau, Mazzini and Ruskin. He was not, any more than these, a Socialist in the sense of advocating any cut-and-dried political system, or any special scheme of social or industrial organization. His socialism consists in his strong grasp of the conception of the worth of man as man, and his fearless denunciation of the talse standards that men conventionally ap-ply; the selfish customs and traditions that end them to honor the strong while despising the weak, and to attach more importance to wealth and outward show than the development of true manhood.

"The poems in which this quality is most apparent date from the years between 1840 and 1850, which was a time of great social awakening throughout the civilized world; the new ideals of Robert Owen in England, and Saint Simon and Fourier in France had begun to work upon the public mind.

STUDYING THE CRIMINALS.

Dr. Arthur MacDonald, specialist in edueation as related to criminal and abnormal this eligible and street for a few classes, United States Bureau of Education, ments, leaving the rest of us Washington, D. C., has been appointed official representative of the United States to attend the international congress for experimental psychology at London and also the international congress upon criminology at Brussels Dr. MacDonald was for many years a resident of this city and graduated in the class of '78 from the University of Rochester.

"The congress at Brussels," Dr. Mac. Donald says, "will consider crime in its re-intion to biology and sociology. The con-gress is extremely cosmopolitan not only as to nationalities, but in the different departments of knowledge which it includes. The criminal must be studied as a member of the ace, and this gives rise to the new science of criminal anthropology, or in short, crim-inology. Hence such questions will be dis-cussed as to whether there is a criminal type distinguished by shape of cranium and face, anatomy of ears and nose, size of orbits and length of jaws. Another important question under this head is whether the criminal is born so or becomes so from his surroundings. D. Jayne's Expectorant, when racked by a severe cold, and the many lung or throat affections which sometimes follow. This old remedy has met the approval of two generations, and is to-day as popular, safe and effective as ever.

Extract from letter of Rev. Fred C. Cowper, Amesbury, Mass., to a friend in New York: "The school grounds contain 40 acres situated in a rich and beautiful hill country 1, 200 feet above tide water and surrounded by wide spreading maples, elms, lindens and evergreens, with orchards, gardens and vineyards, through which wind broad drives bordered by well kept lawns. There has never been sickness in the school. Delicate boys become strong and mauly in its pure health-giving atmosphere. The morals of the place are pure: the tone elevating and refining. Under the present management, the household in all departments is suitable for the sons of gentiemen, and has all the comforts of a refined home. It is a lovely spot indeed, favored by nature, developed by the best skill of the landscape gardener, kept up by those who take pride in it; and fortunate is the boy who is permitted to spend his school days at Trinity Hall."
