The sultry weather that ended so suddealy vesterday morning started a smile on the faces of those who are financially interested in the summer resorts. Those nearby are not yet scenes of very great interest to Pittsburg, but they soon will be. Atlantic City is in its glory, while the other seashore resorts are prospering, A big season has

front of a summer hotel proprietor. No matter if you are as cold as an iceberg a the satisfied grin will pierce you like a red-hot poker and melt you up or down like a deluge of boiling hot water. The rush is on, and it is on in dead earnest. The hot weather inland has been doing its duty to the hotel proprietors at summer resorts.

On last Sunday it looked as if the hotels would not be able to hold the crowd, but the essimist who is all the time predicting a pessimist who is all the time predicting a poor season and a decided bathing failure, looked gloomy, and said the crowd would leave before night. He was wrong for once, for the majority stayed, and have been here ever since, and it looks now as if they would remain all summer. Every train that comes in brings its quota of summer loiterers, and taken all together—the crowd that is here and the number in prospect—Atlantic City will have a producted and highly satismotory season.

success. I could point with confidence to the ign that never fails. The Pittsburg colony is growing with the arrival of every train, and residents of the Pennsylvania See Hive buzz on all sides. If any one doubts this statement all he has to do to be convinced is to glance at the Pittsburg personals at the end of this letter. Of course, this is only a very small percentage of the many who are very small percentage of the many who are here, for to print every one of them would require a lot of space even in a paper as large as Tage Surbay Disparch; still there are enough of them to prove that the Pittsburger has upset tradition and is putting in an appearance early. Usually he does not come until Angust, but this year his ringing hearty shout could be heard as early as July I, and everybody interested hopes it will be heard until the season of brown October ale.

One of the jolliest crowds of men to be found at the season of brown October ale. One of the jolliest crowds of men to be found at the season of horown October ale. One of the jolliest crowds of men to be found at the season of horown October ale. One of the jolliest crowds of men to be found at the season of horown October ale.

One of the jolliest crowds of men to be found at the season in the country, who have apparently allowed all official didn'tity to fly away on the ocean breezes. These men, learned in the law, take great delight in the company of one another, and when together are as playful as a pack of schoolboys. The party usually comprises Judges Hanna, Allison, Bregy and Gordon, of Philadelphia; Judges Kennedy, Over and Marce, of Pittsburg: Judge Simonton, of Harrisburg: Judge Cobb, of Washington, D. C., and Judge Bosworth, of Springfield, Mass.

Judges Who Are Swimmers.

of the sur, and the two mentioned can generally be found on the beach during the bathing hour laughing heartily at the antics of the others. Gordon, Cobb and Over are exceptionally fine swimmers, and the way they play tag in the ocean is enough to make a school boy climb down out of a sweet apple tree for a peep. When the Judicial contingent get together in a convenient and comfortable plazza and begin to tell professional experiences the roars of joliy laughter that go skimming across the ocean toward Europe make the summer visitors pause and wonder what nolsy, youthful skylarders have taken possession of the island. The judges always come early and stay late.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Gillespie, of Pittsburg, are stopping at the Hotel Traymore with their 25-year-old son, Bertie, Of course, at that age Bertie is not supposed to be very well posted recarding politics, or anything else for that matter, but nevertheless he has a decided preference in the Fresidental race. It has been stated that Bertie is a follower of Grover Cleveland, but this is not true. He is a staunch irlend of President Harrison, and dates his friendship from a year ago when he and Baby McRee played together in the sand at Cape May point. Bert is a blue-eyed, flax-mined beauty, and he is just as independent as his fatier. A young tady quest who is stoopping at the Traymore, and who is noted for her personal charms, walked up to Bertie the other evening and asked for a good night kiss. The porch was filled with young men, who would have braved almost any danger for such a privilege, but Bert held the beautiful girlawed almost any danger for such a privilege, but Bert held the beautiful girlawed almost any danger for such a privilege, but Bert held the beautiful girlawed who is stoopping at the Decautiful girlawed almost any danger for such a privilege, but Bert held the beautiful girlawed who is stoopping at the beautiful girlawed almost any danger for such a privilege, but Bert held the beautiful girlawed who is stoopping at the beautiful girla

"Oh," replied the beile, "I'm for Cleveland every time."

"Well," said the little Pittsburger, as he fled with his nurse, "get Cleveland to kiss you, then, cause I won't."

The next morning the young lady laughingly tried to appease the diminutive supporter of Harrison, but it was no use. He flatly refused to speak to her, amid the laughter of the delighted guests. Young Blaine for Cleveland,

But ex-President Cleveland is not altogether alone so lar as real youth goes. He also has a supporter who is very young and far more famous than Master Gillespie far more famous than Master Gillespie. This is James G. Blaine, the third, who is stopping at the Challonte for the season. When young Jim is not throwing stones or making faces at the tall, stern-looking Scotch nurse he generally cheers for Grover Cleveland and winds up the performance with three sepulchral groans for Benjamin Harrison. Jim's reasons for going against the traditions of the Blaine family and cheering for a Democratic condidate are not cheering for a Democratic candidate are not eigendered by a feeling of spite at the treatment dealt out to his grandfather at Minneapolis, but there lurks behind all this a mercenary motive. At the Chalfonte, where young Jim puts up, is a Democratic politician from Baltimore. One day he conceived the idea of asking the last to cheer for Cleveland. Jimmis flatly refused and was obdurate until the entitier offered him five merry-go-round checks. The betasseled cap was sent skywards with a dash and the youngster gave the three cheers with a heartiness that is never surpassed. Every day Jimmie gets five merry-go-round checks, but it is only on condition that he cheers loudly for Cleveland and groans audibly for Harrison. Yesterday a gentleman asked young Jim the question:

"What's the matter with Harrison?"
"He's no good stuff," was the quick reply. Walking along the beard walk every day can be seen a little old man whose iong hair and beard has been whitened by the frosts of 80 winters. Much under the average in height, he dresses in a suit of clerical black, made conspicuous by a long frock coat and a high slik hat. He is a strange contrast to the tall, solemn looking colored body servant on whose arm he always leans. The distinguished looking little man is the Rev. The lady in question was a splendid housewife, nor afraid of work until her husband's grand ather died and made the couple immensely rich. Then Mrs. Shoddy cropped out in diamonds and silken stuffs, and the very idea of work made her slightly ill. The husband is a man of good common sense, and when his wire asked him to take part in a grand hon to be given by the management of the Pacific Avenue Hotel where the couple are stopping, he said in effect that he'd be darned if he would. Dr. Leyburn is the pastor only in name, for he has long since retired from active service and is enjoying an income of $5,000 a year, the result of an investment judiciously made for him by Mary Garrett, whose father always claimed, to the time of his death, that Dr. Leyburn was the most eloquent pulpit orator in the world.

William P. Tyler, who is one of the big business runs of your city, and who is noted for his common sense, practical ways, has now acquired with a strong grasp the popular superstition that it is unlucky to start on a journey on Friday. The week before last the farst accident occurred at Harrisburg, the first accident occurred at Harrisburg. Fortunately no person was killed, but several were injured. On the next Friday while comfortably seated in a railroad car at Mt. Joy, Mr. Tyler took part in another accident. The only injury in the last one was received by a brakeman who had his shoulder dislocated. Mr. Tyler has been something of a medical student in his time and fortunately was just far enough advanced in surrery to be able to put the suffering brakeman's shoulder back in place. Therefore there was nothing for the surgeon to do when he arrived, but examine the job performed by Mr. Tyler and pronounce it a clever one. Mr. Tyler accompanied by his wife, is making a sea son's visit at the Traymore. Mrs. Tyler, who is always the center of an intellectual group, is well known in Pittsburg literary

It is not proper at all times to tell a good story, and especially is it bad polley to tell one on a member of the fair sex. But in a case I know of, which occurred this week, the story can be told in an impersonal way, and it will do very well to show how the women solks can trach an aspiring new member of society her place, even at the seashore, where conventionalities do not count for much.

But the other features of Chantauqua are all here and everybody seems to be nappy. One of the new things this year is a Boys' Congress, which is to meet three times a week and worry themselves over the surplus and other momentous myths. It is a great idea and is well worked out.

The past week has produced the finest kind of Chantauquan weather, a little warm in the sun, but just right under the trees. Scores of people are arriving daily. It is wonderful that there are more people at Chautauqua now than at this season last year, notwithstanding the backward season. It is certainly an evidence that the resorts around the Lake are becoming gradually more popular.
